F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

Judy Kleinvachter's great granddaughter Kristin Kleinvachter of Fargo and friend Yancy, also from Fargo, visited Grandma Judy on Sunday. Judy had been to Irene's Cafe earlier together with June Severson and other friends. Those who visited during the week were Joan Gerhls, June Kasprowicz, Jim Fredricks, Pat Larson, Larina and Paulina Berggren.

The weather in northwest Minnesota is a poet's dream and I concur. It is absolutely wonderful! The night of heavy frost a couple of weeks ago put an end to the dahlia blossoms and they had to be dug and the corms stored until next spring. I had picked the tomatoes and peppers before the frost and now the herb garden is all that is left which I will try to cover and save for next year. I have frozen the chives and I know they will show in the spring. The thyme, oregano and chocolate mint I'll cut and dry. If covered right, maybe they will come from the roots in spring.

While I was cleaning all the trash, vines, etc. and bagging it to be taken away, I sort of decided to put the electric fence right next to the ties that are around the whole garden and I had to laugh when I though about an electric fence in Montana.

In 1935 and 1936, several families from around here moved to Flathead Valley, Montana and bought acreage near together east of Kalispell. The Solstads, Sandlands, Lorensons, Fosters, Lansings, Gordons, Knutsons and Sands. It was mostly woods and all cleared an area to build a home and have a garden. Some had a cow or two, but to get hay was another problem so the Solstads had a goat for milk. They also had a garden which had an electric fence to keep the deer and the goat out. Having had a taste of the vegetables before the fence was put up, the nanny had also felt the shock from it. When she could no longer control the urge to get in there, she would back up about 20 or 30 feet, begin to bleat as loudly as she could and take a run through the fence, making that terrific noise all the way. It was impossible to train her and they traded and got a cow. When I remembered it last week, I was a bit homesick for awhile, but now the second and third generations have been gone or moved away. Thousands of strangers have come to live in the Flathead Valley and homes are built high in the mountains there.

Will roundabouts solve TRF's traffic problems?

Construction of a roundabout at the intersection of Third (Highways 1 and 59) and First streets, which is near the Holiday gas and convenience store in Thief River Falls, would represent a significant change for motorists in Thief River Falls. Because the cost of signal lights at intersections has increased to approximately $250,000 per intersection, and because modifications and changes at this intersection haven't resulted in fewer accidents, perhaps it's time to look at roundabout.

Roundabouts, much more common in Europe than the United States, are one-way, circular paths around an intersection. Drivers merge into the one-lane path at reduced speeds, turning off when they reach their exit.

While more common in Europe and on the East Coast of the United States, they aren't unheard of in this region of the United States. According to a story on the Minnesota Department of Transportation Web site, several roundabouts have been built in Minnesota and designers are considering more.

For several reasons, designers are considering the construction of more roundabouts. Roundabouts are less expensive, and statistics tell them that roundabouts often result in fewer crashes. According to the Department of Transportation, a typical intersection has 32 conflict points, 15 of which are crossing conflicts. The crossing conflicts lead to the most dangerous crashes - right-angle or left-turning collisions. A roundabout, however, has only four merging conflict points. If a crash occurs with a merging conflict, it typically leads only to a fender bender.

Recent experiences with roundabouts are also encouraging. A roundabout design was chosen for the rural Highway 13 and County Road 2 intersection in Scott County. During the past five years, at that intersection there have been two deaths and 50 serious injuries due to crashes. The road handles about 7,000 vehicles per day. Since the roundabout opened in early September, there have been no crashes.

The left turn signal at First and Third streets in Thief River Falls (near the Holiday gas and convenience store) has been in place for several years, so one would think that motorists are used to the intersection. Not so, according to many motorists who drive through that intersection every day. In fact, accidents continue to occur at that intersection, so maybe it's time something different was proposed.

A local resident, who brought additional information to the attention of this office, also mentioned that a roundabout might be an ideal solution to a couple of other intersections in Thief River Falls, specifically Pennington Avenue and Nora Street, and Highways 59 and 1 on the westside of town. We can't argue that those intersections are trouble spots. Almost as soon as the school year starts each fall, we hear complaints about not being able to make left turns from Nora onto Pennington Avenue. Complaints about Highways 59 and 1 on the westside of town have simmered down since improvements were made there, but there have been many accidents at the intersection, including at least one fatality.

Well, Thief River Falls, the issue has been presented, what are your thoughts?

Manufacturing and Technology Week celebrated here

To recognize and promote the importance of manufacturing to the state's economy, the Minnesota Chamber of Commerce, Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development and the Minnesota Manufacturing Coalition are facilitating Minnesota Manufacturers Week (Oct. 24-28).

There are several reasons why manufacturing and technology is important enough to rate a special week - even here in northwestern Minnesota. Almost one out of every seven jobs in the state is in the manufacturing industry, and this industry accounts for 19 percent of Minnesota's total wages. In 2003, manufacturing produced $28.2 billion for the state economy and is the largest share - 13.4 percent- of the state's gross state product. Here, in northwest Minnesota, manufacturing comprises 29 percent of total private employment and 39 percent of total payrolls. In 2004, manufacturing employment in northwest Minnesota increased by 12 percent whereas statewide it increased by 6.2 percent.

Manufacturers should not underestimate their influence.

MN needs a Renewable Energy Standard

To the Editor:

Darryl Tveitbakk, the general manager of Northern Municipal Power Agency, claims that there is no strong opposition from utility companies in Minnesota for a Renewable Energy Standard (RES). Readers should know that there were 117 utility lobbyists, some more active than others, working against renewable energy this year at the Capitol. And with 134 members in the House, that's a lot of lobbyists.

I believe a majority of Minnesotans support the passage of an RES. The utility companies think it's "premature." Twenty states already have standards. It's not premature. And while Minnesota waits around for a wind study, there will be many states investing in renewable energy and rural economic development at our expense. One study has already found that 20 percent penetration of wind power on the electricity grid is competitive with new coal. And wind power displaces the use of expensive, imported natural gas. Additionally, one big wind turbine operating at the University of Minnesota at Morris provides 60 percent of the school's power needs. This fact is significant and tells me that renewable energy is real and it works. I think Tveitbakk is wrong. Minnesota is a smart state that needs rural economic development and we can handle an RES.

Restore funding for early childhood care and ed

by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf

Childcare and early childhood education in Minnesota are suffering. Some of the most damaging portions from the final compromise of the 2005 Legislative Session are the cuts to childcare assistance and the limited progress for early childhood education programs. Since 2003, over $150 million has been cut from childcare and early education programs, and our youngest citizens are being pushed aside.

During the 2005 session, the House and governor both supported a provision included in the Health and Human Services Bill to extend the childcare provider reimbursement rate freeze another two years. Continuing the freeze will result in an additional $61.5 million cut to childcare in FY 2006-07, on top of the $86 million cut to childcare during the 2003 session. The cost of childcare has increased so rapidly that many low-income families have completely dropped out of childcare and no one knows what kind of care the children are receiving while their parents are at work or school. In addition, for some low-income and at-risk children, attending a quality licensed childcare facility is the only chance that they have at being fully prepared to enter kindergarten.

There were a number of provisions that the DFL Senate supported that were not included in the final legislation, such as expanding eligibility for childcare assistance; creating a quality rating system to provide consumer information regarding childcare for parents; and childcare studies on the quality of childcare and the inclusion of school readiness in childcare settings.

Additionally, funding for a school readiness survey that assessed children's skills at the start of kindergarten was completely cut. Since 2002, this survey found that less than half of all children entering kindergarten in Minnesota are fully ready for the math and language skills they need to succeed in kindergarten. By cutting programs that provide us with such valuable information, we will move further away from the goal of ensuring all children are fully prepared to begin kindergarten.

Research shows that the number one economic development, crime reduction, and educational policy improvement in the state is to invest resources in our youngest citizens. Even though we faced strong resistance from the House and governor, the Senate was able to fully restore funding for Head Start, a vital early-childhood program for low-income families, and partially restore funding for early childhood family education (ECFE), an important program that helps parents prepare their children for school.

Despite the cuts to childcare and the under-funding of early childhood programs, there were two provisions that passed this year that will ease costs for rural childcare providers. The first will reduce childcare provider license fees back to 2003 levels. In some rural areas, license fees for providers have tripled over the last two years forcing several providers to shut down their facilities or close their doors to children on childcare assistance. The second is the rural provider rate adjustment. The 2003 provider reimbursement rate freeze for childcare assistance resulted in a decrease in reimbursement for some providers. This provision requires the commissioner of Human Services to restore reimbursement rates for any providers who received a decrease in reimbursement after the provider rates were frozen in 2003.

Unfortunately, the tradition of excellent and affordable early childhood care and education programs in Minnesota is being diminished. All children, regardless of their parents' income level, deserve quality early care and education. The Senate DFL will continue to work hard to bring the economic benefit of early-childhood programs, the importance of school readiness, and quality and affordable childcare to the front burner of the legislative debate. It's time to stop shortchanging our children and their future and give them the strong start to learning and life they deserve.

Biodiesel fuel requirement now in effect

"It takes Mother Nature 250 million years to renew her fossil fuels," says Bob Worth, president of the Minnesota Soybean Growers Association (MSGA). "It takes Minnesota soybean farmers just six months."

With spikes in fuel prices certain as a result of the Gulf Coast hurricanes and the U.S.'s seemingly insatiable demand for fuel, the statewide 2 percent biodiesel requirement implemented Sept. 29 is an event that should not go unnoticed.

"The need for domestic and renewable fuels has never been more obvious," Worth says. "I'm so proud to be a soybean farmer and even more proud to know that it was the soybean checkoff program that first researched biodiesel in 1990."

Biodiesel is an alternative to traditional petroleum-based diesel fuel. [illegible] than traditional diesel fuel. Biodiesel can be used in existing diesel engines with no modifications and is made from a homegrown, renewable resource - soybean oil.

"I think 2 percent is just the beginning," says Worth. "Biodiesel has a proven track record of exemplary performance with blends ranging from 2 percent to 5 percent to 20 percent. Each added percentage increases all of biodiesel's positive benefits, from cleaner exhaust to increased use of a domestic and renewable diesel fuel - meaning less dependence on foreign oil."

Now, nearly all of the diesel fuel sold or held for sale in the state must contain at least 2 percent biodiesel. This requirement is the result of legislation passed in 2002. A condition of its implementation is that the state have a biodiesel production capacity of at least eight million gallons of biodiesel. The state currently has the ability to produce 63 million gallons of biodiesel, making it the largest biodiesel producing state in the nation.

The Minnesota Soybean Growers Association (MSGA) initiated biodiesel legislation that included a statewide requirement in 2000. In 2002, the legislation passed, with a condition that the state have an eight million gallon production capacity. That condition was met earlier this summer, setting the stage for Thursday's historic implementation.

Coleman applauds ag package

As a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Sen. Norm Coleman praised the committee's passage of the agriculture reconciliation package, which will reduce spending on mandatory programs by $3 billion over five years while maintaining programs critical to Minnesota's farm community. In addition to extending the Farm Bill through 2011, the reconciliation package extends the Milk Income Loss Contract Program (MILC) through FY2007.

The MILC program provides a key safety net for dairy farm families across America and Minnesota. When milk prices collapse due to factors beyond their control, MILC provides a cushion for farmers until markets are able to stabilize and return to more profitable levels.

"I have worked hard to protect the Farm Bill program and my commitment to Minnesota farmers," said Coleman. "I've worked hard to amass bipartisan support, 28 cosponsors in all, to my bill to extend the MILC program, and I am grateful Chairman Chambliss worked with me, and other MILC supporters, to include this critical safety net for our dairy farmers in the Agriculture Reconciliation bill."

Originally set to expire in 2007, the committee's reconciliation bill extends the Farm Bill through 2011.

"The extension of the Farm Bill through 2011 will provide peace of mind to Minnesota's farmers, sending a strong message to our trading partners that we are serious about not unilaterally disarming in the Doha Round," Coleman said. "We had tough spending decisions to make, but we were able to pass an agriculture reconciliation package that will not disrupt the integrity of the Farm Bill. I'm proud the committee kept our commitment to our nation's farmers."

Coleman was also pleased to pass a package that takes no cuts out of the Food Stamp program, which was initially targeted for cuts during the reconciliation process.

"The Food Stamp program is a vital and necessary program for many Minnesota families," Coleman continued. "In July alone, more than 100,000 households in Minnesota received food stamps – this important program feeds families in need and deserves to be protected."

"Conservation programs also contributed savings, but not at the expense of farmers' current conservation activities," Coleman added. "Enrolled producers will not lose their conservation programs, which is a real victory. Fiscal discipline should be the cornerstone of the budget, and we were able to accomplish that goal without harming our farmers."

Dayton: Fund energy assistance

Sen. Mark Dayton has denounced the Senate's failure to adequately fund the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). Dayton cosponsored an amendment, offered to the Transportation Appropriations bill, which would have provided $3.1 billion in emergency funding to the program. With 60 votes needed for passage, the amendment failed on the Senate floor by a vote of 53 to 46. Dayton also supported the LIHEAP amendment, which also failed to pass.

"This winter's energy cost crisis will require much greater low-income assistance, so that poor and elderly Minnesotans do not suffer, or even die, from the lack of unaffordable heat," said Dayton. "I will insist that any future disaster aid for Louisiana and Mississippi also include additional energy assistance for Minnesota and other northern states."

This winter, skyrocketing energy prices, in the wake of the recent hurricanes, will result in tremendous increases in heating energy costs across the country. The Minnesota Department of Commerce predicts that the typical home heating bill will be $77.19 in October, 2005, in contrast to a $44.63 average cost in October, 2004 – an increase of 73 percent. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services announced last week that Minnesota will again receive $73.7 million in LIHEAP funding, the same level of funding that the state received last year; the U.S. Department of Energy projects that natural gas heating bills in the Midwest will be 61 percent higher than last year.

"The farmer's threshing rig passed through town yesterday to finish up some work south of town. They have had a very successful season and all but three of the owners have finished their threshing. They all appear to be well pleased with their investment.

"The freight engine struck a bad piece of track on the planer spur last Saturday night and the rails spread, throwing the engine right off the track. The passenger engine tried to pull it on but did not have weight enough and the engine that lays over at Greenbush was sent for. They got away about midnight."

Wylie Putting Up Game Fight

"CROOKSTON TIMES: Attorney General E. Young has commenced proceedings in district court to restrain the Great Northern railway company from tearing up its lines between Shirley and St. Hilaire and County Attorney Germo of Red Lake county, has been instructed to secure the necessary affidavits and serve subpoenas on the officials of the road.

"It is the Attorney General's intention to have the hearing at the October term but it is doubtful if the service of the papers can be arranged by that time. However, if Judge Watts of this city is of the opinion that the case has merit, a temporary restraining order can be issued and the work of tearing up the ten mile stretch of track which is now in progress, be stopped.

"The action of the Attorney General follows the demand made by the people of Wylie some time ago to the State Railroad and Warehouse commission that the Wylie road be maintained, and that the issuance of an order by that body requiring the railroad to maintain train service, but not compelling them to maintain the road from Shirley to Wylie. The road proposes to tear up the track and back its trains down from St. Hilaire, in order to comply with the warehouse commission order. This Wylie people believe is but a slow and sure means of killing the town and country, as the railroad and warehouse commission will not have the power to compel the road to keep open train service after such time as it ceases to be profitable. Wylie people maintain that the one object of the road is to kill the town and cut out the track entirely.

"The questions of law involved in the action started by Attorney General Douglas are very peculiar and might be considered as 'fine points' of railroad law. At the hearing in St. Paul some weeks ago, one of the members of the railroad and warehouse commission ruled that the railroad could be made to maintain train service so long as the track was in place, but that the board had no power to prevent the road from tearing up the rails if it saw fit. The points raised in this case will determine a number of much 'mooted' questions in railroad law; and will be watched with interest by people of Northern Minnesota and in fact the entire state. The Wylie lien is one of the oldest in this section, having been built some twenty years ago, and at that time tapping one of the most fertile sections of the Red River valley. Recently the Great Northern changed its route to Thief River Falls via Tilden and the Northern Pacific road and has been endeavoring since that time to shut off the old line, despite the opposition of the farmers and residents of Wylie and vicinity who have fought the matter at every hand's turn.

"Congressman Steenerson of this city is the direct legal representative of the protesting farmers and people of Wylie and the case in the court during the October term promises to be a most interesting legal battle."

James Meehan Is Mine Host
Is Landlord and Wears a Diamond Pin

"James Meehan Jr. last week assumed control of the Coleman House and is now the landlord of this institution. Landlord Coleman, who had been proprietor of the house since its opening, did not have a sufficient amount of capital to run an institution of this kind and it early became apparent that he could not make a success of it. Mr. Meehan owns the building and is now building an addition which will double the size of the hotel. He is undecided as to whether he will continue to conduct the hotel or lease it to some responsible party and has had several good offers. The hotel, however, is a good paying proposition and Mr. Meehan says he is in no rush to dispose of it.

"For a man without funds, Mr. Coleman ran a swell hotel for the short time he conducted it, but has left quite a small army of creditors. It is said that all the capital he had was $100, which he borrowed from a local business man."

Library to Be an Issue
Ladies Want the City to Own It
The Matter to be Voted Upon at the Coming City Election

"The ladies of Thief River Falls are going to take a part in the coming city campaign, and, although they cannot vote, they claim to have much influence.

"They have secured a petition and will have placed upon the official ballot the proposition of having the city accept the public library of the city. The library is at present owned by the Thief River Falls Library association, an organization composed of a number of ladies of the city, and they have supported it for a number of years. It has been one of the popular institutions of the town, and has a large number of patrons. The ladies now believe that it is the proper item that the books and other property of this institution be owned by the city and that one mill tax for its support and the purchase of new books be levied. At present the city council pays the salary of the librarian, but as the library property is not owned by the city, the council has no legal right to do this.

"It would seem but proper that the city assume ownership and all should vote 'yes' upon the proposition. The increase in tax to the large majority of residents would be but a few cents."

Will Get No Pump

"The city council has decided not to purchase a pump for the water works plant this year, as it is not known yet whether the supply of water will have to be taken from the river or whether the well will prove a success. Water, however, will be pumped into the water tank by the city's fire engine from the river, and this will be the supply to be used this winter. It will afford good fire protection.

"The old electric light power plant will be removed up near the water tank and City Engineer John Durbin will be placed in charge."

School Notes

"Mr. Ronnestrand, the high school janitor, has just completed the mounting of a most beautiful specimen of the American Eagle. The bird was recently shot near Mud lake by a St. Paul gentleman and its wings, when outstretched, measure seven feet ten inches from tip to tip. Several other productions of the janitor's skill as a taxidermist ornament the primary room in the brick building."

Burglars Obtain Cash At Airport And Eagles Hall

"Burglars who invaded two local places early Tuesday morning escaped with an estimated nearly $200 in loot, almost all of it in the form of cash. Entered were the airport building and the Eagles hall. In the break-in at the North Central airlines office at the airport, which was discovered by Chet Matthews when he reported for duty at 5 a.m., the intruders obtained $137.65 after jimmying their way into a desk, in addition to $7 or $8 from an insurance vending machine.

"Then they broke their way into the adjoining office of Chris Kierk, airport manager, and the Skyway coffee bar but all they got there was .57 in change and a few packages of cigarettes.

"Airline personnel reported that burglaries had also occurred recently at the Bemidji and Brainerd airports.

"As was the case at the airport, entrance to the Eagles hall was made by way of a broken window, the burglars taking $25 found in the bar, as well as an undetermined amount from the jukebox and pinball machines. Sheriff Arthur Rambeck and local police are at work on the two cases."

Flowers Resist 15 Degree Reading

"That some flowers raised in Thief River Falls gardens are extremely hardy was demonstrated Monday when following repeated frosts accumulating in the low readings of 15 Monday morning. Lars Furan brought into the Times office a collection of blooms picked from his garden that morning. Included were a rose, delphinium, snap dragon, phlox, aster, sweet alyssum, and pansy."

Critical Access Hospital?

Northwest Medical Center in TRF applies for Critical Access Hospital designation

by David Hill
Editor

Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls has applied to become a Critical Access Hospital.

Chris Harff, chief executive officer of Northwest Medical Center, believes this is really a good step for the hospital. She added, though, that it wouldn't have been possible without the assistance of the physicians at Dakota Clinic.

Phil McKenzie, chief executive officer of Dakota Clinic, explained that this is another example of the hospital and clinic continuing to work together more closely. Agreeing to work with the hospital on its application to become a Critical Access Hospital, he said, wasn't taken lightly. After consideration, he said the physicians agreed to support the hospital. He explained that while this application is another example of the hospital and clinic working together more closely, becoming a Critical Access Hospital will require working even more closely. For it to work, physicians and the hospital will have to work very closely on such things as schedules. In the last analysis, McKenzie said physicians are supporting the hospital's application because they believe it will benefit the entire community.

Meeting the Criteria

To become a Critical Access Hospital, Northwest Medical Center must meet a number of criteria. According to the Minnesota Department of Health, hospitals that are most appropriate for the Critical Access Hospital program are those with low volume, short average lengths of stay, and with a large Medicare population.

Harff said that description fits the hospital's profile. The hospital would also gain an important advantage. If after a survey, the federal government approves the application, Northwest Medical Center will be able to collect 100 percent of reimbursement plus one percent for Medicare patients. Medicare patients amount to about 50 percent of payor mix at the hospital.

There are a number of limitations or guidelines that the hospital must agree to, as well. Harff said one of the limitations they are working under is a timeline. She believes the application needed to be presented prior to the first of the year so that the hospital could qualify for an exception to the under 35-mile rule. That rule states that a Critical Access Hospital must be located at least 35 miles from another hospital.

Texas Hold'em Tournament at Seven Clans

A total of 321 poker players competed in the Heartland Poker Tour Tournament at the Seven Clans Casino, Hotel and Water Park near Thief River Falls Friday, Saturday and Sunday. When the last hand was played Sunday, Brett Kuznia of Stephen had won. With a total purse of nearly $80,000, Seven Clans paid out to the 30th place. Kuznia's share amounted to $22,331.

Stephen resident wins over $22,000 at Heartland Poker Tournament

Texas Hold'em has arrived in Thief River Falls. The high stakes game has people flocking to poker tables. Last weekend, players lined up to play in the Heartland Poker Tour Tournament at Seven Clans, Casino, Hotel and Water Park near Thief River Falls.

Against 321 players, Brett Kuznia won the tournament at the casino on Sunday. The Stephen resident walked away with $22,331.

Perhaps the high payout that's possible in this game is one reason for its popularity, but it's definitely a game of skill and challenge, as well.

As a gauge of how popular Texas Hold'em has become, a search on a popular Internet search engine yielded nearly 33 million results.

How does one play Texas Hold'em?

The Two players to the left of the dealer start by posting the blinds (starting bet). If there are only two players in the game the action will rotate from small blind to big blind. A Standard deck of 52 playing cards is shuffled by the dealer. Each player is dealt two cards face down. These are called hole or pocket cards. The player to the left of the players who posted the blinds starts betting. This level of play is called pre-flop. (There are various levels of betting, these are determined prior to entering play.) The players involved are allowed to either raise, check, call or fold.

The dealer then flips the next three cards face up on the table. These cards are called the flop. These are shared cards that anyone can use in combination with their two pocket cards to form a poker hand.

The next round of betting begins with the player to the left of the dealer. After the round of betting is completed the dealer flips another card. This is called the turn card. Players can use this sixth card now to form a five-card poker hand.

Another round of betting begins with the player to the left of the dealer.

The last and sometimes the most anticipated card is dealt by the dealer. This card is called the river. Players can now use any of the five

Two local teenagers who police believe ran away with a 42-year-old man last week have been found. The man and one of the teenagers are in police custody in Amarillo, Texas. The other teenager has returned home.

Brittney Leigh Kennedy, 16, St. Hilaire, returned home Saturday after calling her mom from Iowa.

Michelle Rae Tieman, 16, Thief River Falls, was found safe Monday afternoon in Amarillo. Tieman was found in a motel room with Michael David Franklin of Thief River Falls, according to Thief River Falls Police Chief Kim Murphy. The Amarillo Police Department took Franklin and Tieman into custody without incident. Arrangements are being made to transport them back to Thief River Falls.

"I'm just glad she's home and that she's been found," said Tieman's father, Curtis.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning to reach Kennedy's parents, Lance and Tracy.

Franklin, who was on probation, will face charges in Pennington County, Murphy said. Murphy noted he had conferred with the Pennington County Attorney's Office, but it has not yet been determined what charges Franklin will face. Kennedy and Tieman may face charges in juvenile court, but Murphy said he didn't know what those charges would be.

Wow, What a Car

Thief River Ford Dealership owner Steve Lillestol had a big smile on his face Saturday when he took possession of his Ford GT.

Thief River Ford wins a Ford GT in a lottery

Get a look at that…

If one of these cars rolled down streets in Thief River Falls it would probably stop traffic. Heads would snap around so fast, chiropractors would be busy for weeks.

What is it?

When Steve Lillestol, owner of Thief River Ford, won a lottery to receive a limited production model he ran screaming into the showroom. To Lillestol, the 18 months since that day have crawled by.

On Saturday, Oct. 29, the car arrived in Thief River Falls. When reporters call asking for Steve, receptionists and workers shake their heads, and say "he's in the back looking at The Car."

The "Car" is a white Ford GT, capable of going from 0 to 60 in 3.3 seconds, 0 to 100 and then 0 again in 11 seconds. Its top speed is 200 miles per hour. The sticker price is just as shocking to most - count on it being six figures. Quite simply, it's the fastest domestically made sports car - period.

To most car enthusiasts the name Ford GT, which was the name of the original car, evokes memories of Ford's miraculous 1-2-3 victory in

Getting Fit Together

Bored? Try racquetball

Spice up your exercise routines with fun activities

by Scott DCamp

Whether its walking, running, bicycling, or cross training on treadmills, exercise bikes or elliptical machines, Thief River Falls area residents have many physical fitness options available to them. All of the forementioned exercises can be the cardiovascular focal point of a successful fitness program. They can also become very monotonous.

It's no secret that the undoing of many successful weight loss and physical fitness programs is boredom. But what if there was a sport that offered the same fitness benefits as distance running, but was easy enough that virtually anyone could do it?

Racquetball could be that sport. Enthusiasts boast that it as the easiest of all racquet sports to learn and it can be more effective than running.

According to a published study by Michael O'Shea, Ph.D, Sports Training Institute, that ranks the top ten calorie burning activities, only running (at a seven-minute mile pace) will burn more calories than playing racquetball. Racquetball comes in second on O'Shea's top ten calorie burners list at 13.7 calories per minute to pure running's 17.4 calories per minute. Other sports and their calories burned per minute effectiveness include: cycling and

Two Red Lake men have charges pending for burglary, vehicle theft

Two Red Lake men have charges pending after vehicles were allegedly stolen from two neighboring Pennington County residences and a burglary was reported at a third neighbor's home.

Damian Allen Kingbird, 23, and Robert James Lightfeather, 21, have charges pending for vehicle theft, burglary and criminal damage to property.

The charges are pending after the Pennington County Sheriff's Department received a report of property damage and a burglary at 7:15 a.m. Saturday at a residence in the 10000 block of 400th Ave. S.E. in Hickory Township. Kingbird and Lightfeather allegedly took items from an attached garage at the residence. The items were found in a neighbor's vehicle, which was parked there. The neighbor didn't realize his vehicle was allegedly stolen until it was found at the other person's home. Deputies found TVs, a computer, a computer monitor, an air compressor, tools, a gas can and other miscelleaneous items inside the vehicle. With the exception of one of the TVs, all of the items were inside the garage at the time of the alleged burglary. A pressure washer was found outside of the vehicle.

A 1996 Ford was parked in the garage. Kingbird and Lightfeather allegedly broke a passenger-side window of the vehicle and damaged the dash, steering column and numerous wires, according to the report. They apparently attempted to hotwire the vehicle and also attempted to steal the radio.

While deputies were investigating the burglary, it was reported that a 1999 GMC Yukon was in a ditch three-fourths of a mile from that residence. A number of items allegedly stolen from the residence were found in the Yukon, the report said, and deputies determined the owner was not involved in the alleged burglary.

As deputies continued their investigation about four hours after the initial report of the burglary, a second neighbor arrived and reported that a 1978 Ford F600 was stolen from a residence in the 38000 block of Center St. E. He reported that two men were driving the dump truck westbound on Center Street East.

A deputy and Minnesota State Patrol trooper attempted to stop the dump truck. It was found abandoned along 370th Avenue Northeast, one-fourth of a mile west of the residence from which it was allegedly stolen. Two people, Kingbird and Lightfeather, were walking in a field. When the deputy and trooper attempted to stop them, they allegedly ran and threw the items they were carrying. Kingbird and Lightfeather were arrested without incident, according to the report.

FSA office closure plan withdrawn

Congressman Collin C. Peterson, Ranking Member of the House Committee on Agriculture applauded the U.S. Department of Agriculture's decision to set aside FSA Tomorrow, a plan to close nearly one-third of Farm Service Agency (FSA) offices nationwide, but cautioned USDA that any future plan to improve FSA services must make meeting the needs of our rural communities the top priority.

"I am pleased that Secretary Johanns recognized that FSA Tomorrow was a plan with too many questions and too few answers. It deserved to be scraped until we can develop a plan that ensures that any office restructuring best serves our farmers and ranchers while using taxpayer resources effectively," Congressman Peterson said.

In a recent letter to Agriculture Secretary Johanns, Congressman Peterson outlined several questions about the ill-timed office closure plan. The letter requested specific information about why the plan was necessary, if the increased need for FSA offices to administer disaster assistance program was taken into account in the plan, and how USDA justified closing county offices just before the next farm bill was drafted.

"Farmers want and deserve customer service that is fast and reliable, but simply closing and consolidating offices will not meet the needs of rural communities. We need to make sure that any future plans for FSA will achieve the goal of improved service."

While Peterson called the FSA Tomorrow plan poorly timed and ill-advised, the need for modernization and improvements to service delivery at county FSA offices is certainly a major priority that Congress and USDA should work together to address.

"I look forward to working with Secretary Johanns, state and local farm leaders, FSA employees and Members of Congress to establish goals and develop a plan that will improve the delivery of services from FSA offices to rural communities," Congressman Peterson said.

Bonding committee considers northern training center and highway projects

The Senate Capital Investment Committee paid a visit to northwest Minnesota October 20 to tour the sites of the proposed Northern Emergency Training Administration Center (NETAC) in Gonvick and the Tri-County 10-Ton Truck Corridor linking northern Minnesota to U.S. Hwy. 2. Rep. Brita Sailer was on hand to promote the projects to her fellow legislators and answer questions.

The Northern Emergency Training Administration Center would host training courses and simulations in natural disaster and terrorism response for emergency first responders serving the 26 counties of northern Minnesota.

"Currently, the law enforcement, fire departments, and emergency medical services in northern Minnesota don't have a training facility nearby to get the instruction they need to respond to large natural disasters or terrorism," Sailer explained. "Local emergency responders lack the resources to travel to the Twin Cities for training, so a facility here in the northwest would save time and money while keeping our emergency responders available to the community."

The $2 million proposal would fund the design, construction and furnishing of a four-story fire tower and a 20,000 square-foot complex to host classroom training, simulation, and field experience programs.

"This project could not have come at a better time," said Sailer. "With Hurricane Katrina, we saw how critical it is for local governments to be prepared with well-trained emergency responders and communication systems. The Northern Emergency Training Center offers us an opportunity to make improvements right away."

The Tri-County 10-Ton Truck Corridor project would provide $3.1 million to improve a 36.3-mile stretch of county highways heading from Gully to Grygla, passing through portions of Polk, Pennington and Marshall counties. The reconstructed road would be able to function as a 10-ton shipping corridor.

"The improvements would really benefit regional industries like lumber, gravel, Marvin Windows, Polaris and others that need efficient transportation to get their products shipped on time," Sailer said.

The bonding tours will provide background for members of the Capital Investment Committee to decide which projects to fund through state borrowing in the 2006 bonding bill, when the Legislature reconvenes in March.

"If you have comments or questions on these or any other legislative issues," said Sailer, "please do not hesitate to contact me. The session may have ended, but my office is always open. I can be reached at 327 State Office Building, Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155; (651) 296-4265 or toll free at (800) 920-5867; or by e-mail at rep.brita.sailer@house.mn."

Senate passes amendment to protect ATV users

The United States Senate has unanimously approved a bipartisan amendment authored by Minnesota Senators Norm Coleman and Mark Dayton to the Fiscal Year 2006 Transportation, Treasury, Judiciary, Housing and Urban Development Appropriations Bill to protect Americans from the risks unregulated imported All Terrain Vehicles (ATV) pose for riders.

This amendment, also co-sponsored by Senator Mike DeWine (R - OH), will make the voluntary safety standards, implemented by American ATV manufacturers, mandatory for all imported or domestic ATV's distributed in the United States. Under this amendment, the Consumer Product Safety Act and Customs Laws agency will be charged with the duties of enforcing penalties on ATV manufacturers who fail to comply with standards.

"This amendment is critical to the safety and security of Minnesota's ATV riders," said Coleman. "While I applaud America's ATV manufacturers for recognizing the need to institute voluntary industry-wide safety standards, my concern is that imported ATV's are not held to the same standard and do not adequately protect users. This is a common sense amendment that will save lives in the long run. It is important for us to create a level playing field for our nation's ATV manufacturers that ultimately have to compete against an industry with no regulation."

"Holding all ATV manufacturers accountable to the same safety standards is a common-sense way to help protect our nation's snowmobilers and other outdoor enthusiasts," said Dayton.

"This bill is an important first step in the legislative process to make sure all ATV manufacturers comply with safety and training standards whether the ATVs are made in the US or imported from overseas" say Tom Tiller, CEO of Polaris Industries Inc. and Chris Twomey, CEO of Arctic Cat. "Our thanks go to Senators Coleman and Dayton for working hard to advance this bill which supports an important industry in Minnesota."

Working with the Consumer Product Safety Commission and the Specialty Vehicle Institute of America, American ATV manufacturers developed voluntary standards that addressed important safety issues, including appropriate ATV engine size, speed restrictions on youth ATVs, safety training, and proper head gear. Currently, foreign manufacturers are not required to adhere to the voluntary safety standards set by the U.S.

In most cases, American ATV dealers do not have the ability to alert the consumer to these safety concerns because the [illegible] of foreign made ATVs are sold via the Internet.

School Board defers action on housing abatement plan

by David Hill
Editor

School District 564 Board of Education made no decision Monday night at its regular meeting regarding a proposed tax abatement program that would abate taxes on new housing in specific areas within Thief River Falls.

Last fall, a representative of the City of Thief River Falls approached the Board of Education about supporting the proposal. Under the program, taxes on single-family dwellings in specific areas of the community would be abated for three years. The purpose of the program is to encourage construction of new homes in the community.

Although highly unlikely, the maximum amount of School District tax dollars that could be abated under the program would be $272,000. Harry Nelson, business manager for the Board of Education explained that the district would not lose tax dollars under the proposal. The mechanics of the proposal would cause the tax burden to be shifted to all its other taxpayers. Additionally, laws limit tax abatement to non-market value levies. On a $103,000 home, for example, the total tax that could be collected by the district would amount to $456. Of that, $197 would be based on market value, so the total amount that could be abated would be $259.

Representatives on the Board of Education have discussed the proposal before, but this time seemed to give it more attention. Although no decision was made, the consensus of the group seemed to be that they would not participate in the proposal.

Information presented by a representative of the City at a meeting earlier this fall, indicated that if only two of three taxing units agreed to the proposal, it could proceed. The Board of Education has been told that the City Council approved the proposal, while the County Board agreed to it on the condition that the Board of Education approve it. That appears unlikely to happen, at this time.

Several representatives on the Board of Education seemed to agree that the School District's taxing abilities are dissimilar to the city and county. The School District must ask citizens to approve a tax levy if it wants to raise taxes, whereas the city and county can raise their tax levy amounts without voter approval. Having recently received voter approval of an excess levy referendum, they do not appear inclined to ask again. They also agreed that while the School District has an interest in economic development, its primary role is to educate children. Additionally, they said that there are too many uncertainties to the District, very little benefit to the District, and that the City and County have other options.

Lincoln High School

Reading across all content areas is the number one goal of Lincoln High School this school year. Lincoln High School Principal Tom Hunt, Vice Principal Scott Brekke, and Counselor Bill Stock presented an update on activities at the school to the Board of Education Monday.

Reading has been a goal at the school for a number of years, but educators are trying to help students meet targeted growth by focusing on content. The process they've established to help them reach that goal is the LEARN process.

LEARN stands for:

Link prior knowledge in order to engage students in the reading;

Establish specific purposes for the reading;

Ask questions in order for the student to make connections to self, the text, and the world;

Read actively by identifying specific skills and strategies necessary for comprehension;

Note responses so that appropriate assessments can be made, and further learning will be enhanced.

Monday night, the three presenters outlined a number of strategies for achieving the goal.

Hunt also reviewed a number of other items, including enrollment. According to information presented at the meeting, enrollment is expected to remain stable for the next couple of years. Currently, 663 students are enrolled in Lincoln High School, 153 in grade 9, 181 in grade 10, 156 in grade 11, and 173 in grade 12.

Hunt also reviewed the school schedule, and a trip to Washington, D.C., where the three attended the high School Reinvention Symposium. Hunt said it was one of the most rewarding and informational seminars he has attended.

Brekke outlined some of the information they collected at the meeting and indicated that they are already taking steps to include some of that information in their planning process.

The next regular meeting of the Board of Education has been scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 14, in the conference room of the District Service Center.

At the Challenger Elementary and Preschool Nature Area, school teachers help representatives on the District's Board of Educatioo work through a typical classroom game that involves connecting nature terms and definitions. The Board of Education toured the area on Monday, Oct. 24.

FMS students complete Star Team training

Students from Franklin Middle School, along with Adviser Dale Carlson, recently completed the Students Teaching Attitudes of Respect (STAR) Team Program sponsored by the Northwest Minnesota Foundation (NMF). They were among a group of 42 students and advisors attending the two-day STAR Teams training at Concordia Language Villages near Bemidji. These teams will return in winter for another two-day retreat to reconnect, review and learn new concepts.

STAR Teams nurture young people in the development of their character, values and relationships. Focus is on communication skills, media awareness, conflict management, non-competitive games and thought processes leading to self-responsibility. Training is provided by Peacemaker Resources, Executive Director Candy Roberts and Program Manager Barb Houg with trainers Sue Liedl, Sandra Pascoe Robinson and Marlin Farley. Along with team and individual training for the students, team building training for advisors is also provided.

STAR Teams is available to sixth and seventh grade students from schools throughout the 12 northwest Minnesota counties, including Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau. To date, more than 1,190 students from area schools have taken part in the program.

Shaving Cream Painting

Shaving cream is a wonderful sensory material. Be sure to use unscented shaving cream, because the perfume in the scented kind may irritate children's skin. Baking sheets provide children with a contained surface on which to work, reducing the mess. Another option is to let children fingerpaint directly in the sink. The soapy residue leaves the sink sparkling clean. Hint: warm shaving cream feels especially good. To heat the shaving cream, simply set the can in hot water for a few minutes.

PARENTING TIPS

Make Time to Play

The holiday season will soon be here and many of you are already doing your Christmas shopping. The toy commercials are going full force trying to convince us to buy their products. In today's world the choices are unlimited, making shopping for toys very confusing for parents.

Often we look at toys as something to entertain children, to keep them occupied. We forget the important meaning that play has for children. It is how they learn about the world around them. It shapes their perceptions of the world and of themselves. As you select toys for your children, consider their value from the point of view of what your child will learn about the world around him or her.

To the young child:

•play is learning how things work in the world.

•play answers the questions: "who am I and what can I do?"

•play is the opportunity for the child to carry out his/her own ideas.

You can help to encourage play by providing materials, activities and space to play. Many parents find that they have fewer guidance problems if they provide for the child's need to have sensory experiences, to manipulate and learn, to practice muscle coordination, to use his/her imagination and have materials to carry out his/her ideas.

For example, play dough will give a child sensory experiences, it is creative, it can release tension, it can be a prop for imaginative play, and it provides practice in small muscle coordination. As you see, one play item can provide a child with a lot of valuable play. Remember also that just because play dough provides a good play experience, this does not mean that children can use it any time or any place. You, the parent, still can set limits: "Play dough stays on the table. You may leave, but the play dough may not."

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Describe and name the actions your child is using as he/she plays with play dough. For example, roll it, cut it, pat it, pound it, squeeze it.

Northland Community and Technical College coordinated and sponsored a successful blood drive on Oct. 13. A total of 42 people volunteered to donate at the drive to help patients in this area, 31 were able to give and 37 units were collected. There were 15 first-time donors.

College blood drives make up a large percentage of the community blood supply in the fall, winter and spring. United Blood Services appreciates the time and energy the Student Senate puts forth to organize their college blood drive, as well as the support from students, faculty and administration.

"Operation Keep Us Warm" plans sale and cookout

"Operation Keep Us Warm" will be hosting a rummage sale and cookout at the Park Place Mall in Red Lake Falls on Saturday, Nov. 5. The rummage sale will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the cookout from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

At a time when it seemed like a good idea to raise funds for victims of Hurricane Katrina, Jessica Boseman of Red Lake Falls, decided that when the average cost of fuel oil is expected to increase by 55 percent, area residents need to be concerned about staying warm this winter. So, Boseman started a fundraiser called "Operation Keep Us Warm."

"Operation Keep Us Warm" has already held one fundraising event. On Oct. 15, the organization collected about $1,800.

This second fundraising event consists of a rummage sale and cookout on Nov. 5. Boseman said it's an ideal time to visit Red Lake Falls because there are lots of things taking place this same weekend: the 13th Annual Thompson's Christmas Gallery from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and, the grand opening of Diana's Decor, Gifts and Things in the Park Place Mall.

All of the funds from the fundraiser are being turned over to the Red Lake County Salvation Army. Boseman said all funds will stay in the county and be dispersed to Red Lake County residents. There are two stipulations on the use of those funds: An applicant must have applied to Inter-County Community Council for funds and been denied, and then must have applied to Social Services for "emergency assistance" and have been denied.

Boseman said individuals interested in making a donation to "Operation Keep Us Warm" can do so by contacting her at 218-253-4342. She added that she is also in need of volunteers.

Aquila Cares program donates to Salvation Army

Aquila, a natural gas provider in Minnesota, has presented a check for $36,500 to the Salvation Army HeatShare program, as part of the company's Aquila Cares program that will assist customers affected by higher U.S. energy prices.

Aquila Cares helps qualifying individuals in Aquila communities pay energy bills and make emergency repairs to heating and cooling equipment.

This year, Aquila increased its contribution to the Aquila Cares program from $100,000 to $500,000 across its seven-state service area. Aquila matches customer and employee contributions to Aquila Cares, dollar-for-dollar, up to a total of $250,000. Also, Aquila is separately donating an additional $250,000 to the program. If fully matched, the program could provide a total of $750,000. The donation to HeatShare was Minnesota's part of the $250,000 Aquila donated to the program.

"We want to help persons in our communities who are having difficulty paying winter heating bills," said Mary Boettcher, vice president of operations for Aquila in Minnesota. "We feel the ongoing generosity of employees and our customers will make this effort successful."

Aquila's previous maximum contribution was $100,000, with the company matching 50 cents on every dollar contributed. Since 2001, the Aquila Cares program has provided more than $1 million in customer and company funds to assist residents in the company's service area.

Customers may make tax-deductible contributions to Aquila Cares on their monthly bill by calling Aquila Customer Service at 1-800-303-0752, or sending a check payable to Aquila Cares, P.O. Box 11975, Kansas City, MO 64138. Nearly 5,000 customers currently help their neighbors by including Aquila Cares contributions with their monthly energy bill payments.

Aquila provides natural gas service to 202,000 customers in Minnesota. Aquila operates electricity and natural gas distribution utilities serving 1.3 million customers in Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri and Nebraska. More information is available at www.aquila.com

...Some Dreams Don't Die

When I was just a young girl I had a dream. The dream was about two little girls who were friends back in the 1950's. One of the girls had beautiful blonde curls and big blue eyes. The other little girl had dark curls and big brown eyes. They were best friends.

One day the girls got money from their mothers to go to the drug store where there was a soda fountain that served ice cream cones. The girls wanted double-dip ice cream cones in the worst way. The little girl with dark hair wanted an ice cream cone with one scoop of lime sherbet and one scoop of vanilla ice cream. The little girl with blonde hair wanted a cone with two scoops of chocolate ice cream. They both wanted sprinkles on their cones.

They entered the store and climbed upon the tall stools there and waited. They waited, and waited and waited. The soda jerk boy looked at them, and then turned away. He did this several times. Finally the little girl with the blonde curls said to him, "We would like ice cream cones, please." The boy made a downward twist of his mouth and walked closer to the girls. He pointed at a sign posted nearby and asked the girls, "Do you see this sign?" They looked at the sign. Neither of them was able to read yet so they did not know what it said. They didn't know the sign said, "No Niggers Allowed."

He shook his head, and said, "We don't serve nigras here." He looked at the little dark girl and said, "I can't give you an ice cream cone." The girls looked at one another and began to climb down from the stools. They didn't understand what he had said about "nigras," but they understood he could not sell one of them an ice cream cone.

The boy saw the tears in their eyes and said that if the little dark-haired girl would wait outside the back door of the store, he could make the cones for the other girl and she could bring one out for the dark-haired girl. The little dark girl left her friend in the store and walked alone through the alley to the back door. She stood there with her nose pressed against a dirty window, watching her friend. Something hurt inside her as she watched other people smiling and eating ice cream sodas and whipped cream-topped sundaes at the pretty tables inside the store. Why couldn't she? What was wrong with her? Then her friend walk toward her with the ice cream cones and they smiled at one another.

In my dream, I was the dark-haired girl. From that time on I understood what segregation was and how it would feel to be segregated. I've never forgotten how I felt in that dream.

A woman named Rosa Parks died last week at the age of 92. She was a gentle woman who was said to never raise her voice, but she had a will of iron. With one nonviolent act 50 years ago, she is said to have brought about the beginning of the civil rights movement in America. She has been honored as the "mother of the civil rights movement" and was the recipient of several awards, including the Presidential Medal of Freedom, which is awarded to civilians making outstanding contributions to American life, and the Congressional Medal of Freedom, which is the nation's highest civilian honor.

What did Rosa Parks do?

She simply asserted her right as a human being one day in 1955. A seamstress at a department store in Montgomery, Ala., Rosa was tired after working all day and refused to give up her seat on a public bus to a white man. For this, she was arrested. When word of her heroism spread, the city held the largest and most successful challenge to segregation in U.S. history. For 381 days, blacks boycotted public transportation to protest Parks' arrest and the city's Jim Crow segregation laws. The boycott ended in November, 1956, after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Montgomery's segregated bus service was unconstitutional.

This ruling was the beginning of the Civil Rights Movement in the U.S., leading to the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which resulted in equal rights for all Americans, regardless of race, nationality or religion, and equal treatment for all under the law. The Act said there would be ice cream cones served to anyone who wanted one at any drug store, soda fountain or store in the country, no matter what color they were or what they believed.

At a celebration in her honor in 1988, Parks said, "I am leaving this legacy to all of you...to bring peace, justice, equality, love and a fulfillment of what our lives should be. Without vision, the people will perish, and without courage and inspiration, dreams will die - the dream of freedom and peace.

On Monday, Oct. 30, 2005, Rosa Parks once again made history. She became the first woman to lie in honor at the Capitol Rotunda in Washington. President Bush issued a proclamation that the U.S. flag be flown at half-staff over all public buildings on Wednesday in her honor.

Phil McKenzie, CEO Dakota Clinic - Thief River Falls, gave visitors participating in the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce "Business After Hours" program, a tour of the new Women's Center at Dakota Clinic - Thief River Falls.

"It depends" wins again

by Sheldon Schmless
FBM Instructor

Although the 2005 harvest season is just now nearing its end, decisions for next spring already need to be made. One of those nagging questions (especially from your seed salesperson) is "What variety or varieties of seed will you plant next year?"

Each year for the past nine years, I have conducted several seed variety test plots in the Barnesville/Rothsay area. And in each of those nine years the same variety has won every plot. That variety is "It depends." My experience has been that several identical test plots can be planted in the same year and there will be several different yield winners. Just a few of the factors that may determine a winner are planting population, condition of equipment used, soil characteristics, tillage practices, planting and harvesting dates, herbicides and pesticides used, fertility decisions, previous crop or crops, amount of rainfall, amount of sunshine, temperature, and the list goes on and on.

Therefore, the best answer to the variety selection dilemma is an on-farm varietal test plot conducted using your farming practices. Consider the following observations when deciding whether or not to conduct your own on farm trials. What grows best on one farm does not necessarily grow best on another. Too many variables are involved. No one seed brand is superior to the rest. The top variety this year will not necessarily be the top variety next year. Consider seed costs. Do the high-priced seeds really pay for themselves? Many of the top-yielding farms are those that conduct on-farm test plots.

Don't plant what you have always planted. Don't plant what your neighbor plants. Don't plant the variety of your favorite seed dealer. Instead, conduct an on-farm variety test and plant the varieties that grow best on your farm with your farming practices. I guarantee the winner will be "It depends."

For more information about farm business planning, contact an instructor in your area by calling Northland Community and Technical College at 1-800-959-6282.

Memories attach much more significance to items and songs

When I was in grade school, my mother spirited away a few of my toy trucks and loaders and put them in a box in the upstairs of the granary. Her idea was that if I didn't see them for a while, she could bring the old toys down and it would be just as fun as getting a bunch of new ones.

I didn't notice the toys missing. And I forgot all about them, just as Mom had hoped.

Except, she forgot about them, too. I discovered the box of trucks and loaders myself while scavenging through the granary a couple of years later.

And Mom was wrong. Finding my old toys wasn't as good as getting new toys - it was better, sort of like running into an old friend from summer camp that you forgot you had.

While moving this summer, I confronted my oversized collection of music. I haven't played most of the stuff for years. I got out of the habit of listening to music, and the CDs and tapes were left to gather dust.

Looking through my old music was like going through that rediscovered box of old toys. I had forgotten I owned many of the albums, but when I pulled them out, I remembered when I bought them and why.

Once you hit about 25 years of age, your taste in music freezes in place and you spend the rest of your life listening to the same stuff over and over, with an emphasis on those tunes which bring back memories of your youth.

So on went the albums, and back came the memories.

Nazareth's "Hair of the Dog" brought me back to the gym lobby where the corrupt town kids would play heavy metal music after wrestling practice while the virtuous country kids scurried to catch the late bus.

The Carpenters "I'm On the Top of the World" brought me back to the school bus in second grade. When the song came over the radio, neighbor Donna, a sophisticated senior who usually stared straight ahead, lit up and mouthed all the words.

Elton John's "Crocodile Rock" brought back a less pleasant memory. In sixth grade, I stayed over at friend Matt's house and had to ride on a strange bus way out to Beltrami. Of all embarrassing things, Mom made me bring along a clean pair of underwear in a paper sack along with a toothbrush I had absolutely no intention of using.

Naturally, one of those rowdy Beltrami kids got into that sack, pulled out the pair of underwear - and started tossing it around the bus while I chased after it with about as red a face as you could imagine.

During the entire nightmarish scene, "Crocodile Rock" was on in the background, and the memory is permanently seared into a part of my brain which doesn't respond to drugs or psychotherapy.

To be fair, Elton John isn't all trauma. "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me" brings me back to the long, lazy summer days when I spent sun-drenched evenings in the alfalfa field running alongside the tractor as Cousin Tom and Uncle Orville gobbled up hay with the old clackety-clack baler.

And "Benny and the Jets" was the first song I heard on the radio when I moved into my new bedroom with bright orange shag carpet in the basement of the newly built split-level in 1974.

The memories stirred by Van Halen, Loverboy, AC/DC, the Cars, Quiet Riot and Ratt come from the early college years and are a little dim. In fact, "I have no specific recollection" is the phrase my lawyer suggests if that time period ever comes up under oath at some hearing.

But over all, hearing the old music was about as fun as playing with the Tonka loader I forgot I had after finding in a dust-covered box in the granary.

PARENTING TIPS
Early Childhood Screenings

Children grow at different rates. This is normal and healthy. But then how do you know if your child has a delay in some area of development? One way to find out is to take your child to Early Childhood screening. The Minnesota Legislature requires all children to be screened prior to entering public school, preferably around age 3 1/2 to 4. The purpose of the screening is to celebrate your child's strengths and to identify health and development delays early. Early detection of delays can reduce the need for costly care at a later time. All Minnesota school districts provide Early Childhood screening free of charge. However, parents may choose to have a comparable screening done by a public or private health care provider.

The Thief River Falls Early Childhood screening clinics are held monthly, at Challenger Preschool If you have a child who is four years of age and has not been screened, please call 681-8670 for information or to make an appointment.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

If your child is going to be screened, talk with him about it ahead of time. Tell him that you will be with him the whole time. He will have his eyes and ears checked and be asked to play some games.

Koblish to perform at First Baptist

David Koblish, soloist and recording artist from Minneapolis, will perform at First Baptist Church in Thief River Falls at 7 p.m. on Nov. 5, and 10:30 a.m. on Nov. 6, at the church, which is located at 404 Horace Avenue North, Thief River Falls.

Koblish performs music that is contemporary, traditional inspirational, and music with a touch of country western and southern gospel.

As a youngster, Koblish often sang with his five brothers at various functions in their northern Wisconsin community. He remembers that during his childhood he used to hike through an open field, find a large stump, climb upon it and sing at the top of his voice the song "Standing on the Promises of God." Since 1973, Koblish has been singing full-time, giving concerts in churches of all denominations, Bible conferences, crusades, and evangelistic services.

Koblish often ministers musically in conferences throughout Asia, South America, and Europe with the International ministry of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association. He has performed in over 35 languages in order to more effectively communicate the gospel to so many different cultures.

Both concerts in Thief River Falls are free of charge. A pie social will follow the 7 p.m. concert, and a potluck dinner will follow the 10:30 a.m. concert.

Hope For Progression

Lincoln High School Homecoming pep-fest: a chance to express prowler pride and school spirit, or an opportune time to wage savage war against fellow classmates and peers? A once honored and anticipated event, Homecoming pep-fest has now been crowned with a darker image. It seems, over the last few years, that it is now a blatant excuse for students to voice their opinions through twisted acts of childish high jinks.

Annually, fall sport teams come up with their own creative ways to convey school spirit and encouragement for the football team's homecoming game. Usually dances, cheers, or skits, in which the teams incorporate appreciation for their own sport and the fall season, are used. I, being a swimmer, find that most of the team bonds and memories are forged by simply getting the courage to represent something loved in front of the entire student body. This year, the swimmers planned on doing a dance including actual swimming strokes and a cheer for the football team. This was the brainchild of our team's very own 100-yard backstroke record holder, April Peterson. However, our spirited hopes for a successful dance and cheer were dashed. Two of my own (regretfully declared) classmates decided to completely destroy our moment of gratification by singling out our choreographer, record holder, and most importantly, our friend, through vandalistic interruption. "All in good fun" would not be a phrase used when describing the objective of these girls' actions. It was intended as a personal attack, but it affected all of us. Not only was our dance entirely ruined through gross disruption, but one of the brightest and funniest people that I know was flagrantly exposed in front of the entire school. A moment that could have been fondly remembered is now tarnished. We, as swimmers, are known for our close-knit bonds and team-like attitudes. To sum up our appreciation for one another, one of our team captains put it this way, "If you pick on one swimmer, you pick on all of the swimmers."

The kind of emotions that run through one's mind after a dear friend has been publicly abused are: hatred, anger, resentment, and desire for justice. I blame no one. Although I was honestly furious when it happened, I now realize that the ignorance and unfortunate mind-set of the harassers are simply not worth the attention and time of people who know better. I am, however, mortified to admit that those people exist in my senior class. We, as seniors, are supposed to be the exemplary role-models for the underclassmen. I regret to inform the freshmen, sophomore, and junior classes that to look up to the senior class, those of whom act on selfish, dull impulse, is the wrong decision. There are, in fact, the significant few who think about how they are representing wisdom and grace, the few who wish nothing more for the younger students than to keep the positive Lincoln High School traditions alive.

To everyone who matters, the acts committed at pep-fest are labeled foolhardy and unfair. The idea that people can be used as targets for social gain is a sick, delusional fallacy harbored by the inconsiderate. I believe that, in time, with a few graduations and some "spring cleaning" of the student body, Lincoln will be the commendable place that it once was. Yes, there are a few bad apples in every bushel, but hope for progress never hurts.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: My husband needs to replace his Social Security number (SSN) card but his work takes him around the state and he cannot readily get to his local SSA office during business hours. Can I do this for him?

A: You can but it would be much easier if he does this himself. There are several ways he can do so. First, he can visit any SSA office that his travels bring him near. He does not have to go to the office nearest home. Office locations can be found by zip code from the lower left portion of the SSA Web page at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Most offices complete SSN applications electronically at the reception window. He will need to present ID. Acceptable ID's are listed on the application but must include more information than just his name such as, for example, a driver's license, employer ID card or passport, showing a combination of name and birthdate or age. This lets the SSA employee check current information against existing SSA records for an accurate match and to help prevent identity theft.

Second, he can print the online SSN application from the top left of the SSA homepage and mail it to his local office with original, not photocopied, ID. You can do this for him but he would still need to sign the SSN application and provide his original ID, which we then mail back to him, plus you would need to present ID for yourself. No matter what method used, note that SSN cards are not provided directly by the SSA office processing the application. Cards are centrally mailed and will be received in about two weeks.

Dayton secures $40 million for MN defense projects

U.S. Senator Mark Dayton announced recently that the Senate Committee on Appropriations has approved $40.1 million for Minnesota defense-related projects and programs. Dayton pressed for the funding, which was included in the approved $440 billion 2006 defense spending bill. A full Senate vote on the bill is expected to occur soon, after which the Senate bill will go to conference with the House.

"The announcement of over $40 million in funds designated for defense project work by Minnesota companies means more jobs for our great state," said Dayton, who is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. "Minnesota companies are proud to be able to contribute in some way to the hard work our troops are doing overseas. These funds enable Minnesota companies to continue their strong involvement in supporting our troops."

The committee approved funds for the following Minnesota projects:

- $4 million to the University of Minnesota's National Hypersonic Research Center in Minneapolis, for development of tools to design the next generation of hypersonic vehicles, which have the ability to react quickly to global threats.
- $13 million to Network Computing Services' Army High Performance Computing Research Center in Minneapolis, to continue operation of current super-computing systems; provide required technical and research support; and upgrade technology infrastructure, including development of lightweight armor and tools to predict dispersion patterns of airborne contaminants.
- $4.5 million to Third Wave's Advanced Modeling Technology for Titanium Machining Initiative in Minneapolis, which provides software programs that enable more efficient and cost-effective means of shaping titanium.
- $7 million to Lockheed Martin's P-3 Anti-Surface Warfare Maritime Improvement Program in Eagan, to ensure mission-capable P-3C aircraft are available to support the Navy's required force level.
- $7 million to 3M, based in St. Paul, for procurement of a Colorimetric PDA-based Biosensor, which is a disposable device that enables rapid and accurate detection of bacterial pathogens in a one-step test.

Johnston herd at top of DHIA test report

The Todd and Kathy Johnston dairy herd was at the top of the Red Lake-Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) report for the month of September.

Randy Rasmussen, Red Lake-Pennington DHIA supervisor, put the following herds in order for the month of September, 2005:

1. Todd and Kathy Johnston herd, 61 cows, 92 percent in milk, producing an average of 68 pounds of milk, 2.5 pounds of fat, 2.1 pounds of protein in supervised tests, with 103 percent of test-day milk sold;
2. Amundson Dairy, 58 cows, 88 percent in milk, producing an average of 65 pounds of milk, 2.5 pounds of fat, and 1.9 pounds of protein in supervised tests, with 106 percent of test-day milk sold;
3. Walter Brothers Farm, 273 cows, 86 percent in milk, producing an average of 64 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of fat and 1.9 pounds of protein in supervised tests, with 104 percent of test-day milk sold;
4. Wayra Dairy 3x, 199 cows, with 89 percent in milk, producing an average of 64 pounds of milk, 2.5 pounds of fat and 1.9 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 103 percent of test-day milk sold;
5. Northwest Research and Outreach Center, 115 cows, 81 percent in milk, producing an average of 64 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of fat, and 1.9 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 101 percent of test-day milk sold;
6. Beyer Brothers Farm, 69 cows, with 83 percent in milk, producing an average of 60 pounds of milk, 2.1 pounds of fat, and 1.8 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 103 percent of test-day milk sold.
7. Morlyn and Debbie Ornquist, 37 cows, with 89 percent in milk, producing an average of 60 pounds of milk, 1.8 pounds of fat and 1.8 pounds of protein in unsupervised tests with 108 percent of test-day milk sold;
8. Danny Grunhovd, 70 cows, with 89 percent in milk, producing an average of 57 pounds of milk, 2.0 pounds of fat, 1.8 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 106 percent of test-day milk sold;
9. Tom and Diane Kolstoe, 38 cows, 87 percent in milk, producing an average of 54 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of fat, 1.7 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 103 percent of test-day milk sold;
10. Hamrick Farms Inc., 56 cows, with 91 percent in milk, producing an average of 50 pounds of milk, 1.8 pounds of fat, and 1.5 pounds of protein in supervised tests with 107 percent of test-day milk sold.

The herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month. If too many cows are included in the herd, then the average for the month may be low even though the cow that is milking produces a lot of milk.

Septic system maintenance is important

Jan Kaspari, Marshall County Water and Land Office, reminds residents there are certain things they can do to prevent problems with their septic tank systems.

1. Septic tanks need to be cleaned (pumped) at least once every three years.
2. Do not use starters, feeders, cleaners or additives. There is no such thing as a safe and effective septic system additive. Naturally-occurring bacteria are already present in the wastewater. If the bacteria activity level is low, figure out what cleaners you are using in your home that are killing the bacteria and correct the usage.
3. If you see wastewater surfacing and/or have sewage backup, contact the Water and Land Office. Your system will need to be inspected and repaired by a state licensed septic system professional. Permits and a list of licensed businesses that do the work are available in the office. Call 218-745-4217.

Identifying and correcting a potential septic system freezing problem is far easier than dealing with a frozen system. There are several steps you can take to prevent septic systems from freezing. Pick and choose what is best for your situation.

1. Lack of snow cover. Place a layer of mulch (8-12 inches) over the pipes, tank, and drain field area to provide extra insulation.
2. Lack of plant cover. Let the grass in your lawn get a little longer in the late summer/fall over the tank and drain field to provide extra insulation.
3. Irregular use of system. Use water. The warmer the better! Usually water conservation is the best practice, but if freezing is a concern, spread out water use, possibly doing a warm/hot load per day, using your dishwater and maybe even taking a hot bath. Do not leave water running all the time because it will overload the system.

If you know you are going to be gone for an extended period of time, plan accordingly to have someone use sufficient quantities of water in your home or pump out your tank before leaving.

4. Leaking plumbing fixtures. Fix leaking plumbing fixtures or appliances in your home.
5. Pipes not draining properly. Be sure all sewage drains out of the pipe from a pump line.
6, Compacted snow and soils. Keep all vehicles and high traffic people activities off of the septic system.
7. Cold air entering system. Make sure all risers, inspection pipes and manholes have covers on them.
8. Water logged system. Keep an eye on your system. If any seeping or ponding occurs, contact an onsite professional to determine the cause and remedy.

What do county commissioners do?

by David Hill
Editor

Whatever happened with...?

Wednesday, Oct. 26, Pennington County taxpayers and voters had an opportunity to ask those sorts of questions from their county commissioners during "Lunch With Pennington County Commissioners" at the Best Western in Thief River Falls. The luncheon event, which was co-sponsored by the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce and local Lions Club, allowed residents to ask questions, such as what do county commissioners do?

Having served on the City Council for many years, Pennington County Commissioner Bob Carlson said of all local units of government, residents seem to know the least about their County Board. He then encouraged residents to get more involved in local government.

Wednesday, County Board Chairman Charles Naplin kicked off the luncheon event with an overview of just what county commissioners do. That overview included comments on their limitations, such as mandated services. The biggest spender among all the county departments - Social Services - was a prime example of one fund where mandated services determine the size of the budget.

Ken Olson, county auditor, put numbers to those statements. With a total budget of $19,864,000, the general revenue fund comprises $5,262,392 (public safety accounts for 51 percent of that amount), the road and bridge fund $6,803,608, and human services roughly $4,405,000. As with all government units, state and federal funds make up substantial amounts of the budget. Only a portion of the budget comes from local taxpayers. This year, the county will levy for $5,233,043, a 5 percent increase over last year. Olson also stated that the county has 144 full-time employees, 69 part-time, and six temporary employees.

Joining county commissioners and Olson in the hotseat on Wednesday were many department supervisors. Since Social Services makes up a substantial portion of the county's budget, Ken Yutrzenka, director, was asked to comment.

Yutrzenka explained that the vast majority of the Social Service budget comes from state and federal sources. Broken down into three broad groups - support benefits, social services, and healthcare - many of the services are mandated. The largest contributor to the overall budget cost is health services, many of which are provided to the elderly and disabled population in the county.

Largely unknown to the general public, said Yutrzenka, is the fact that roughly $19 million from other sources goes directly to local vendors. Overall, in 2004, about $23 million was spent for citizens of Pennington County.

Howard Person, solid waste director who holds several other titles, too, said it isn't always unfunded mandates that cause a problem. A better description of what's happening might be "underfunded" mandates.

In Person's situation, the county will receive a small amount of funds to implement a mandated program. But that program, like shoreland ordinance, wetlands oversight, and floodplain management, often cost much more than the funding that was provided.

First Question

One of the first questions presented to the County Board was not about budgets or mandated services, it was about Bud Comstock - where is Comstock?

Comstock, fourth district commissioner, left the county a note last August saying he was going on an extended vacation while he looked for a new job in Florida, and hasn't been at a County Board meeting since.

Naplin and Pennington County Attorney Dave Olin said that in this situation they technically cannot fill the office unless Comstock resigns, changes address or is absent for 90 days. In other words, the fourth district isn't being represented on the County Board at this time.

In fact, Comstock was vice chairman of the County Board until Tuesday, Oct. 24, when the commissioners decided to give that job to Don Jensen.

Naplin said when and if Comstock vacates the position, the County Board will then decide whether to appoint someone to fill the term of office, or hold an election. (The term of office expires in November of 2006.)

Carlson said the commissioners are as anxious to resolve this problem as voters appear to be.

What's happening with the Future Fuel building and Pelletizing building?

The Future Fuel and pelletizing buildings are being sold. The county advertised for bids and will open them at the County Board meeting on Nov. 8.

Solid waste services in Pennington County are being provided by Alpha Omega Recycling and Les's Sanitation. They are using the other building at the site as a transfer station for handling hazardous waste, and recycling, though the recycling effort is rather limited.

Person explained that 15 percent of the county's solid waste stream is recycled simply by utilizing the roll-outs it has in St. Hilaire, Goodridge, and Thief River Falls, and by working directly with major employers in the community. As a result, the county qualifies for SCORE funds (assistance).

Why doesn't the county require residents to separate their garbage?

"Recycling is a loser," said Person. He explained that the county would be lucky to cover its shipping costs. The market for recyclables is just not there.

Naplin explained that homeowners can separate their garbage now and bring it out to the recycling facility. He also stated that the county is limited because the city has jurisdiction over the city, and the county over the county.

Naplin added that the county gets back money from its recycling efforts, but it costs money to recycle, too.

How can the county be more involved in economic development?

County Commissioners said they would like to participate in more economic development initiatives, but budget constraints have limited their participation.

County Attorney Dave Olin added, for whatever reason, up until a couple of years ago, the state kept counties out of economic development. he said the city has more statutory authority to participate in economic development initiatives.

The same sort of question was asked of economic development at the airport, with pretty much the same response.

The question was corrected by a member of the audience, who said maybe it should have asked whether it wouldn't be fair for all citizens to participate in the cost of operating the airport.

Carlson said that maybe the county should levy for it. "It's not that we don't want to contribute."

What's happening with the bidding for inmates from Red Lake County?

The question was prompted by a news report of an area television station.

Pennington County is not in a bidding war with Polk County over housing inmates from Red Lake County in Pennington County. Olson said Pennington County did not approach Red Lake County. Pennington County was asked to present a "package," and the county did that.

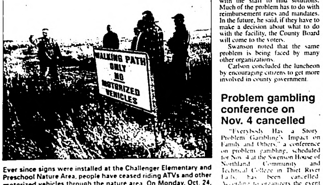
Carlson said Pennington County will stay out of the Red Lake County issue. He said they will decide that issue.

Skip Swanson, county commissioner, said the minimum security facility is doing quite well. He added that they are a little concerned about area jails being built.

Carlson added his own question to the agenda, by noting that there's a lot of talk around the community about Oakland Park Nursing Home. Carlson said Oakland Park is one of eight county-operated facilities in the state. He admitted that they are faced with some grave financial concerns, but are working closely with the staff to find solutions. Much of the problem has to do with reimbursement rates and mandates. In the future, he said, if they have to make a decision about what to do with the facility, the County Board will come to the voters.

Swanson noted that the same problem is being faced by many other organizations.

Carlson concluded the luncheon by encouraging citizens to get more involved in county government.



Ever since signs were installed at the Challenger Elementary and Preschool Nature Area, people have ceased riding ATVs and other motorized vehicles through the nature area. On Monday, Oct. 24, representatives on the Board of Education for School District 564 toured the area

Pennington County Board offers full support in Historical Society's Barn Again! bid

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The Pennington County Historical Society can officially call the Pennington County Board one of its supporters, as it attempts to have the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village become a permanent home for the Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon exhibit. A letter of support was approved by commissioners at the Nov. 25 County Board meeting.

Signed by Charles Naplin, chairman, it states "The Pennington County Board of Commissioners have been long-time supporters of the Pennington County Historical Society, both professionally and personally. It is our privilege to send this letter of support on behalf of the historical society's bid to become one of the permanent sites for the Barn Again! Celebrating and American Icon exhibit.

"As county representatives and farmers, we are grateful for the opportunity we had in 2005 to have this exhibit in our community. Not only did it bring to light the loss of the barns that are so much a part of our heritage, but the accompanying exhibits and events helped to showcase the barns in our county that are still beautifully maintained."

The Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon, a Smithsonian Museum on Main Street traveling exhibit, has toured the nation since the mid 1990s. Four sets of the exhibit were used during that time and will be retired at the end of 2005. Once retired, each exhibit will be permanently displayed at a museum selected by the Smithsonian Institute.

Faye Auchenpaugh, U.S. history grant writer for the Northwest Service Cooperative, is leading the Pennington County Historical Society's efforts to bring one of the traveling exhibits to a permanent home in Pennington County. She stated, according to the Minnesota Humanities Commission, to date, Pennington County is the only Minnesota county to apply to permanently host an exhibit.

Besides Pennington County's letter of the support, the Pennington County Historical Society has received letters of support from the Minnesota Humanities Commission, the city of Thief River Falls and the Northwest Service Cooperative.

Don Jensen to serve as vice chairman. Due to the two-month absence of fourth district commissioner and vice chairman of the Pennington County Board, Arden "Bud" Comstock, commissioner Don Jensen was nominated and unanimously approved to serve as vice chairman during the months of November and December. Jensen will serve as vice chairman in Comstock's absence.

The board approved a service agreement between Pennington County and the Violence Intervention Project. Under terms of the agreement, VIP shall provide services to meet all defined battered women and sexual assault program goals for 2005. Upon completion of VIP's duties, Pennington County's financial obligation will be $22,556.

Pennington County Solid Waste officer and ag Inspector Howard Person reported to commissioners that a fourth herd of cattle, this one from the Salol area, had tested positive for bovine tuberculosis. Person said 27 herds have been quarantined for testing and of them nine were released.

Person said there have also been cases of deer carrying bovine tuberculosis. During the first weekend only, deer taken to designated processing stations will have their lymphnodes removed to test for the disease.

Person also provided an update to recent solid waste matters. He told commissioners that the solid waste scale had been ordered and "is on its way." Steve Nordhagen will handle removal of the old scale.

Person also reported that he received to price quotes to bring electricity from the west building (current transfer station) to the new scale. Price estimates range from $9,000 to $15,000.

Engineer's Items

- Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagan reported to commissioners that portions of Chief's Coulee had been cleaned. The coulee's water level has dropped some, but according to Flaagan, until culvert pipes are removed and replaced there will be standing water.
- The board approved cleaning all legal portions of County Ditch 55 in Hickory Township.
- Joint ditch meetings for Judicial Ditch 30 and JD 31 have been scheduled for Monday, Nov. 14 and Friday, Nov. 18 respectively.
- Flaagan reported that the Highway Department's heavy equipment operators will be subjected to drug and alcohol testing through a new Minnesota Counties Insurance Trust program.
- Flaagan reported that he had interviewed five applicants for the Goodridge Highway Department equipment operator position.

Other items

- The board approved the human services consent agenda and minutes from the Sept. 20 Human Services committee meeting.

The next meeting of the Pennington County Board of Commissioners will be Tuesday, Nov. 8, at 10 a.m.

TRF's forecast shows $2.24 million for 2006 projects

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

City leaders are forecasting an estimated $2.24 million in capital improvement projects next year. At their Oct. 25 meeting, Thief River Falls City Council members heard about those projects and others included in the 2005-11 Capital Improvements Plan (CIP).

Of the projects planned in 2006, the following are estimated at $100,000 or more:

- Bituminous resurfacing on streets in the southeast area of the city – $400,000
- Gilbert Industrial Park street and utilities improvements – $330,000
- Relocating the Fixed Base Operator apron at the Thief River Falls Regional Airport – $300,000
- Acquiring land near the airport – $200,000
- Replacing water main along Kneale Avenue (from Third to Nora streets) – $200,000
- Sewer Lift #9 – $185,000
- Rebuilding the electrical system in various locations of the city – $130,000

About the projects scheduled for next year, Community Development Director Mike Moore noted it was questionable whether two projects would occur. That included a $120,000 bituminous restoration project at the airport as well as $250,000 in Americans with Disabilities Act improvements at City Auditorium.

The plan included year-old cost estimates, according to Moore. He added that the 2006-11 CIP will be completed within the next few months and will include more accurate cost estimates.

The council approved transferring a lot in Gilbert Industrial Park from the city of Thief River Falls to Jobs Inc.

The lot will then be transferred to Keith Danks Jr., who owns a business in Grand Forks, N.D. He is buying the lot to build a bakery distribution center. Danks will lease the building, but he noted Oct. 31 that he couldn't disclose who would be leasing the building. He said he would be able to release that company's name after Nov. 7.

A Master Bakery Outlet/Sara Lee Bakery employee confirmed that company is planning to move there. She noted the Thief River Falls business is planning to have its trucks and mechanics at the Gilbert Industrial Park.

Construction is expected to begin at the end of this week on the bakery distribution center, Danks said. If the weather cooperates, it is expected to be finished in March or April.

Danks noted he is planning another development next to Home Lumber in Thief River Falls. He said he is putting out feelers for business tenants at that location, but nothing has materialized yet.

The council approved an increase in parking fines from $10 to $15 effective Jan. 1. The change pertains to both overtime parking violations and calendar parking violations. Police Chief Kim Murphy said the change was "probably long overdue."

City Council adopted the 2005 Street and Utilities Improvements Project assessment roll. Council member Ken Schmalz abstained from voting as he lives in an area affected by the project. Council members Glen Kajewski and Terry BlackLance were absent.

The project cost $909,800, which did not include $46,000 in Street Department force account work. It will be funded through invoicing, assessment billings and Municipal State Aid monies.

The project included work on Nelson Drive, Sherwood Avenue, Sunrise Court, Oak Avenue, Spruce Avenue, Woodland Court, Gausen Court, Alice Drive, Allwood Court and Barzen Avenue. One resident attended an Oct. 19 public hearing about the project.

Mayor Dale Wennberg was reassigned to the Parks and Recreation Committee. Wennberg was not able to serve on that committee in the past due to his recent employment as the interim Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA) general manager. However, he is no longer working in that capacity since Gary Martinson began his duties as the marketing and events manager for REA and the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

About his work as the interim general manager, Wennberg said, "It was a good experience, and I certainly have a different outlook on city employees and it's for the better."

The next council meeting is scheduled Nov. 8 at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

Problem gambling conference on Nov. 4 cancelled

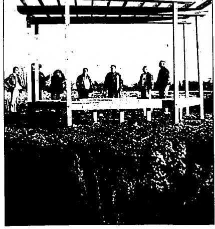
"Everybody Has a Story: Problem Gambling's Impact on Family and Others," a conference on problem gambling, scheduled for Nov. 4 at the Swenson House of Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls, has been cancelled. According to organizers the event was cancelled because of a lack of registrations.

Family caregivers concerns group to meet Nov. 7

A meeting for family members or friends who provide care and/or support to elderly persons will be held on Monday, Nov. 7, in the community room at the Warren Summerfield Apartments in Warren, beginning at 10 a.m.

Many of the group's members have a loved one diagnosed with Alzheimer's Disease or other related disorders. Individuals with a loved one in the nursing home or at home are encouraged to attend.

Marshall Manor has a unit specializing in care and services for people with Alzheimer's or related disorders. It is the group's desire to provide a supportive environment for families of people with these disorders.



School District 564 Board of Education representatives toured the Challenger Elementary and Preschool Nature Area project prior to a board meeting on Monday, Oct. 24. Among the features of the nature area project is this outdoor classroom. Classes, grades 3 through 5, use the area extensively during the first two months of the school year.

First Care Medical Services hosts landmark meeting in Fosston

A landmark meeting was held Oct. 11 at First Care Medical Services in Fosston. Members of the Northwest Minnesota Lean Health Steering Committee composed of members of the manufacturing community, healthcare providers and the university system issued an invitation to BlueCross BlueShield of Minnesota to meet with them.

At that landmark meeting they discussed how to work together to improve quality, but at the same time drive down the cost of healthcare.

Through the Lean Health principles, health care providers attempt to eliminate wasted procedures and actions while improving the quality of products and services customers expect. These lean principles have been adapted from the manufacturing sector, where those same principles have successfully reduced cost, improved efficiency and quality in products and plant operations.

Successful programs have turned corporations from the brink of closing to successful, profitable operations. While lean processes have been a part of manufacturing companies for many years, they are just now being introduced into the health care sector with some truly remarkable results.

The desire by manufacturers in Northwest Minnesota to reduce their healthcare cost resulted in organizing a successful joint venture with the University of Minnesota and many northwest Minnesota Healthcare organizations. This initiative is led by a Lean Health Steering committee composed of, Vic Carder, Marvin Windows and Doors; Brooke Coffey, Polaris; Rick Trontvet, Digi-Key; Joanne Davis, TEAM Industries; Pat Balstad, Northland Community and Technical College and Patricia Wangler, First Care Medical Services and North Region Health Alliance.

A grant was received from the state of Minnesota, and also in-kind funds from healthcare organizations, to create and teach lean health coursework. First Care Medical Services in Fosston and Roseau Area Hospital and Homes in Roseau were two of the first healthcare organizations in Northwestern Minnesota to embrace and participate in this new venture.

Other Northwest Minnesota facilities participating in the grant project include Northwest Medical Center, Thief River Falls; Dakota Clinic, Thief River Falls; Kittson Memorial Healthcare Center, Hallock; Lakewood Health Center, Baudette; Clearwater Health Center, Bagley; and Northwestern Mental Health Center, Crookston. Various manufacturing organizations have also offered their resources and expertise in support of this venture.

The arrival of BlueCross BlueShield as a partner in these discussions is considered another positive step aimed at healthcare entities working together to simplify and standardize the business processes of healthcare.

A landmark meeting bringing health care providers and insurance providers together for discussion was held at First Care Medical Services in Fosston. Those attending were: Jan Lysen, vice president of network management, BlueCross BlueShield of Minnesota; Doug Hiza, M.D., medical director provider relations; Pat Balstad, director of Lifelong Learning, Northland Community and Technical College; Dale Rehkamp, senior client executive, BlueCross BlueShield; Pat Wangler, chief executive office, First Care Medical Services; Vic Carder, vice president of human resources, Marvin Windows & Doors; Emily Lind, human resources generalist, Polaris Industries Inc.; Rick Trontvet, vice president of human resources, Digi-Key Corp., Thief River Falls; Barb Meyer, director of sales operations, BlueCross BlueShield; Annette Fowler, director of network development, BlueCross BlueShield of Minnesota. # Officials locate missing teens

Old-fashioned police work and technology led to the capture of Franklin and Tieman, according to Murphy. He thanked the girls' families, people who shared information, and the media for their help. Murphy also thanked Juvenile Officer/Investigator Teresa Mattison and Deputy Police Chief Craig Mattson for their work on the case.

Franklin and Tieman were found two days after Kennedy returned home. Kennedy was found safe and unharmed, Mattison said. Kennedy called her mom from a rest stop in Council Bluffs, Iowa, where she had been dropped off. The Iowa State Patrol held Kennedy until her mom was able to pick her up.

Kennedy and Tieman were last seen Oct. 24 in Thief River Falls. They were reported missing the next day and were believed to be with Franklin.

Franklin met the teenagers at Alcoholics Anonymous/Narcotics Anonymous, Mattison said.

A Crime Alert was issued for the teens Friday. The alert noted they were missing/endangered. Law enforcement wasn't able to issue an Amber Alert since the girls hadn't been abducted, Mattison noted.

Authorities believed Monday that Franklin and Tieman were headed to California to look for work, Mattison said. One of Franklin's former co-workers apparently lives there. They also believed Franklin and Tieman were possibly in Gallup, N.M., Sunday while on their way to Los Angeles.

According to police, Franklin hasn't been convicted of any sex offenses. The Pennington County Court Administrator's Office noted that Franklin is not in its database.

Franklin was on probation for a Polk County offense of felony theft of more than $35,000 from a business, according to the Minnesota Department of Corrections Web site. It noted that Franklin was supposed to be on probation until May 2007.

The police department noted Tieman ran away with another Thief River Falls man in recent years.

"It was one of the most competitive fields we've had," said Greg Lang of the competitors vying for the pot last weekend at Seven Clans. "The competition was fierce," he said.

Lang is one of the two founders of the Heartland Poker Tournament Tour. Lang explained that in January of this year, he and his poker buddy, Todd Anderson, were talking about Texas Hold'em and its growing popularity. They even began discussing a television show that would combine elements of reality television and Texas Hold'em. As strong as reality television is and poker is, Lang and Anderson believed that could work. They then realized that no one was doing what they were proposing to do.

The game at Seven Clans Casino began on Friday. Preliminary qualifying tables were on October 28 and 29 at 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. The top 20 percent from those events advanced to Sunday. The buy-in was $250 plus $25.

The Heartland Poker Tour is airing on television stations and cable networks throughout the United States and Canada.

Each episode of the Heartland Poker Tour will air once a week on these stations and cable networks for 52 consecutive weeks, beginning Oct. 1, 2005. The closest television station broadcasting the tournament is KVLY TV in Fargo, N.D. They broadcast the final table in the tournament on Sundays at 11:30 p.m.

According to Lang, the tournament played at Seven Clans, will be broadcast in two episodes starting Nov. 26 and then on Dec. 1.

The next Heartland Poker Tournament will be at the Grand Casino in Hinkley Nov. 25-27. Lang said he expects it to be one of the largest tournaments they've held to date. The pool could consist of 500 to 600 players and the purse to be $100,000 and up to $200,000. The buy-in is $400 plus $40.

The total purse at the Seven Clans was $79,750, and they paid down to the 30th place, which amounted to $478.

Jeff Jasperson, general manager at Seven Clans, said he was very pleased with the event. Players came from all over the United States."It was very exciting."

Lang said the community should be excited about the economic impact from the event, as well. Lang estimated that 70 to 80 percent of the players participating in the event had never been to the community or Seven Clans Casino. And Lang added that Seven Clans did a great job of hosting the event.

Seven Clans was so impressed by the popularity of the event and its potential that it has signed on to host another tournament in May.

The following is a list of the top 10 finishes: 1. Brett Kuznia, Stephen, $22,331; 2. Clayton Lilleby, Lake Park, $11,166; 3. Christopher Banks, Warroad, $7,178; 4. Natalia Thompson, Morris, $5,582; 5. Chad Ransom, Fargo, N.D., $4,785; 6. Dana Mjoness, Fargo, N.D., $3,988; 7. Devon Garrett, Hayward, Wis., $3,191; 8. Scott Strom, Crookston, $2,792; 9. Brian Horshine, Thief River Falls, $2,392; 10. Dave Kundert, Lindstrom, $1,993.

Bored? Try racquetball

backstroke swimming, 13; crawl-stroke swimming, 12; basketball 10.6; tennis, 8.4; leisure cycling, 7.7; golf, 6.5 and walking, 6.3.

Evenly matched racquetball participants can burn between 650 and 750 calories per hour and during an hour of racquetball competition, a typical player can cover the equivalent of two miles.

"If you're playing somebody who's about equal to you, three games is a lot of racquetball," said Roger Evenson, one of the club's 25 owners. "That's darn good, you're burning all these calories, but you're also having fun."

Rules of the game

The sport of racquetball is rather new. Its origins date back to the 1950s, when a man named Joo Sobek developed a game called paddle racquets, using a handball court as the playing surface. Sobek's game mirrored handball in both rules and court dimensions, with the main differences being equipment (racquets) and ball dimensions, but it wasn't until the late 1960s that racquetball, as it was later known, became popular.

The game's rules are much simpler than other racquet games like tennis or racquetball's cousin, squash. Essentially, with the exception of serves, the ball can be played off of any of the four walls or ceiling as long as it's returned to the front wall before bouncing.

Only the server scores points in racquetball. When the receiver wins a point, it becomes his or her turn to serve. Games one and two of a three game match are scored to 15. Game three is scored to 11 points.

TRF Racquetball club

After gaining popularity in the 1960s and 70s, racquetball reached its peak in the 1980s. The existing Thief River Falls Racquetball Club opened in 1988, three years after another club of the same name closed its doors. The first club's failure was not attributed to a lack of need or participation, but instead to inefficient heating and consequently high utility bills during winter months.

The new club opened in the spring of 1988, after John Egge and 18 partners purchased the land for the building and a most of the equipment from the old racquetball club.

"We just decided we wanted to get racquetball back into town," said Evenson, one of the clubs original owners.

Evenson said the ownership group purchased all four of the old club's courts. Two courts were constructed in the new building and two were sold to a health club in Canada.

Evenson said the facility is geared mainly towards racquetball players. Memberships start at $20 per month for students, and include usage of the racquetball courts and a weightroom with free weights, a stair stepper and exercise bike. Members also have access to a sauna, which according to Evenson, is the only reason some members joined.

Racquetball players of all skill levels compete at the club. Evenson said challenge ladders are used to pair competitors of like skill level. He said leagues have been formed in the past when there is enough interest.

"Leagues are nice, because they force you to play for seven or eight weeks," Evenson said.

Besides leagues and challenge ladders there are groups that play regularly. Tom Dimich, a 30-year participant in the sport and part owner of the club, regularly makes racquetball one of his day's first activities.

"I get aerobic exercise and I start the day without a cup of coffee," Dimich said. "That's why I play in the morning. I think the health benefits of racquetball are wonderful and you can get your daily exercise without weather interrupting."

Racquetball club hours are 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays, including a racquetball proshop, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., offering equipment such as racquetball racquets, eyewear, gloves, grip tape and balls.

Aside from racquetball, courts can also be used for basketball and a game called Walleyball, that is basically volleyball played within a racquetball court.

Aerobics classes are offered on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Each aerobics class dedicates the first half hour of its session to strength training. Remaining time is spent on aerobics on Mondays and Wednesdays; and kick boxing on Thursdays. Evenson also noted that the club is considering the addition of a yoga class.

Besides aerobics classes, the building's upper level is available to rent for dance and martial arts classes.

The Thief River Falls Racquetball Club is currently offering free trial sessions to non members.

Critical Access Hospital?

In addition, eligible hospitals must agree to limit inpatient acute care beds to no more than 25, have an average annual length of stay of no more than 96 hours, comply with licensure and federal and state certification requirements, participate in a rural health network, establish credentialing and quality improvement assurances, make available 24-hour emergency services, and make available 24-hour nursing services.

In regard to the standards of healthcare provided at Northwest Medical Center, Harff said she hopes the community notices an improvement.

The application has been submitted. Harff said she's now waiting for the survey process to be completed. She said she doesn't expect to hear whether the federal government has signed off on the application until February or March.

The application to become a Critical Access Hospital is important because Northwest Medical Center, a nonprofit hospital, is going through some financial difficulties. This application will not solve all of the issues, but it is one of the responses. In recent weeks, Harff said she also has spoken with staff and at various meetings of community organizations about changes and difficult decisions that will soon take place at the hospital. What it means, she said, is that the hospital will be reorganized from the top down.

Harff believes becoming a Critical Access Hospital will help give the hospital a better financial profile and position it to meet the needs of the community well into the future. She added that she couldn't thank the physicians of Dakota Clinic enough for helping the hospital through this difficult process.

Ford GT rolls into TRF

the 1966 24 hours of Le Mans.

Production of the race car ceased in the 1970s, but for the company's 100th anniversary in 2003 they decided to make an exception, sort of. The very first, street legal, Ford GT off the production line sold for $557,000. The 12th one made was sold to Jay Leno for a reported $400,000.

The 2003 model was met with such enthusiasm that they decided to produce a limited number in 2005 and 2006. But who should get the car? The company decided to award 400 to the Presence Award Winners, and one to each of the Super Big Dealers, and the balance - a total of 60 cars - was to be awarded to the smaller Ford dealerships via a lottery. Lillestol estimates there are about 1,500 smaller dealers nationwide. Lillestol said Thief River Ford is definitely one of the smaller dealerships.

Lillestol remembers the day of the auction. He was watching the broadcast in a room behind his office next to the showroom. About half way through the broadcast he heard them say Thief River Ford. He said he came out onto the showroom screaming and yelling. Everyone, he said, wanted to know what was wrong, and when he told them, they didn't believe it. He immediately called and asked that someone repeat the news for the benefit of the others in the room. Someone in Dearborn, Mich., obviously knows that Thief River Falls is home to Arctic Cat snowmobiles because he said, "No, you mean the Arctic Cat GT."

It's a sports car. The 5.4-litre super-charged overhead cam engine is located in the middle of the car. The car has power windows and air conditioning and two seats and that's about it. There's no cup holder, no place for change, and the luggage space is equivalent to one square foot of space. But, what a car.

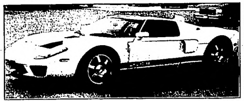
Lillestol said he had his choice of six colors - red, white, blue, yellow, silver and black. When he was trying to make up his mind, he said he attended a show in Las Vegas. On the showroom was a Ford GT. He opened the door and there on a panel on the entry threshold was a plaque that said it was built exclusively for Bill Ford Jr., Lillestol said, "That sealed it."

The white Ford GT with blue stripes sits in a locked room at Thief River Ford. Lillestol, who admits he anxiously paced back and forth for 18 months wondering where his Ford GT was, is now a little nervous. It's for sale, but he's on the line for it until it sells, and he doesn't want it touched or God-forbid, scratched.

It arrived in Thief River Falls in an enclosed trailer. It was supposed to be in Thief River Falls on Thursday, so Lillestol tracked down the driver. He was in Chicago at the time. He said he had a full load, which Lillestol learned included another Ford GT and three 2009 model Expeditions, which were being transported to a testing facility in Thompson, Manitoba, Canada.

Soon, Lillestol said he'll have to get over his nervousness because he's going to put it on the showroom floor at Thief River Ford...with a rope around it, of course.

If you're a car lover, a fast car lover, this Ford GT can be yours. The sticker price is just $153,445, but oh, what a car.



Look at it go. This Ford GT will be on display at Thief River Ford in Thief River Falls. It's also for sale.

Thief River Falls handles defending state champion East Grand Forks 49-7 in football playoff semifinals...

Prowlers advance to Section 8AAA title game

Earlier in the week, second-seeded Thief River Falls had trouble getting by No. 7-seeded Roseau 26-20 in the Section 8AAA high school football playoff quarterfinals. Saturday, the Prowlers had no problems beating defending state champion East Grand Forks 49-7 in a rain-soaked semifinal encounter at Lowell T. Swenson Field.

The win puts the 6-4 Prowlers into Friday's state-qualifying Section 8AAA finals against 8-2 Perham at the Alerus Center in Grand Forks, N.D. Kickoff is scheduled for 8 p.m.

A team that has at times frustrated head coach Jeff Mumm and his staff this fall for its stretches of seemingly less-than-inspired play, Thief River Falls performed at high-octain level for a full 48 minutes that had Mumm in awe. "That was impressive," he said. "We came out ready to play. Have we done that all year? No. We've certainly played well in stretches, but not for an entire game like that. The kids played with enthusiasm and intensity from start to finish. It was fun to watch. When we we play like that, we're a pretty good football team."

The Prowlers set the tempo by taking the opening possession 51 yards in six plays for an 8-yard Michael Benedict touchdown run on an inside counter with just 2:53 elapsed. Tom Loe followed with the first of what would become a perfect 7-for-7 night on conversions for the sophomore place kicker.

East Grand Forks' chances of matching Thief River Falls' offensive success suffered a major blow when quarterback Cap Richards left the game with a knee injury suffered when he was hit after scrambling out of the pocket with 2:13 left in the opening quarter. He never returned.

Richards fumbled on the play, and the Prowlers' Alex Yaggie recovered the ball at the Thief River Falls 41. Seven plays later it was 14-0 when Forney placed a perfectly-thrown pass into the hands of Yaggie, who was between a pair of East Grand Forks defenders in the end zone. The 16-yard play came 37 seconds into the second quarter.

Thief River Falls put together a 12-play, 71-yard drive to scored on a 9-yard run by Jon Drees, who sliced off left tackle with 3:27 to play. With Loe's kick, the Prowlers had a 21-0 halftime cushion.

East Grand Forks' one-dimension attack featuring hard-running 5-11, 185-pound senior Talon Grabow, opened the second half with a 7-play, 71-yard touchdown drive. Six straight carries by Grabow set up a 37-yard scoring toss from sophomore quarterback Alex Christianson to Andrew Barrett. A kick by Lynn Knutson made it 21-7 and gave the Green Wave hope.

Thief River Falls, however, came right back with an 8-play, 55-yard touchdown march that ended with a 5-yard Forney swing pass to Drees, rebuilding a three-touchdown spread with 4:34 remaining in the third quarter.

"When East Side scored that touchdown, it was a wake-up call," said Mumm. "It showed there was a lot of football to play. But we came right back and scored on them. That our kids found a way to answer their touchdown was big. I think the East Side kids got down after that."

If that didn't have the Green Wave heads hanging, then turnovers on the next two kickoffs certainly did.

Following the Forney-to-Drees touchdown, East Grand Forks was unable to find the handle on the ensuing kickoff, giving the ball to the Prowlers at the Green Wave 29. Although the possession began with two carries for losses and a 15-yard penalty that set up a third-and-32, Thief River Falls still scored. A 35-yard run by Drees got the first down and a 5-yard run by Forney put the Prowlers into the end zone, making it 35-7 with 9.5 seconds on the third quarter clock.

The mishandled kickoff was then repeated, this time giving the Prowlers the ball at the Green Wave 28. Forney scored again on a 2-yard run and Loe tacked on the kick for a 42-7 game 1:52 into the final quarter.

A final Thief River Falls touchdown came when Sean Sorteberg burst through the middle on a 47-yard run with 3:36 left.

Drees rushed for 197 yards on 20 carries, while Forney threw for two touchdowns and scored twice himself. Grabow netted carried 27 times for 172 yards. Matt Haugstad, who had two late-game carries, was the only other East Grand Forks running back to touch the ball.

East Grand Forks, unbeaten a year ago, opened the 2005 season with four losses, then won five straight before running into the Prowlers. The Green Wave carried the No. 3 seed into the playoffs.

Conference swim meet title won by Thief River Falls

North Border Conference girls high school swim title went to Thief River Falls Friday as the Prowlers out-pointed second place Fosston/Bagley 583-479.

Roseau was a distant third with 381 points, followed by Warroad with 337, Crookston 299 and Lake of the Woods 44.

Only two Prowlers were individual winners, but Thief River Falls again proved to be deeper than any area rival. That depth helped complete a sweep in the relays - worth 120 points in the team standings.

The Prowlers' Katie Pribula and Allyson Helling won the 200-yard freestyle and 50 freestyle, respectively.

Thief River Falls winning relay combinations included April Peterson, Casey Engelstad, Kailey Bakken and Helling in the 200 medley; Peterson, Bakken, Ashley Meunier and Helling in the 200 freestyle; Peterson, Meunier, Pribula and Helling in the 400 freestyle.

It was the final outing of the 2005 regular season for the Prowlers, who will compete in the Section 8A Swimming and Diving Championships Nov. 11-12 at Detroit Lakes.

Jon Drees got his night off to a good start when the Thief River Falls running back picked up 29 yards on this play – his first carry during Saturday's Section 8AAA high school football playoff game against East Grand Forks. Drees wound up rushing for 197 yards on 20 carries in the Prowlers' 49-7 quarterfinal victory. Cole Hunt (59) pulled from his right guard position to help with the blocking on the left side. Thief River Falls will play Perham in Friday's 8 p.m. championship game at the Alerus Center in Grand Forks, N.D.

TRF, Perham championship game foes

■ State playoff berth on the line in Friday Alerus Center match-up

Both the defending champion and the No. 1 seed have been eliminated, leaving Thief River Falls and Perham as the finalists in the 2005 Section 8AAA high school football playoffs. The No. 2-seeded 6-4 Prowlers and the fourth-seeded 8-2 Yellowjackets will meet Friday at 8 p.m. at the Alerus Center in Grand Forks, N.D.

Thief River Falls edged Roseau 26-20 in the quarterfinals and handled reigning Class AAA state champion East Grand Forks 49-7 in the semifinals. Perham advanced with a 21-20 squeaker over Warroad and a 28-6 upset of No. 1-seeded Crookston.

The two teams have never met on the gridiron. The winner will move into the Class AAA state quarterfinals, playing at either Albany or Litchfield Friday, Nov. 11. The Huskies and Dragons will match 10-0 records in the Section 6AAA finals Friday at St. Cloud State University.

Thief River Falls is a section finalist for the fifth time, but for the first time since 1996.

The Prowlers are looking for their first post-season title. The four previous championship game appearance all resulted to losses at the hands of Detroit Lakes. The Lakers won a bone-chilling 48-13 home field decision in 1992 before

Rick Looker is officiating in Germany

Rick Looker took his whistle to Germany this year to work as a hockey official in the Deutsche Elite League.

A Thief River Falls native with extensive officiating experience at the international level, Looker just recently left for his European assignment – later than expected, actually, due to lengthy contract discussions.

"I was hoping to get over here at the beginning of the season," said Looker from Germany, "but there was a long process on who was going to take care of my contract – the league, or the German governing body of ice hockey. Eventually the league was the one to take care of things."

The 14-team Elite League is the top professional league in Germany, pointed out Looker. Rosters are doted with North American skaters, including former NHL players.

Teams had already played about 15 of their 60-game regular season schedule before Looker took the ice for the first time Oct. 28 in Duisberg.

"I will be working the league until the end of April," said Looker. "That's when the playoffs will finish."

Despite his work at such events as the World Championships, Looker will not realize his dream of officiating in the 2006 Winter Olympics.

"I was hoping to go to the Olympics," he admitted, "but they are not sending any 'amateur' referees from North America this year. They are sending four referees and four linesmen from the NHL."

Looker, however, has again been selected to be part of the elite officiating crew for the World Championships, scheduled to be played in Riga, Latvia, May 5-23.

Spuds end season for TRF squad, 3-1

Top-seeded Moorhead held off a first-game challenge from Thief River Falls and went to to beat the visiting Prowlers 25-23, 25-11, 25-9 in the 2005 North Sub-Section 8AAA high school volleyball tournament quarterfinals Friday.

The No. 8-seeded Prowlers had a 21-19 Game 1 lead. It was tied at 23-23 before the Spuds closed it out.

"First game was outstanding volleyball," reported Thief River Falls coach Tammy Sparby. "There were long rallies; nobody let anything touch the floor. Moorhead has a great offense. I think we caught them by surprise with how well we played."

A jump serve by the Spuds' top server kept the Prowlers off-balance the rest of the night. "The top spin on the jump serve drops so fast, we couldn't get to it," explained Sparby.

The Prowlers finished the year 8-20.

RLCC out-scores Bears to open up tourney schedule

Big numbers were registered by Courtney Halvorson and Betsy Winkler Friday as Red Lake County Central got by Clearbrook-Gonvick 3-1 in the South Sub-Section 8A high school volleyball tournament quarterfinals at Crookston.

Halvorson finished with 31 kills and 11 service aces, while Winkler had 44 assists as the Mustangs beat the Bears 23-25, 25-23, 32-30, 25-19.

"It was back-and-forth all night," reported Red Lake County Central coach Nancy Bray, whose team overcame a 22-15 Game 2 deficit to square the match and then survived the extended third game marathon.

Four Game 4 aces on jump serves by Halvorson put the finishing touches on things.

Elsewhere, Alysia Dahl had 11

Hibbing second half routs NCTC

Hibbing scored 54 second half points to rout Northland 60-20 Saturday afternoon in a Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division football game at Cheever Field.

The two teams played to a 6-6 halftime draw, but the the Cardinals broke away to a 38-14 third quarter lead.

It was the final game of the 2005 for both sides. Northland finished 4-5; Hibbing went 3-6.

"I don't know if our guys quit," offered Northland assistant coach and offensive coordinator Sean Huset. "I think they played hard to the end. They (Cardinals) just found a play that worked and kept going with it. We were never able to make the adjustments to stop them."

The beginning of the end for Northland began after a 4-yard Andrew Saracino touchdown and his conversion run gave the Pioneers a 14-12 second quarter lead.

It was a short-lived advantage. The Cardinals' Marcus Darrisaw returned the ensuing kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown. Moments later, a Northland fumble gave Hibbing a short-field opportunity and the rout was on.

The match-up of two teams already eliminated from the post-season picture was a game marred by a never-ending series of penalties, including seven game ejections.

"It was not the way to go out for our sophomores," offered Huset. "We had a good group of sophomores who did a nice job for us this year. It's too bad it had to end like that."

During the week, Mesabi Range had to forfeit an early-season win over Central Lakes due to the use of an ineligible player. It cost the Norsemen a point in the MCCC standings, and reopened the possibility of a playoff berth for the Pioneers, who were eliminated initially by a 39-24 loss to Mesabi Range the week before.

A Mesabi Range loss to first place Vermilion Thursday, combined with a Northland win over Hibbing Saturday would have sent the Pioneers to the playoffs. Neither of those items happened, however, with a 56-28 Mesabi Range win deciding the issue before Northland took the field.

MCCC state football playoffs to start Saturday

Minnesota Community College Conference state football playoffs start with semifinal games Saturday, Nov. 5, when Mesabi Range visits Minnesota West and Rochester travels to Vermilion.

Championship game is scheduled Nov. 12 at St. Cloud State.

Forms, fees are required for TRF winter programs

School District 564 students planning to participate in a Minnesota State High School League-sponsored winter activity are reminded to have required forms completed and fees paid prior to the start of practice.

Those forms are available at the Lincoln High School Activities Office during school hours Monday through Friday.

Fees are $95 for LHS participants and $85 for Franklin Middle School participants. Fees for high school speech and one-act play are $80. Speech fee at FMS is $40.

Students and parents are reminded that the forms need to be filled out only once a year. However, fees must be paid for each activity.

Participants are required to have a physical exam every three years. If you need a physical, appointments should be made in advance of the start of practice.

Completed registration forms, physicals and fees must be brought to the LHS Activities Office before the first day of practice. When the forms are completed and the fee paid, a white permit participation slip will be issued to the student. They will not be allowed to take part in practice until that slip is presented to their coach.

The Prowlers' winter sports varsity coaches include one newcomer: Katie Anderson, who was named earlier to succeed Tim Magnusson as head girls hockey coach.

Returning Thief River Falls head coaches include Scott Bergland, boys hockey; Jeff Loe, girls basketball; Chris McLean, boys basketball; Kenny Geiser, wrestling; and Lacy Knott, boys swimming.

Under MSHSL guidelines, the opening date for practices this year include Oct. 31 – girls hockey; Nov. 14 - boys hockey, girls basketball; Nov. 21 - boys basketball, wrestling; Nov. 28 - boys swimming.

Prowlers, Yellowjackets meet in 8AAA final

the finals moved into the comforts of the Fargodome, where Thief River Falls fell 28-13 in 1994, 21-20 in 1995 and 42-0 in 1996. The Lakers went on to win Class A state titles in 1992 and 1995.

Perham is a two-time state qualifier, winning sectional titles in 1989 and 1997. The 1989 Yellowjackets were the Class B state runner-up.

"Perham is very athletic," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Jeff Mumm. "They rely on their skill kids to make big plays. We have to stay home on defense and read the keys. We need to have a perfect fit, defensively. We have to be able to adjust to their formations. If we play out of position, they're gone. We won't be able to catch them."

Perham started the year with six straight wins over Park Rapids Area 48-6, Frazee 28-6, Breckenridge 24-22, Dilworth-Glyndon-Felton 19-16, Agassiz Valley 54-8 and Roseau 24-19. The Yellowjackets lost their final two regular season starts to Pelican Rapids 21-12 and West Central Area 23-14.

"They're very good," said Mumm. "They're 8-2 for a reason. They're right where they thought they should be at the beginning of the season."

Thief River Falls' 4-4 regular season campaign started with a 42-20 opening night loss to Crookston, that was followed by a 41-0 win over Hibbing, then losses to Detroit Lakes 20-12 and Duluth East 29-28. The Prowlers then rattled off victories over Cloquet 27-22, Grand Rapids 39-30 and Duluth Central 34-27. The win streak ended with a 27-26 regular season finale loss to Duluth Denfeld.

"We came on at the end of the Roseau game, and really played well against East Grand Forks," offered Mumm. "Right now the kids are playing with a lot of confidence. Our backs are running hard, and Michael (quarterback Michael Forney) is throwing the ball really well. We're primarily a run-first football team. But we'll throw if we have to. We've got a good group of receivers who can catch the ball."

The Thief River Falls-Perham game will be the final of four Friday sectional finals at the Alerus Center. The day's line-up also includes Ulen-Hitterdal vs. Climax-Fisher in Section 6 Nine-Man at 12:30 p.m., Stephen-Argyle vs. Kittson Central in Section 8 Nine-Man at 3 p.m., and Fertile-Beltrami vs. Red Lake Falls in Section 8A at 5:30 p.m.

An opportunity to play a championship game in perfect conditions an hour down the road should ensure a large Thief River Falls following at the [illegible] Mumm. "It's exiting to be playing in the finals," he said. "It's fun to see the enthusiasm in the student body and in the community."

Directives from Alerus Center Staff

- Ticket prices are $7 for adults and $5 for students in grades K-12. There is no presale. Alerus Center doors will open at 11:30 a.m. Entrance No. 1 (the main entrance) will be the only door used.
- If you leave the building during the day, get stamped by Alerus Center personnel located at the main entrance. If you are not stamped and want to return to the building, you will be required to pay another admission. Even if stamped, no one under 18 will be allowed to leave the building and return without paying an addition admission fee unless they are accompanied by a parent.
- Fans are encouraged to arrive 45 minutes to one hour before game time to avoid creating a long ticket line minutes before kickoff.
- All spectators must wear clothing that covers the entire torso. Those who do not comply, or who wear clothing that is vulgar, obscene or in some way is inappropriate will be removed from the building.
- Under no conditions should any spectators or members of the [illegible] student body go onto the playing surface.
- Hand held signs which do not obstruct the view of others will be permitted, providing they are in good taste. Signs, message boards or other similar items not in good taste will be removed. Banners and signs are allowed, but must be tied, not taped to the railings.
- Items not allowed into the arena: air horns, noise-makers, laser lights, backpacks, duffel bags, briefcases, shoulder bags, etc. All bags/purses will be subject to search.

Don't wait until final minute to buy 2005 firearms deer hunting license

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is encouraging deer hunters to buy their license early and avoid the frustration of a last-minute rush.

The sale of deer licenses, often one every second in the hours before firearm deer season, may be slowed at some locations due to a glitch during the electronic swipe of the hunter's driver's license, according to the DNR. The glitch does not prevent the sale of licenses but may require the vendor to enter license numbers via keypad rather than card swipe.

"We are working to correct this situation," said Karen Beckman, DNR License Center supervisor. "Meanwhile, we want hunters to know about it so they can buy early and avoid a potential delay or slow-moving line."

Deer licenses are also available online at www.dnr.state.mn.us or by phone at 1-888-665-4236 or 1-888-MN-LICENSE. There is a $3.50 convenience fee for telephone or online purchases. Hunters will receive their deer tags by mail, which can take three to five days.

Northeastern moose hunt results listed

The 2005 moose hunting season in northeastern Minnesota ended Oct. 16 with hunters registering 162 moose at eight registration stations scattered across Cook, Lake and St. Louis counties over the 16-day season. More moose were harvested than the last two years.

In the 2005 lottery, 284 once-in-a-lifetime moose tags were issued in 30 zones. Moose hunting is limited to resident hunters in parties of two to four hunters. Hunting success dropped for the third successive year to 57 percent. Party success was 61 percent in 2004 when 246 parties took 149 moose and 64 percent in 2003 when 224 parties took 143 moose.

Harvest was heavily biased toward adult bulls, as has been common over the last 10 years, according to Department of Natural Resources wildlife managers. The higher number of bulls in the harvest may be the reason for the lower hunter success rate. Some hunters pass up cows and calves in search of antlered bulls in this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. The bag limit is one moose of any age or either sex per party.

This season, hunters faced a mixed bag of fall hunting conditions including heavy rain, high wind and unseasonably warm fall weather conditions. Hunters reported good moose rutting activity, as the breeding period was in full swing. Many successful hunters used calling to bring their moose within range.

DNR biologists report only three of the 54 radio collared moose were harvested during the season. There is an ongoing moose mortality study in Lake and Cook counties. Collared moose are fair game. At moose hunter orientation prior to the season, hunters are told to ignore the collars in their search for a moose because researchers want to get a better idea of the importance of hunting as a source of mortality.

The northeastern Minnesota moose population is estimated at 6,500 animals throughout St. Louis, Lake and Cook counties. The harvest goal is conservatively set at 5 percent of the winter population.

Agassiz open to deer hunters

The 2005 deer hunting firearm season at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge will be held Nov. 5-13 in accordance with Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and federal regulations.

Antlerless Area 203 (Zone 2), consists of Agassiz, along with the Elm Lake, Eckvoll and Mud Lac Wildlife Management Areas. This area is open for either sex and any age deer to all qualified hunters. A regular firearms deer license authorizes hunters to shoot any deer of either sex or age.

Antlerless Area 203 is a management deer permit area, allowing the harvesting of one additional antlerless deer by a hunter with the purchase of a bonus permit. There are an unlimited number of licenses and bonus permits that will be issued for Antlerless Area 203 in 2005.

Agassiz does not require any additional qualifications to hunt deer other than purchasing license and permits before shooting any deer and following state and federal regulations. Disabled hunters are allowed to shoot from their stationary vehicle on open refuge roads or parking areas with a permit issued from the Minnesota DNR during the deer season, as long as they are not shooting towards other hunters, vehicles or down the road.

Within Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge, pre-season scouting will be allowed Friday, Nov. 4, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Gates will be closed at 3:30 that afternoon.

Hunters are reminded that construction of, or hunting from, permanently constructed tree stands at the refuge is illegal. Portable stands are legal and can be placed at any height, but cannot be left overnight to pre-empt a hunting area.

Spotlighting is illegal all year long on the refuge. Casting spotlights or vehicle lights from a public road onto the refuge is considered spotlighting.

Camping is not permitted on the refuge. Camping is available on adjacent state wildlife management areas where camping permitted signs are located.

The refuge is open to hunters at 5:30 a.m. and closes as soon as possible after legal shooting hours. Gated access refuge roads will be opened at 5:30 a.m. All other refuge roads, trails and dikes will be restricted to foot traffic, bicycles and non-motorized carrying devices for transporting deer.

Use of wheeled non-motorized game retrieval carts are not authorized in the designated Wilderness Area. Non-motorized watercraft may be used on ditches and pools. The use of snowmobiles, 3- and 4-wheelers, trail bikes and other off-road motorized vehicles is prohibited on the refuge. For information on the use of off-road motorized vehicles on state wildlife management areas during the firearms deer hunting season see the 2005 DNR hunting regulations.

Except for two closed areas around the headquarters and maintenance center building areas, the entire refuge will be open to deer hunting. The closed areas are posted with signs and are clearly marked on refuge hunting leaflets. Entrance into these areas is not permitted. If a wounded deer travels into a closed area, refuge personnel must be contacted before the deer can be pursued.

Deer hunting regulation signs with a map of Antlerless Area 203 are placed at six locations on the refuge showing open roads and listing refuge regulations. Deer hunting brochures are also available at the office, headquarters kiosk and at the west and east kiosks along County Road 7.

Any hunter that is permanently or temporarily physically challenged, and wants to use the accessible deer hunting platform located near North Gate Road on the east side of the refuge, needs to contact refuge personnel prior to or during the deer season to reserve the platform.

An aerial winter deer survey on Feb. 2, 2005 estimated the deer population to be 1,600 for Area 2003. Mild winters the past seven years have helped the deer population recover after two high mortality winters of 1995-96 and 1996-97. The past two years the deer population has been at the objective level. The pre-fawn (spring) deer density for 2005 was 15 deer per square. This is at the management objective level of 13.5 to 16.5 deer per square mile. For 2005, the pre-hunt deer population is estimated to be 2,200, or 20 deer per square mile within Area 203.

In 2004, each hunter was permitted to purchase up to four additional intensive harvest deer permits besides their regular firearm license. A total of 201 deer were harvested during the firearms deer season including 88 adult bucks. The antlerless harvest included 19 fawn males, 68 adult does and 26 fawn females of which 81 were taken with intensive harvest deer permits.

The deer harvest in 2003 was 257. The average harvest for the past ten years is 148.

Deer taken in Permit Area 203 must be registered in Zone 2. There is no check station at refuge headquarters but there is at least one in most nearby towns.

Hunter safety is always of special concern. Hunters need to be aware of other hunters in the area to prevent shooting accidents. Always be sure that the object being shot at is only deer. Look beyond the deer to make sure another person is not standing in the line of fire.

The potential for hypothermia and heart attack also exists. Check ice conditions before attempting to cross any water areas. Most ditches on the area have five to eight feet of water. Hunter caution and awareness is advised.

First aid rescue equipment is on hand at refuge headquarters. Contact refuge personnel at headquarters if assistance is needed. All hunting accidents on Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge must be reported immediately at headquarters.

You are invited to stop by the refuge office and share hunting story with refuge personnel. Any questions about deer hunting on the refuge can be answered by calling 218-449-4115, extensions 214, 215 or 0.

Agassiz is administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service – the principal federal agency responsible for conserving, protecting and enhancing fish, wildlife and plants and their habitats for the continuing benefit of the American people. The Service manages the 95-million-acre National Wildlife Refuge System which encompasses more than 545 national wildlife refuges, 3,000 Waterfowl Production Areas and other special management areas. It also operates 66 national fish hatcheries, 64 fishery resource offices and 78 ecological services field stations.

The agency enforces federal wildlife laws, administers the Endangered Species Act, manages migratory bird populations, restores nationally significant fisheries, conserves and restores wildlife habitat such as wetlands, and helps foreign governments with their conservation efforts. It also oversees the Federal Aid program that distributes hundreds of millions of dollars in excise taxes on fishing and hunting equipment to state fish and wildlife agencies.

DNR to increase roadside habitat in new program

Minnesota's roadsides will soon get more attention from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The DNR has hired Tom Keefe to head up the agency's newly funded Roadsides for Wildlife program.

The program aims to increase habitat, especially in the pheasant range, through partnerships and outreach with public and private landowners.

"The program will focus on two primary objectives," said Keefe. "The first is to increase the use of native grasses in right-of-ways. The second is to decrease mowing, especially during those times when a delay can be helpful to pheasant and songbird populations."

The new focus on roadsides is the result of action from the 2004 and 2005 legislative sessions. In 2004, the Minnesota Legislature directed the DNR, Department of Transportation and others to recommend ways to promote and improve wildlife habitat within the right-of-way of public roads. In 2005, the Legislature appropriated $200,000 to implement those recommendations, which include an emphasis on highway safety.

"We intend to use a variety of tools to improve habitat," said Keefe. "They include cost-sharing, integrated training for roadside managers, developing new partnerships, and simply reaching out to those who have an interest in conservation and reducing the costs of annual roadside maintenance."

Heading up the roadside program represents a new challenge for Keefe, a 26-year DNR employee, who spent the past nine years developing and implementing the DNR's Electronic Licensing System. A biologist, he has also served for 17 years in a variety of wildlife field and program coordinator positions.

"I'm looking forward to this job," said Keefe. "Though the DNR has not focused on roadsides in recent years because of higher priorities, their habitat value is obvious. It is encouraging to see a renewed interest in capturing this potential."

Thief River Grocery Moves Operation To Grand Forks October 29

"The Thief River Grocery, local branch of Nash-Finch company, Minneapolis, consolidated its operations with the Nash-Finch company at Grand Forks as of October 29. Due to the increased number of new items being offered to grocery stores, the present Thief River Grocery warehouse was considered inadequate to properly service the retail accounts, said Otto Stenberg, manager.

"Several of the employees have been transferred to Nash-Finch company, Grand Forks. They are Chris Saustad, Charles Joyce, Stanley Erickson, Charles Troland and Steve Osvak. Vern Hossman, office manager, will be transferred to Fargo in the same capacity. Otto Stenberg, local manager, will continue to live in Thief River Falls and will be store supervisor for the former Thief River Grocery territory. Norman Strand, foreman, will also be transferred to Grand Forks upon completion of the branch closing here.

"The Thief River Grocery has been in operation since 1907 and was one of the oldest businesses in Thief River Falls and was perhaps the oldest jobber in years of service in the Northwest.

"Service will be continued in this territory from the Grand Forks operation and a local office will be maintained. Any telephone calls can still be made to number 8, the same number that has been used for many years, Stenberg said."

Snow Falls To Dampen Halloween Festival

"While an unwelcome snowfall greeted Halloween night here, cancelling out the traditional parade, other features of the program nevertheless were carried out as scheduled, to the evident enjoyment of more than 1,500 local youngsters.

"The afternoon movie in the Lincoln auditorium for the smaller children attracted a large and appreciative audience, as did the second movie in the evening for the older group. Ice cream bars and candy were distributed as treats.

"The teen-age dance in the evening was acclaimed as an outstanding success, more than 400 teen-agers assembling in the municipal auditorium, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

"Despite the snow and cancellation of the parade, nearly 50 youngsters turned out at the arena in Halloween costumes, and each entry received a prize of some kind. David Froehle, garbed as an Indian, won the grand prize, while first prize for girls went to Judy Timm, in witch's apparel, and first prize for boys was given Burton Emanuel attired as a batman. Dennis Froehle in pirate attire won second place, and third honors went to Barbara and Stephen Beich, appearing as a rabbit and a leopard.

"Honorable mention was given to Roger Nelson, Katy Simons, Gary Nelson, Stephen Dale, Judy Johnson, Marlene Gustafson, Gregory Dale and Judy Waale."

Take Your Coffee Break At Banks On Saturday, Is Plea

"Local residents are invited to take their 'coffee break' Saturday morning, November 5, at the Northern state bank or Union state bank, where coffee will be served from 9 a.m. until noon by the Penates group of the Woman's club, assisted by members of the Job's Daughters organization.

"Camp Courage, summer camp for crippled children, located near Annandale, will be the beneficiary of the event. In behalf of the Pennington county chapter of the Minnesota Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Mrs. Herbert Halvorson, chairman, expressed appreciation of the cooperation extended by numerous local business places and organizations."

Fine New Road Is Open Now To Holt

"Another fine section of highway, 11.6 miles in length, was opened to traffic October 21 following the application of a roadmix bituminous base on the new section of T.H. 32-59 extending from Thief River Falls to Holt.

"A hot plant-mix bituminous wearing coat is scheduled to be applied next year on the 38-foot-wide roadway. The grading job was executed by the Benson construction company of Stephen, which started work on the project July 7. The Herbison Construction company of Brainerd installed the gravel base and bituminous work. Ervin C. Pearson of this city served as project engineer."

From The Upper Falls

The News, John W. Eastman, Publisher November 2, 1905
Thief River Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota

Christina Went Down
To the Bottom of the Lake
Had on Board About Seven Tons of Freight for Tamarac and Shotley

"The steamboat Christina went to the bottom of the Red lake at the mouth of the Shotley brook last week. The boat left this city with a cargo of seven tons of freight, which was a very small load, and most of this was upon the boat when it went down.

"The accident was caused by the boat striking a deadhead log, which knocked a big hole in its bottom. As soon as the boat hit the log, it was headed for shore, which was only a short distance, but it sank before getting to land in about four feet of water. All of the freight, which the boat had on for Shotley and Tamarac river points was aboard when the boat went down and was damaged to a more or less extent. A crew of men are now at work endeavoring to raise it.

"The boat was the property of H. O. Rollag an the machine upon it belonged to the Thief River Falls Lumber company. It was to have made one more trip this season, taking up a large quantity of oats for the Thief River Falls Lumber company."

Prairie Chickens Numerous

"Yesterday the season for hunting prairie chickens came to an end, and it will be against the law to hunt these birds until the first of September next year. Very few prairie chickens have been killed around here this year and, as a result, there are now many more chickens in the country than there were a year ago at this time. Old residents say that they never saw birds so thick for this time of year and, if the conditions are favorable for hatching out the young next summer, there will be more birds than ever before next fall."

Placed There Years Ago

"Charles Gray, living on the shore of Lake Itasca in Beltrami county, has made a most wonderful find. He had noticed several times in the last few years that a large boulder on a slight eminence near the water line of the lake seemed to be placed in an artificial manner on the stones beneath it, and he blasted the boulder into pieces so that he could remove it. When the fragments were taken away his amazement was great to find a small cavity beneath, surrounded by smaller stones laid in clay that had been burned until it resembled brick. Lying in this cavity was a roll of tanned buffalo skin, inside of which was a small copper cylinder, hermetically sealed at the ends with clay plugs covered with a substance that resembled pitch. On opening the cylinder, he found therein a beautiful tanned antelope skin on which was inscribed a letter in Spanish, dated August 9, 1547, purporting to have been written by two deserters from DeSoto's camp."

Italians Fight at Warren

"There was a stabbing affray in the Italian camp in the Soo yards at Warren Saturday. Two Austrian Poles, who were working in the camp got into an altercation between themselves in which knives were used, with the result that Joe Boganich was badly cut up in the face and other parts of the body by Louis Boganich, the attacking party. Sheriff Forsberg and Marshall Dady proceeded to the scene and after a couple hours search, they succeeded in finding Joe downtown, and promptly arrested him. The preliminary hearing was before Judge Bystrom but was continued, the prisoner being held in jail as he was unable to furnish the $1,500 bail required. He will probably be bound over to the grand jury charged with attempted murder. The man who was stabbed was taken to the doctor's office for repairs and is said to be out of danger despite his ugly wounds."

The River Is Frozen
As a Result the Mill Is Closed down
Season's Cut Not as Large as Usual and Lumber Demand Is Good

"The Thief River Falls Lumber company's sawmill at this place was compelled to close down yesterday morning for the season by the freezing up of the Red Lake river. For the past week the water in the river has been frozen over more or less, but the company had continued to keep the men at work, thinking that the conditions might become favorable for a week or more of work. Yesterday morning, however, the river was frozen up so solid that it was useless to attempt to try and run any more.

"The river has frozen up this year much earlier than ever before and as a result, the cut this year falls below 40,000,000 feet. The demand for lumber has been exceedingly good and for this reason the company was more than anxious to continue work as long as possible. There is a big supply of logs in the river and next season the mill will be started up as early as possible. The men employed in the mill were all paid off yesterday afternoon and many of them will leave for the woods this week to work during the winter."

The Ladies Can Vote
An Opinion from the Attorney General
City Clerk Backe Has Prepared Special Ballots for Them

"The ladies of Thief River Falls can vote upon the library question which is to be submitted to the voters of this city at the election next Tuesday. Mrs. C. L. Dobner took the matter up with the attorney general's office and received the following answer from George E. Simpson, assistant attorney general:

"'This office is in receipt of favor of October 27th, enclosing a letter from Mrs. C. L. Dobner, president of the library board of Thief River Falls, in which the following question is asked:

"'May or may not a woman, who is otherwise qualified, vote at a general village election upon the special proposition of turning over to the village authorities a public library, to be submitted thereat to the electors thereof?'

"In my opinion the inquiry is to be answered in the affirmative. Section 8 of Article 7 of the constitution, as amended, provides that: 'Any woman of the age of twenty-one (21) years and upward, and possessing the qualifications of a male voter, may vote at any election held for the purpose of choosing any officer of schools or any member of library boards, or upon any measure relating to schools and libraries.'

"I am also of the opinion that this provision of the constitution is self-acting. Permit me to suggest, however, that in the submission of this proposition to the electors of Thief River Falls, a special ballot should be used for the use of female electors.

"City Clerk Backe has ordered a number of special ballots prepared and all ladies who so desire can vote at the election next Tuesday."

St. Hilaire Spectator

St. Hilaire, Red Lake County, Minnesota November 4, 1905

News Items

"The river froze over in October this year, the earliest in years.

"The skating has been fine on the pond the past week and a large number of young folks have enjoyed the sport.

"The ladies of the Methodist Episcopal church gave a peanut party at the church last Tuesday, Hallowe'en evening at which all had a pleasant time.

"The ladies at the Norwegian Synod church will serve a warm supper in their church on Minnesota avenue on Thursday, November 16th, from 6 o'clock until 9 o'clock. Everybody invited.

"The season for killing deer and other big game opens on November 10th and a number of the boys are making preparations for a big hunt. Put in your orders for venison early, as each hunter is only allowed to kill two deer.

"The weather was cold last Tuesday night and besides the council put on four or five special police so the small boy did not have as much fun on Hallowe'en as usual. Very little mischief was done.

"The Great Northern has given up the plan of extending this line to Roseau this fall and gives as the reason that it is impossible to obtain steel rails. They still continue the work of grading and the rails will be laid some time next spring."

Wylie Case Comes Up the Seventh

"Judge William Watts of the district court has set the hearing on the Wylie versus Great Northern injunction case for November 7th, says the Crookston Times and on that date Attorney General Young and Assistant General Stone of St. Paul will appear here to submit arguments in behalf of the Wylie people, and to set forth why the Great Northern, a semi-public service corporation, should be restrained from tearing up the rails between Wylie and St. Hilaire.

"Some fine points of law, which have never been brought in this state, will come out during the case, and from the standpoint of peculiar principles involved, the controversy will undoubtedly be a record breaker.

"The decision of the district court in the matter will likely be appealed from no matter which way the scales of justice tip, by the railroad company if against the corporation, and by the Wylie people if in favor of the railroad.

"The application for a temporary injunction submits many things, among which is the fact that the line has been established for twenty years and that the people of Wylie and vicinity contributed to the road's financial coffers at the time it was built; that the railroad is a semi-public service corporation and has not the right, as such, to arbitrarily remove an established of road, to the inconvenience of the travelling public simply because the line does not pay."

Post Office Robbed At Terrebonne

"Last Monday night the post office in the little town of Terrebonne was broken into and one hundred and eighty dollars in currency and a fifty dollar gold certificate stolen from the cash drawer. It is believed that the party is bound westward and authorities are warned to be on the lookout all over the country. United States specials will be put on the track of the robber who has been committing his depredations in many places elsewhere in the north country.

"It is understood that the Terrebonne officers have a clue to the crime and the specials are to be kept on the trail until they bring the man to justice."

Community needs to take a stand against obesity now

Thief River Falls and every community in Minnesota needs to take a stand against obesity.

Minnesota celebrated National 5 A Day Month in September. The theme was "Energize and Mobilize - Eat Fruits, Vegetables and Be Active." The theme was meant to empower the state's residents - both individually and collectively - to take charge of their health. It should be a year-long effort.

Coincidentally, The Times has been offering its readers stories we have entitled Getting Fit Together since mid August. These stories have been exploring local citizens' efforts to introduce exercise routines and more healthful living into their lives. The title of the series - Getting Fit Together - reflects our belief that it's something we all need to focus on, and that it's something we can do together.

In the past year, the media has bombarded us with stories about America's increasing waistline. The answer to why seems fairly obvious – more and more of our time is spent sitting in front of television sets, computers, or other electronic devices. According to a study from Ball State University's Middletown Media Studies, television use gobbles up 240.9 minutes per day, computer usage 135.8 minutes per day, and we're even multitasking some of our media usage - watching television while using computer software, or utilizing computer software while talking on the telephone.

We know that maintaining a healthy lifestyle is important because numerous diseases and conditions have been linked to poor diet and physical inactivity, including cardiovascular disease, hypertension, type 2 diabetes, and some cancers. And we know that by adopting a healthy lifestyle, the risk of suffering from these diseases may be reduced. Nevertheless, we continue to ignore the the warnings.

That which seemed to be ignored in the past, has now gained new interest because it was announced that the obesity rate among children was an epidemic. Suddenly, addressing the "problem" has become more important.

As to an explanation for why our children are obese - we need not look beyond our own noses…or waistlines.

There are many culprits. Perhaps, we reason, it's because the vast amount of a child's time is spent in front of the television, their computers and electronic games. Perhaps it's because our lives have become so complicated that we don't believe we have enough time to prepare at least one healthful meal a day, or enough time to provide more healthy outlets for children.

In kicking-off National 5 A Day Month in Minnesota, the Minnesota Commissioner of Health, Dianne Mandernach said, "We're mobilizing Minnesota residents to take charge of their health by eating right and being more active. If we're going to prevent chronic diseases, we need to get energized, make healthy choices, and help our communities create environments that promote physical activity."

I think taking charge of our own lives is the key.

At a half-marathon I attended in Bismarck, N.D., Sept. 10, Bill Bauman, a race organizer, told parents and children participating in a fun run for children that the event wasn't about winning first, or second place. He said it's about bringing families together and creating a healthy, active and caring community. Bauman and others in that community recently led a community-wide health initiative they call "Activate Bismarck-Mandan." The project which began over a year ago by bringing community leaders and other business and organization stakeholders together, offers, as Bauman put it, "a community solution to a community problem." It includes a school educational plan, a Web site, numerous events and celebrations, a community-wide fitness challenge that includes nutritional and fitness goals, motivational incentives and end prizes.

This sort of effort in local schools is about to begin. I encourage all citizens to support this effort and to develop more healthful habits. We know the reasons why our waistlines are expanding, all that's left is to start acting on that knowledge.

GET UP, GET OUT, GET FIT

The year 2005 has been declared "The Year of Fitness in Minnesota" by Governor Pawlenty. Rising rates of obesity, diabetes and lifestyle factors that result in a lack of exercise make a focus on fitness essential to healthy living. In the past, an individual got enough exercise at work and home. Modern household conveniences, less physically active jobs, and changes in diets have all combined to make obesity a real problem for Minnesota's health. Source: www.governor.state.mn.us

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Gastric bypass should be the last resort

To the Editor,

In response to the article on "Laparoscopic gastric bypass boom," I'd like to remind your readers that surgery should always be the last resort for any injury, condition, or disease.

Obesity is no exception. It's a mistake for anyone to abandon, or worse, sidestep the proven behavioral solutions of exercise and a balanced diet. The risks of invasive bariatric surgeries (such as gastric bypass, adjustable gastric banding, duodenal switch, etc.) are substantial.

And their benefits can be achieved with less cost, no risk, and less aggravation, using natural means.

Mortality rates for bariatric surgical procedures can be as high as 1 in 100, according to estimates by Virginia Commonwealth University. That means that 1,500 of the projected 150,000 Americans that will undergo the procedure this year will die as a result.

The survivors can expect months of difficult recovery, common complications such as vomiting, ulcers, hernias, and internal bleeding, and the surgery's dirty little secret - the cruel irony of a nightmarishly strict diet for the rest of their lives.

Most patients are restricted from eating certain foods ever again (which vary depending on the person). In addition, patients are often required to take a variety of supplements and medications to combat "predictive malabsorption," a serious side-effect that stops the body from digesting crucial nutrients.

After gastric bypass, naughty indulgences that contain excess fats and sugars can become life-threatening transgressions because they take up crucial stomach space but have no nutritional value.

Sadly, many of these patients could lose their extra weight without surgery, given a well-designed fitness program that includes diet, exercise, and proven behavior modification techniques.

In over 20 years of treating obesity, I've rarely recommended bariatric surgery, and when I have, it has only been in the very most extreme cases and with great trepidation. Even in the most extreme cases, behavioral therapies can be as effective and rewarding as invasive procedures. And behavioral programs are always more flexible, not to mention safe.

With a well-planned approach, and the help of a medical professional, anyone can lose their excess weight, without losing the freedom of a normal lifestyle.

Congressman Peterson:

We're being asked to open the Farm Bill at the worst possible time

Collin C. Peterson

Mr. Chairman, I know that this has not been an easy process for any of us. I appreciate your efforts to reach across the aisle, even though we weren't able to agree on this issue. I look forward to continuing the strong bipartisan tradition of this committee, even when we disagree on the direction we need to take on budget policy.

The budget process is a mess this year. As a founding member of the Blue Dog Coalition, I understand the importance of having our fiscal house in order and the critical need for balancing the federal budget. If I saw this as a goal of the current process, I could understand a little better what it is that we are trying to achieve. Instead, this budget resolution is actually putting us more into debt than we would be if we did nothing. The Committee is being forced to open the Farm Bill that has been fiscally responsible, saving 11 billion dollars since 2002, and that folks in farm country think is working well.

Despite these savings, we are being asked to open the Farm Bill at the worst possible time. Farm income is suffering as commodity prices have declined rapidly. Skyrocketing energy costs have squeezed profit margins into losses on the farm. Weather related disasters including hurricanes, droughts and floods have shrunk harvests and dampened futures. Wheat farmers in Northwestern Minnesota are telling me that with the rising price of fuel and other inputs and the low prices for their products, they probably won't be able to plant in the coming year.

As income is falling in farm communities, rural areas are turning to USDA's rural development programs to support essential public facilities and services, provide economic development resources, and offer technical assistance and information in rural communities. The changes in this budget proposal will limit these programs and hurt rural communities that are already struggling to maintain their local infrastructure and to keep young people living in their communities.

Right now, the USDA has to turn away three-fourths of farmers who want to participate in conservation programs, and now is not the time to limit these programs further. When we wrote the 2002 Farm Bill, compromises were made, and a balance between our responsibilities to commodity, rural development, nutrition and conservation programs was reached. The proposed changes to conservation programs are disproportionately high, which will make it harder to negotiate a good faith agreement in the next farm bill.

As we have seen in the aftermath of this year's hurricanes, the most immediate and pressing needs of those who have lost everything are for food and shelter. It is the wrong message at the wrong time to change the food stamp program, especially when that program was the one example of excellence in the federal government's response to the Gulf region hurricanes. The budget process is not the place for a debate about food stamps. For now, the fact remains - that demand for nutrition programs in our nation has never been greater. Particularly as these needs continue to grow, we cannot turn our back and change these programs.

I want my colleagues to remember that Farm Bill changes made now may hurt us later. The Farm Bureau pointed this out, saying, "If we take cuts in agricultural programs now, we're going to decrease the leverage that our (trade) negotiators have to make sure that we're playing in a fairer trading world."

Despite this, Agriculture Secretary Johanns has suggested that agriculture programs must accept this budget process, as he has told farmers across the country that we must tighten our belts and make sacrifices. He noted that farmers want to do their part to help the deficit.

While I thought his comments were a little strange, since this budget process doesn't help the deficit, I couldn't agree more that farmers want to do their part. And if a balanced budget and deficit reduction are our goals, we would do our part by putting aside this entire budget. In fact, according to the Congressional Budget Office's 2005 Baseline Projections, the deficit should decline by more than 50 percent from 2004 to 2009 if we do nothing at all. Instead, we are pursuing a budget process that will increase the deficit by $167 billion over five years.

The choice is clear - do nothing and reduce the deficit or support this budget and increase the deficit, while reducing support for agriculture and nutrition. Opposing this budget is the only fiscally responsible choice we have.

This budget process suffers from bad timing and bad priorities. We should take care of people affected by disaster and ensure that our communities are strong and secure. Pursuing a budget that increases the deficit while reducing the safety net that supports our rural communities is wrongheaded. I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this process.

USDA lauds MN renewable energy projects

Nearly $14 million in federal renewable energy grant funding for Minnesota was the focus of a state capitol news conference held Thursday, Oct. 20, by United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) Under Secretary for Rural Development Thomas Dorr. Minnesota has received more than any other state, in excess of $13.8 million of the $66.6 million awarded nationwide, since the USDA started the grant program in 2003.

Dorr praised Minnesota's commitment to renewable resources such as ethanol, bio-diesel, wind energy and bio-thermal. The state's "veracity and forethought" have made it a national leader in renewable energy, Dorr said, and stressed the importance of renewable energy in the development of local communities and investment opportunities.

"Enough cannot be said about the importance of pursuing renewable energy resources, and the USDA grant funding helps Minnesota to stay at the forefront of that exploration," said State Rep. Greg Davids (R-Preston). "However, the fact that Minnesota leads the nation in funding is less a cause for celebration and more of a reaffirmation of the state's ongoing responsibility to not only explore possibilities, but to successfully implement them, as well."

As chair of the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee, Davids this year introduced legislation spearheading efforts to set a higher standard for utility companies to buy or produce electricity from renewable sources. Davids was also successful in passing the "E-20 bill," which would double the standard of Ethanol in gasoline statewide to 20 percent by 2015.

Much of the Minnesota funding from the renewable energy grants has gone to either wind energy or methane digester projects. Community Wind North in Lincoln County was awarded nearly $4 million in grants this year to build 15 two-megawatt wind turbines that will be locally owned. Three additional grants were also awarded in Minnesota.

Davids stressed that while that the projects currently being funded by the grants will most likely produce solid results, it is important to not rule out alternatives.

"I am encouraged by the state's progress in harnessing resources such as wind, and apparently the USDA is equally encouraged," Davids said. "Hopefully, continued federal recognition and funding will enable Minnesota to pursue every viable renewable energy source for many years to come."

Dayton: Equal access to the polls for all

The Senate late Thursday night unanimously passed a bipartisan measure (S.A. 2289) introduced by U.S. Senator Mark Dayton to grant state and local agencies funding to improve access to voting polls for people with disabilities. Dayton offered his amendment, which was cosponsored by Senator John Ensign (R-NV), to the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education spending bill (H.R. 3010), to increase, by $15 million, grants to improve disabled voters' access to the voting polls.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 697,236 Minnesotans reported having a disability in 2000. The U.S. Government Accountability Office reported that after the 2000 federal elections, more than 80 percent of the nation's voting places were not fully accessible.

"I am delighted that the amendment I cosponsored with Senator Ensign passed the Senate. It increases funding for voter access for Americans with disabilities," said Dayton. "Many people with disabilities literally cannot get from parking lots to voting booths because of barriers. This funding would help to remove those barriers."

Congress enacted the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) in 2003, authorizing $140 million to promote disabled voter access across the nation. However, Congress has since failed to fund $95 million of the authorized level. Dayton's amendment boosts the funding to get closer to the HAVA goal.

Music and Culture

Uniting people through music

by David Hill
Editor

People in misery will swallow just about anything.

That's how Holocaust Survivor Henry Oertelt began linking together the series of events that led to Nazis coming into power in Germany and World War II.

Oertelt, who now lives in Little Canada, spoke with Lincoln High School choir students recently in an effort to help them understand Jewish history and culture. Understanding is important, and some might argue essential, to being able to perform certain kinds of music.

For nine months during the school year of 2005-2006 the 186-member choir program at Lincoln High School will be taking a cultural, historical, and musical journey. This journey will expose them to three minority groups that make up part of this country we live in. The history, culture and music of blacks, Jews, and First Nations peoples will be woven throughout the choir curriculum the entire year.

The "Woven Voices, Woven Threads" production will take place on May 21 and 22, 2006 in Thief River Falls. The show will then be taken on the Concert Choir June tour to the East Coast.

Oertelt, who was making a point about the impact of Nazi Germany on Jews, is among the many experts and musicians who will be speaking to choir students while they prepare for "Woven Voices, Woven Threads."

This was not Oertelt's first visit to Thief River Falls. During the 2000-2001 school year, Oertelt helped students with their Jewish performances titled "Never Again."

Oertelt began his presentation by discussing the economic chaos and misery in Germany following World War I and how it opened the door to the Nazi Party. But, Oertelt focused his efforts on helping students understand it from their perspective. When Hitler took over, he explained, people who had been unemployed for 15 years suddenly had jobs. They could buy things for their families, and people saw a leader who kept his promises. With this new prosperity, people were willing to write-off some of the strange things he was doing and saying. After only two months in power, the first concentration camp opened.

Discrimination continued to grow gradually. Ortelt asked students to imagine being a soccer team captain, like he was, and being told one day, "We don't want any Jews on the team. Get out of here."

Imagine, he asked, being a 14-year-old student who's called to the principal's office and told that he

Even in America and the 21st century, misconceptions and fabrications about Jewish history and culture are still being perpetuated. Henry Ortelt, Holocaust survivor, shared his personal story of survival and his journey with Lincoln High School choir students who are preparing for their "Woven Voices, Woven Threads" production.

TRF Veterans Day program

Gary Klemetson
VFW 9th District Commander

Veterans of Foreign Wars 2793 and American Legion Post 117 of Thief River Falls will conduct a Veterans Day service 11 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 10, in the auditorium of Lincoln High School.

The guest speaker for this year's event will be Gary Klemetson, VFW 9th District Commander, Thief River Falls. Klemetson graduated from Greenbush High School in 1967. He joined the U.S. Navy in 1970 and served two tours in Vietnam 1970-1972, and one tour during the Persian Gulf War (1990-1991). Klemetson retired from the U.S. Navy in 1995 as a Senior Chief Petty officer (BCS).

He joined the VFW as a life member in 1990 in Roseau, and transferred to Thief River Falls Post 1793 in 1996. After serving in various committees and chairs in the Post, he was elected commander for two years (1999-2001). After serving various positions on the Ninth District board, he was elected commander of the Ninth District VFW in 2005.

Participants in last year's Boys and Girls State also will be introduced during the service. The program also calls for advancing and retiring of the colors and a recitation of the pledge of allegiance.

Funding the extras for the REA

The goal of $3,025,000 has been raised for Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA), but fundraisers continue to seek funds for extras at the arena. Some pledges are ~~also~~ still being paid because donors chose to pay their pledges over a five-year period.

So far, the total in-kind donations, cash donations and pledges have reached $3,212,962. This amount was raised as a result of the gifts and pledges of 721 individuals and businesses.

"The donations thus far have helped immeasurably in making the Ralph Engelstad Arena user friendly," said Jerry and Marilyn Wigness, two of the fundraisers working on the project.

About $445,000 remains to come in under the pledges made for the project. The Wignesses said they are confident a high percentage of those pledges will be forthcoming and it is their hope that all of those pledges will be paid.

"Things have been bought and paid for that we have to pay the city back for. That's why the pledges are so important," Marilyn Wigness said.

The task of fundraising began in September 2002 with the initial goal of $3,025,000. That money was intended to be used for the "extras" that were needed after Ralph Engelstad indicated in February 2002 that he was offering $10 million to the city of Thief River Falls for a new ice hockey arena.

Those extras included infrastructure, a road on the westside of the arena, parking lots and lighting, landscaping/perimeter sidewalks, the Imperial Room, exterior renovation of the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center, the scoreboard, the zamboni, weight room equipment, concessions equipment, training

TRF: Learning more about Wal-Mart

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

The soon-to-be-completed Wal-Mart store has been the talk of Thief River Falls for several years, and now Lincoln High School (LHS) classes are getting into the discussion.

Two LHS social studies classes, global issues taught by Kenny Geiser and geography taught by Mike Nordine, have been studying Wal-Mart this fall.

Given that it's a polarizing issue and also that some people weren't aware or were apathetic about Wal-Mart, Geiser decided to create a lesson plan about the company. That decision was also made after Geiser argued with his wife about Wal-Mart, talked to a Thief River Falls grocery store owner and read newspaper articles on the issue.

"I really think [the students] got a lot out of it," said Geiser. "Actually, they surprised me with the quality of the arguments and knowledge."

Geiser noted he had the students read articles about Wal-Mart in the Thief River Falls Times/Northern Watch; The Forum, Fargo, N.D.; and Minneapolis Star Tribune. He also had the students look at two Web sites about Wal-Mart, one operated by the company and another citing reasons to oppose Wal-Mart. "Basically what I did is throw as many resources at them as I could," Geiser said.

The global issues students filled out worksheets about the reading assignments as well as about the PBS video "Is Wal-Mart Good for America?" Geiser also facilitated discussions among the students about Wal-Mart, and the students had a debate.

Earlier this month, Lincoln High School students Chesnay Doblas and Micah Sheridan worked together to complete a bulletin board about their class' price comparison study that compared Wal-Mart's prices to other retailers' prices. As part of a unit on Wal-Mart, the global issues class did a price comparison study of 21 items that may be found at that store, Hugo's, SuperOne Foods, Kmart, Pamida and Target. Kenny Geiser teaches the global issues class.

Students take sides

The following two essays were written by global issues students at Lincoln High School. They wrote these position papers as part of a unit on Wal-Mart. These essays were chosen by their instructor, Kenny Geiser. With the exception of spelling, punctuation and pronoun usage errors, the essays are reprinted as they were written.

Negative impact

by Dyana Rambeck, LHS senior

Wal-Mart is on its way to Thief River Falls, and the town seems pretty excited. Another place to shop with a huge selection and low prices. Sounds too good to be true, right? Well, in many ways, it is.

Do you think Wal-Mart will bring more jobs to Thief River? Well, you're right, but they aren't exactly the best jobs you could find. The average pay for a sales clerk at Wal-Mart is $8.50 per hour, or $14,000 a year. That's $1,000 below the government's definition of the poverty level for a family of three.

That doesn't seem so bad until you realize that

by Evan Jones, LHS senior

In Thief River Falls, some residents don't know if a Wal-Mart Supercenter will be good or bad for the community. Many citizens of Thief River Falls worry that Wal-Mart will hurt our town by making other competing stores, such as Pamida, SuperOne, Twice But Nice, etc., go out of business. Others believe Wal-Mart will help Thief River Falls by encouraging other new businesses to join our growing city. From what I have heard and seen by watching the news, talking to friends and classmates, the thought of Wal-Mart helping or hurting the community is split.

Getting Fit Together

Curves leads women's fitness charge

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Described as a gym where women change their life, 30 minutes at a time, Curves is believed to be the largest fitness franchise in the world, with more than 9,000 locations.

The Thief River Falls location on LaBree Ave. N., opened its doors in June 2001. The club currently hosts nearly 180 members. Owner Jill Knott said most members are from Thief River Falls, but many travel from surrounding communities like Red Lake Falls, Karlstad and Newfolden.

"The nice thing about Curves, is you can use any Curves facility in the United States," Knott said, noting that the Curves program is for all ages. In Thief River Falls members as young as age 11 and as old as 83 have joined the program

When joining the fitness center, new members will visit with Knott or another staff member and discuss the prospective member's medical history and her goals.

Next, the new Curves member is introduced to the Curves lifestyle, which includes an introduction to a manageable diet and a resistance training program. Both aspects are based on the simple fact that a body's metabolism can be increased by incorporating resistance training and cardio vascular exercise into a 30 minute workout, while controlling the amount of food consumed.

According to the report, Kaminski told police he accidentally ran into the mailboxes while looking for a friend's house. Kaminski was cited for disorderly conduct.

Fourth degree driving while intoxicated: While on patrol Nov. 5, police allegedly observed a vehicle with malfunctioning taillights on Highway 59 South. Sara Ruth Kleinvachter, 31, East Grand Forks, has been cited for fourth degree driving while intoxicated.

If readers have any information about the aforementioned crimes or offenses, they are urged to contact the Law Enforcement Center at 681-6161.

These reports include names of individuals charged, arrested or cited with various crimes and offenses by police, the sheriff's department or other law enforcement officials. Depending upon the circumstances of a case, charges can be, and sometimes are, changed or dropped by law enforcement officials or attorneys even before the case reaches court. Readers should also realize that under the American system of jurisprudence, individuals charged with crimes are innocent until proven guilty of those crimes in a court of law.

Winter parking restrictions begin Nov. 15

Winter parking restrictions begin Tuesday, Nov. 15 in the city of Thief River Falls. No parking will be allowed from 6 to 9 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays on avenues, which span north and south; and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays on streets, which span east and west. It also means that vehicles should not be left idling on designated streets or avenues. The winter parking restrictions, which will be in effect until March 15, 2006, facilitate snow removal.

Police Chief Kim Murphy reminds owners of campers, boats or other vehicles parked this past summer and fall on Thief River Falls streets and avenues to move their vehicles or the vehicles will be moved for them.

Falls Radiator Service and The Shop will be towing those vehicles parked illegally. If your vehicle is towed, call Greg Dally at Falls Radiator Service (681-2277) or Jeff Brouse at The Shop (681-8531).

Impounded cars

Owners of cars impounded at the police impound lot will be assessed $25 for the first day at the impound lot and $5 for each day thereafter. They have to provide proof of insurance and current registration. A licensed driver is also required to drive the vehicle out of the impound lot.

Parking fines increase Jan. 1

Calendar parking fines and other parking fines increase from $10 to $15 effective Jan. 1. The increased fines are due to increases in the actual cost of the tickets and the labor costs involved, Murphy said. The late fees will remain the same.

Nov. 7-11 marks Winter Hazard Awareness Week

There's a tired old joke that goes, "You might live in Minnesota if you've ever worn shorts and a parka on the same day."

The National Weather Service (NWS) said that Minnesota has had opportunities; there have been days that started with short sleeves and ended with snowshoes. That's why Winter Hazard Awareness Week will go on Nov. 7-11 as scheduled, despite mild temperatures.

"We're stuck with this unusual weather," said Tim Leslie, assistant commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Public Safety. "But the message is the same: Get ready now because winter is coming!"

Winter weather can be life threatening. Intense cold fosters potentially fatal problems with home heating and fireplaces, slippery roads, blinding snow and hypothermia. "These are serious hazards, but proper preparations can reduce your risks of a serious problem," Leslie said.

Residents are reminded that:

- Advisories are issued by the NWS when conditions warrant increased public awareness, but the weather is not severe enough to merit a warning.
- NWS issues a winter storm watch when severe winter conditions, such as heavy snow and/or ice, are possible within the next 12 to 48 hours.
- NWS issues a winter storm warning when severe winter weather conditions are occurring or expected to occur within a few hours.
- A blizzard warning is issued when considerable falling and/or blowing snow, frequent visibility of less than one-quarter mile and frequent wind speeds of at least 35 mph are expected.
- A ground-blizzard warning is issued when visibilities are reduced to less than one-quarter mile due to existing snow cover being blown about. The sky might be clear, but strong winds cause near-zero visibility in blowing snow.
- Wind chill is the cooling effect on exposed skin produced by the combination of temperature and wind.

A major component of Winter Hazard Awareness Week is a fact-filled Web site accessible from the Department of Public Safety Web site (www.dps.state.mn.us). Information is organized by topic for media, safety professionals, educators, families and individuals. Artwork, fact sheets and workbooks are downloadable. The site includes clear instructions on avoiding and minimizing risks with tools to help individuals figure out wind-chill factors, pack a winter survival kit and determine travel conditions using 1-511.

October traffic crash totals: 22 deaths, 26 serious injuries

The Minnesota Department of Public Safety announced Nov. 1 that preliminary Minnesota State Patrol traffic crash reports indicate 22 people died in 20 crashes and 26 were seriously injured on the state's roads in October. To date, the statewide preliminary traffic death number is 445. There were 420 traffic deaths at this time last year.

The October deaths include 18 vehicle occupants, three motorcyclists and one pedestrian. Of the vehicle occupants killed, eight were not wearing seat belts. Of the 26 seriously injured, three were known to be wearing seat belts. Alcohol is a known factor in two fatal crashes. The State Patrol is investigating to determine if alcohol was a factor in nine fatal crashes.

There were three deaths each in Chippewa and Sherburne counties, two deaths in Crow Wing and Goodhue counties, and one death each in Pennington, Aitkin, Anoka, Lake, Mille Lacs, Mower, Ramsey, Redwood, St. Louis, Steele, Wabasha and Wright counties.

Of the 22 deaths, 16 were male. The deaths were distributed among many age groups: three were under 20, four were in their 20s, six were in their 30s, two were in their 40s and seven were 50 or older.

Mn/DOT counts on snowplow operators' skills and public support

As the state prepares to face the winter season, one thing is certain: Somewhere in Minnesota, there will be snow. Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn/DOT) snowplow operators are urging motorists now to help them clear roads safely by cooperating during winter driving conditions.

"We have dedicated, hard-working snowplow operators in Mn/DOT," said Transportation Commissioner Carol Molnau, who also serves as the state's lieutenant governor. "As they have in the past, they will do their best to keep the roadways clear and safe. Those of us driving in winter conditions need to use caution, drive safely and give the snowplow a chance to work. We urge motorists to stay back, and stay alive."

Each year, Minnesota records an average of 93 crashes involving snowplows. The crashes result in an average of 16 injuries per year.

"Safe, sensible driving by the state's motorists remains a key element in our efforts to keep the state's highways safe," said Molnau. "The best choice for motorists during a snowstorm is to avoid unnecessary travel. But, if you have to travel, be patient and give the plows time and room to remove the snow."

More than 1,500 Mn/DOT employees will climb into the 800 snowplows to clear the 12,000 miles of state roadway this winter. The snowplow operators do not work alone. Maintenance supervisors will use technology to guide them with constant updates on weather, pavement and traffic conditions.

"The technology and roadway information systems enhance our ability to remove snow and ice," said Bob Winter, Mn/DOT's director of district operations. "They help us make the most of our resources and do the work more efficiently and quickly."

Mn/DOT maintenance supervisors can choose, for example, to use anti-icing chemicals before a winter storm begins to keep ice and snow from bonding with the pavement surface. Or, if a storm has started, the best choice might be to use deicing chemicals in addition to plowing to remove snow and ice from the roadways.

Most Mn/DOT trucks are equipped with onboard equipment that sprays the multi-ton loads of sand and salt with brine or other liquid chemicals that jump-start the salt's snow-melting capability and helps the sand and salt stick to the road surface.

To coordinate the snowplowing effort, Mn/DOT uses radio communications that link snowplows with each other and with a supervisor. Managers can move plows to where they are most needed or divert snowplows to support law enforcement agencies in case of a crash or other highway emergency.

"Winter is a season that makes Minnesota a wonderful and unique place to live," Molnau said. "Snow and ice are part of that season. Mn/DOT is ready to work with travelers on our roadways this year to make winter travel as safe as possible so we all can get where we need to safely."

Mn/DOT urges drivers to follow these safety steps this winter:

- Slow down and stay behind the snowplows. Drivers should allow at least five car lengths between their vehicles and snowplows. The road behind the plow will be the safest place to drive;
- Be particularly aware of black ice conditions on surfaces such as bridge decks and entrance and exit ramps;
- Turn on headlights and turn off cruise control settings.

Motorists can obtain timely weather and road condition reports by calling 1-5-1-1 or logging onto www.511mn.org. More information is also available at www.mndot.gov.

TRF man sentenced for felony drug charge

A Thief River Falls man was sentenced Oct. 31 in Pennington County District Court on a felony drug charge.

Kurt Donovan Nelson, 45, pled guilty to a charge of fifth degree controlled substance crime. In a plea agreement, a charge of possession of marijuana in a motor vehicle was dismissed. A five-year stay of imposition was granted. Nelson was sentenced to 60 days in jail – 30 days of that sentence are to be served in jail and the remaining 30 days are to be served on electronic home monitoring. He was also ordered to serve supervised probation for five years. Nelson was given credit for time served. Huber privileges were granted. An alcohol assessment was ordered.

On June 19, State Patrol troopers observed a vehicle with a malfunctioning headlight behind them while they were on patrol along Highway 32. They later observed that the vehicle, which was driven by Nelson, had a malfunctioning taillight as well. Once they pulled the vehicle over, Nelson moved furtively. Crystal methamphetamine, marijuana and drug paraphernalia were found in the vehicle. The criminal complaint did not list how much meth or marijuana were found in the vehicle.

National Domestic Violence Awareness Month commemorated

October 2005 marked the 19th annual commemoration of National Domestic Violence Awareness Month. During the month, Violence Intervention Project (VIP) of Thief River Falls provided presentations and educational materials to several community organizations, with a primary focus on youth and children. Early education and awareness is a key violence prevention strategy.

On Oct. 28, Jan Wikstrom, VIP executive director, gave a presentation to 30 students in a Social Problems class at Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC). The class focused on the topic of violence and abuse in intimate and family relationships that week, and Wikstrom presented supplemental information about the services VIP offers to respond to violence and abuse. She gave information about how to be alert to and then avoid the recognizable behaviors of batterers. Information was also provided to help abuse victims recognize if their partner is making real efforts to change.

In addition, the Clothesline Project was on display at NCTC's East Grand Forks campus for the first two weeks of the month and was on display in the main lobby at the Thief River Falls campus for the final two weeks of October. The project is a vehicle for women affected by violence to express their emotions by decorating a shirt. They then hang the shirt on a clothesline to be viewed by others as testimony to the problem of violence against women.

Besides that commemoration of Domestic Violence Awareness Month, VIP distributed brochures to Lincoln High School about sexual harassment, dating violence, rape/sexual assault, and VIP services.

At Franklin Middle School in Thief River Falls, two advocates from VIP presented information about bullying and sexual harassment to the sixth grade class as a part of its in-school retreat.

Thief River Falls firefighters were on the scene for about an hour, and St. Hilaire firefighters were on the scene for about an hour and a half, according to the departments.

Horticultural Society holds fall workshop

"Gartners' Oktoberfest," Autumn Germany, was the theme for the annual fall workshop and annual meeting of the 13th District Horticultural Society in Roseau, Oct. 15. Hosted by the Roseau Garden Club, the event was held at Messiah Lutheran Church, which was festively decorated with many gourds.

The morning speaker was Carol Amundson of Wannaska, who gave a talk and demonstration on growing and drying flowers and other plants. She described how to grow various plants, when to pick them for drying and how to dry them. Basically, they need to be dried in a warm, dark place with low humidity. Amundson displayed a number of samples, including grains, wild plants (what some people call weeds), herbs and annual and perennial flowers. Some specimens were flowers while others were seedheads.

The noon luncheon featured German dishes - cabbage, apple salad, a selection of homemade breads, harvest vegetables baked with beef and root beer.

The afternoon speaker was Howard Person, extension educator in Thief River Falls and Warren. His topic was "How to not fight Nature (galls)."

Person showed slides and talked about many different types of galls. The insects that cause or make the galls enter the plant in very early spring when the leaf and flower buds on the tree are just starting to open. Once you see the gall you cannot control them. The gall is their home they have built that protects them. He also showed slides of many different plant diseases and what can and cannot be done about them. Some of the diseases, including the galls, do not damage the plant, they are an aesthetic problem. One new control method for fire blight that he mentioned was to wait to prune out the diseased branches until the tree is dormant; prune in March before the sap starts to flow in the tree. The disease organism will not spread as easily when the tree is dormant and the wound will soon heal from pruning when the tree starts growing in late April.

The 13th District Horticultural Society annual meeting was also held during this event. The office of president and treasurer were up for election. Lori Peppel of Roseau and NaChur Garden Club, was re-elected as treasurer. Betty Mohrbacher of Warroad and the Gro-Rite Garden Club, was elected president. Norma Hanson will now become the district advisor, as she was not eligible for re-election. Norma Hanson, retiring president, installed the new officers. Representatives of the various clubs in the District gave brief reports on the activities of their clubs in the past year.

A photo contest and birdhouse building contest was held. There were about 30 entries in the photo contest and about 10 birdhouses. Marv Lundin of Thief River Falls, was the judge. Cash prizes were given to the first, second and third place winners in each of the five photo contest categories, and two birdhouse categories. Marv gave some pointers on taking pictures and what he looks for in a good picture.

The day included a Country Store of donated garden items, a drawing for door prizes and the event closed with a silver tea.

Individuals interested in being a part of a garden club can contact any garden club member or the local county extension office. The next district-wide event will be the spring workshop, which will take place in March in Thief River Falls.

Redeemer Church hosts 15th annual First Care Hospice Spaghetti Supper

The 15th Annual First Care Hospice Spaghetti Supper Benefit raised $4,256 to benefit hospice care for terminally ill patients and their families. The event was held on Monday, Oct. 3, at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Thief River Falls. Redeemer Lutheran and Black River Church volunteers teamed with hospice volunteers and staff to provide spaghetti with fresh vegetables and garlic bread and homemade bars.

Funds were matched by Marshall County Chapter of Thrivent Financial For Lutherans, as well as Pennington-Red Lake County Chapter of Thrivent Financial for Lutherans. Other event sponsors included Pizza Hut, Danny's Pizza, Thief River Falls Times, Thief River Falls Radio and KSRQ.

Proceeds from the spaghetti dinner help make hospice care possible. Across the U.S., Hospice's cost of care is 10-20 percent more than Medicare reimbursement, according to the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization.

The Hospice Patient Care Team supports both the terminally ill patient and the family by easing pain – physically, emotionally and spiritually. Hospice care is provided wherever their patient is: at home, in a nursing home, or in residential care.

Services include:

- nurses who manage pain, symptoms, medications, patient family education and provide on-call support 24-7.
- Social workers address emotional issues, grief, advanced health-care directives and referrals.
- Chaplain provides spiritual care in accordance with patient/family/clergy wishes.
- Home health aides for personal cares, bathing, hair and skin care, and homemaking.
- Volunteers for respite care, companionship and errands.
- Medication and equipment related to terminal illness.
- Physical, speech and occupational therapy as necessary.

FSA County committee elections begin

Pennington County Farm Service Agency (FSA) Office County Executive Director John Nelson has announced that the election period for FSA county committees began Nov. 7, and is open through Dec. 5. Ballots were mailed to eligible producers on Nov. 7.

"FSA county committees help administer federal farm programs at the local level and it is vital that committees represent a cross-section of producers in each community,' said Nelson. "I encourage all eligible producers, especially minorities and women, to make a difference in their community by voting in this year's FSA county committee elections."

FSA county committees help ensure FSA agricultural programs serve the needs of local producers. FSA county committees provide input on commodity price support loans and payments, conservation programs and disaster assistance. FSA county committees operate within official regulations designed to carry out federal laws. Most FSA county committees consist of three to five members and may have one or more appointed advisers to further represent the interests of minority and women farmers and ranchers.

Agricultural producers who participate or cooperate in any FSA program, and are of legal voting age can vote. A person supervising and conducting the farming operations on an entire farm, but not of legal voting age, can also vote.

In Pennington County, ballots were sent to eligible farmers, ranchers and other agricultural producers located in Local Administrative Area (LAA) 1 on Monday, Nov. 7. LAA 1 includes the following townships: Black River, Bray, Norden, North, Numedal, Polk Centre and Sanders. Eligible producers should contact their local FSA offices if they do not receive a ballot. All ballots must be returned to the voter's FSA office or be postmarked by Dec. 5, 2005.

The candidate receiving the most votes serves a three-year term as the elected County Committee member. The person receiving the second most votes serves as second alternate for three years.

Approximately one-third of the nearly 8,000 committee seats nationwide are up for election annually. Newly elected FSA county committee members and alternates take office Jan. 1, 2006.

Producers can learn more about FSA county committees by contacting a local FSA office or online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/.

NCTC Autumn Musicale scheduled for Nov. 15

Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) will host the 34th annual Autumn Musicale Tuesday, Nov. 15. The concert will take place at 6 p.m. in the NCTC theater, featuring the Northland Community Band, the Northland High School Honor Band and the NCTC Jazz Band.

The culmination of the work the groups have done this semester will be presented to the public. Admission is $4. For more information, contact Linda Samuelson at the NCTC Music Department at 681-0733.

The Community Band will perform six selections at the evening concert. It will open with "Barnum and Bailey's Favorite March," written by Karl L. King and arranged by Glenn Cliffe Bainum. The march will lead into "Ginger Marmalade," a short contemporary composition with notated clapping and stomping by the band. The next two selections are the second and third movements of a triptych arranged by William Schuman for concert band. Both compositions are based on hymns by William Billings during the American Revolution – "When Jesus Wept," and "Chester (overture for band)." The most intriguing of the pieces is "Six Contrary Dances" by P.D.Q. Bach and Professor Peter Schickele. The band will perform three of the six tongue-in-cheek compositions. The final piece for the concert band is "The Symphonic Gershwin," which is a medley of three symphonic compositions by Gershwin: "An American in Paris," "Cuban Overture" and "Rhapsody in Blue."

The Northland Community Band has 35 members from Thief River Falls and surrounding communities. Musicians from as far away as Roseau, Warroad and Fertile drive to Thief River Falls Monday nights for a two-hour rehearsal. The ages of the band members range from high school students to college students to retired members of the community. The band meets in the fall to prepare for the Autumn Musicale and again in the spring for the annual spring concert as well as NCTC graduation. Involvement in the ensemble is based on interest, and interested individuals are encouraged to contact Linda Samuelson at NCTC if they wish to take part in this community ensemble during second semester.

The Northland Jazz Band will also be performing at this fall concert. The group also meets Monday nights and currently has 16 members. The musicians in this group also drive long distances to take part in this musical opportunity.

The Jazz Band is scheduled to perform four selections for the Autumn Musicale. "It Don't Mean a Thing (If It Ain't Got That Swing)" is a familiar and solid swing opener, and its second selection will be "All Blues," a modal selection by Miles Davis. The third piece is "Mambo Inn," which is a rhythmically intricate Latin selection. To wrap up its segment, the band will perform "Alright, Okay, You Win," made famous by Miss Peggy Lee.

The High School Honor Band comprised of area students will take the stage last. The students selected to play in the Honor Band represent the top musicians from area high schools. They received their music in advance of the rehearsals and have prepared in advance for the two rehearsals in final preparation for the Autumn Musicale. The stage will be filled with this 67-member ensemble.

The High School Honor Band will play "Hosts of Freedom," a march written by Karl. L. King. The second selection is "Old Churches," a moody and interesting piece that utilizes two sets of four steel kitchen mixing bowls in the percussion section. The next piece, "Sinfonia VI," will feature several soloists in this brief four-movement work by Timothy Broege. The Honor Band portion of the program will be capped off with "Bayou Breakdown," written by Brant Karrick, which is fast-paced frolic through Cajun-inspired music.

Then a full buffet meal will be followed by a brief, professionally-produced presentation with a central theme of pipeline safety and incident response. ### ...Veteran's Day

Friday is Veterans Day, a day in which we honor those who sacrificed for our country. In his 2006 Veterans Day Proclamation, the president of the United States has asked that all Americans observe the entire week of November 6 through 12 as National Veterans Awareness Week in order to "recognize the valor and sacrifice of our veterans through ceremonies and prayers." He further asks that communities display the flag on these days, as well as observe patriotic activities to commemorate the week.

Veterans Day began in 1918 to commemorate the end of World War I. It was called Armistice Day. After World War II, Armistice Day became Veterans Day, as it is today, in honor of all who fought and died in America's wars.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Washington DC, has become the traditional place of the national observance of Veterans Day. The Tomb presently holds the remains of three unknown servicemen, one from World War I, one from World War II, and one from the Korean War. The remains of Air Force 1st Lt. Michael J. Blassie, who served during the Vietnam War, were identified and reinterred in his hometown. It has been ruled that the Vietnam War tomb will remain empty.

The first unknown soldier to lie in the Tomb was chosen in 1921 in an unusual way. He was to be a symbol of all the unknown dead in World War I. In Germany, one American soldier was picked to choose the casket containing the remains of an unknown soldier who would be honored in the Rotunda of the Capitol in Washington, D.C.

Prior to choosing the single casket among four containing his fallen comrades, the soldier, Sgt. Edward F. Younger of the 59th Infantry, was presented with a bouquet of white roses. He bowed his head, and then walked around the caskets four times. As he circled the caskets, he felt drawn to one particular one. Reverently, he placed the roses on the casket, saluted and reported his choice to his commanding officer.

The casket was brought home on the ship, Olympia, and reached Washington, D.C., on Nov. 9, 1921. For three days, the body lay in state in the Capitol, with thousands of people paying respects. Flags were flown at half-mast when the casket was placed in the tomb in an elaborate ceremony on November 11, and President Warren Harding requested that all Americans pay tribute in their own ceremonies on that day (as they do to the present time). Wreaths from around the country, as well as from foreign countries, were placed on the plain white marble tomb.

Upon the tomb were the words, "Here rests in honored glory an American Soldier Known but to God." And the words are still there today.

Remember all who have sacrificed in our country's wars this week. Remember those who sacrifice every day. Please pray for them.

PARENTING TIPS

Discipline

"Can't you make your children behave?" "What that child needs is some good discipline."

Maybe you have either heard or said something like these two comments. Unfortunately, these comments are not very helpful for anyone. They are too vague. Exactly what does "behave" mean? What does "discipline" mean? For both adults and children, it is far more helpful to say exactly what you mean.

For some people, the word discipline means punishment. I prefer the dictionary meaning of "to train." If we are going to train children as to what is acceptable and what is not acceptable, then it seems to me we would have to do two things: First to be specific and then to let them know what to do every time they do something they shouldn't.

For example, if your discipline consists of: "Stop that," "No," "Don't do that" and nothing else, I would expect a young child to continue the misbehavior. Why? Two reasons:

1) You did not tell him/her what to stop and

2) You did not tell him/her what to do instead.

A more effective approach would be to say: "Stop jumping on the couch. Couches are for sitting only. If you want to jump, you will have to go to the basement."

Try thinking of yourself as a teacher or trainer and then discipline your children in a way that will teach or train.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about outdoors and what you see when you look out the window. Do you see trees, birds, squirrels? Cars, buildings? Describe what you see by color, size, shape, etc.

Life is full of risks

For reasons of public safety, I don't hunt. If I aimed for the broad side of a barn, I wouldn't just miss--I would hit the nearest picture window and the television behind it.

The world is better off without my finger on the trigger of anything. I would be the one to shoot a cow, or a fuel tank, or a combine, convinced they had antlers.

That's why I quit golf, too. I didn't want to get sued. The last round I played (I can say this because it was in California) I hit two houses. That was on the first three holes. Figuring I didn't make the cut, I put away the clubs and rode out the round on the cart.

Earlier in my golfing career, I hooked a ball on the first hole in Erskine which hit near a car on Highway 59 and ricocheted about a dozen times between the car's undercarriage and the highway before rolling into the ditch.

Thank goodness the car didn't stop. They were probably just glad that annoying noise quit without them having to replace the U-joints.

That was when I was young enough to think hitting a car with a golf ball was quite funny. Now that I am old enough to be familiar with lawsuits, liability, insurance premiums, insurance companies and lawyers with big billboards and toll-free numbers, I have become a student of risk-avoidance.

Of course, if you take risk-avoidance to the logical extreme you'd never get out of bed.

In fact, getting out of bed is one of the most dangerous things we can do.

When I get out of bed, all the blood drains out of my brain and things go blank for a little while and I forget where the furniture is and stub my toe, or I get the count wrong on the stairs and think I am at the bottom when I have one or two more to go. Whump.

According to my male elders, this getting-up-in-the-middle of the night thing is just going to get worse with age. I wonder if Blue Cross has that figured in - all those trips to the bathroom in the dark.

Dumb question, forget I asked.

Despite the risks, getting out of bed doesn't threaten anybody but me, so I go ahead with it most mornings, even if it leads to nothing but trouble.

Trouble like backing out of the garage. I haven't tried to back through the garage door yet, but I did bend the frame on my last pickup by smashing into an oak tree outside the garage. That woke me up. Oak trees have very little give.

The problem there was I tried to drive without having drank enough coffee. It is always risky to jump out of bed, have the blood rush out of your brain, then jump behind the wheel of a car without drinking a few cups of coffee first.

Another rule: Never drive a tractor while angry. Forget cold medication, anger is the biggest danger while operating heavy machinery.

Of course, when you're in a good groove, running a tractor can be utter bliss. That's why so many men do so much of it. Running big machines back and forth over things can put you in a pleasant trance. It's nature's tranquilizer.

But if some person I don't like makes an unwelcome appearance in my brain while I am driving tractor, it isn't long before things fall apart and I hook fences with the cultivator or drive off without putting the gas cap on or all of the above.

So, life is full of risks. You take some and avoid others. The best advice is to take things slow.

That's why I drive a steady 53 miles-per-hour on the highway. Pass me if you like, you people-in-a-hurry. I just got out of bed, I may not have had enough coffee yet, and I want to get there in one piece.

Should I take advantage of early payment price discounts?

by Greg Kalinoski
Farm Business Management

"Does buying and paying early for my seed and other supplies save me money?" "How much can I save?" "What if I have to borrow the money?" These are some of the questions I have received as companies are promoting their products for the 2006 growing season. There are a wide variety of early payment discounts, cash discounts, company financing programs and quantity savings programs to choose from among the many vendors.

Many early payment programs offer their largest discounts in November and December with the percentage of discount dropping each month. For example, the savings available to a customer buying and paying a $10,000 seed bill Dec. 15 versus April 15 at an 8-percent discount would be $800 for four months or one-third of a year. Dividing 8 percent by 120 days gives you a discount of 0.067 percent per day times 365 days, which gives you an annual value of 24 percent on the early pay discount.

"What if I have to borrow to take advantage of an early-pay discount?" You'll still come out ahead as long as the annual rate of the discount exceeds the interest rate on your borrowed money. If you are using the same discount of $800, borrowing $9,200 at 7.5 percent, the interest would be $230 for four months. Add this to the $9,200 equals a total cost of $9,430. That is still a $570 savings compared to waiting until April 15 to pay for the seed. This gives you an annual rate of 18 percent by buying and paying early.

Buying and paying early increases the chance of getting the hybrids and inputs that meet your needs. When making your buying decisions, don't overlook some of the financing programs offered by the various companies as some of them can be very favorable. Other considerations for buying are the tax advantages of prepaying for 2006 inputs and reducing your 2005 taxable income.

His career in carpentry started with, and included his employment with Charlie Pohl of Cook, a contracting business with Lawrence Heglund called K & H Builders, and also during that time a period of self employment.

In 1969, the family moved to Thief River Falls when Bob became an instructor of carpentry at the Thief River Falls Area Vocational Technical Institute. ## Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Monthly Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits for more than 52 million Americans will increase 4.1 percent in 2006 with the recently announced cost-of-living adjustment (COLA). Included will be Social Security benefits to about 114,167 North Dakota and 775,460 Minnesota residents of all ages. Actual changes in your check might be slightly more or less than this 4.1 percent figure. Based on 1973 legislation, automatic COLA's were first paid in 1975 to help prevent inflation from eroding Social Security and SSI benefits.

SSI is a federal need-based program administered by Social Security and funded by general revenues, not Social Security taxes. COLA amounts are based on the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W), from the third quarter of the prior year to the corresponding period of the current year. This year's increase in the CPI-W was 4.1 percent. When you see this increase arrive, depends on the type of benefits you receive. It begins with Social Security checks for December 2005, to be received in January 2006, and with SSI checks to be received December 30, 2005. More information about the COLA and some other changes that take effect in January 2006 are on the SSA Web site www.socialsecurity.gov.

It is important to note that no one's Social Security benefit will decrease as a result of the 2006 Medicare Part B premium increase to $88.50, recently announced by the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) - Center for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), the agency responsible for Medicare. By law, the Part B premium increase cannot be larger than a person's Social Security cost of living increase. More details about 2006 Medicare premiums are at "frequently asked questions" on the Medicare Web site, www.medicare.gov.

Another change taking effect in January, 2006, is that the maximum taxable wages subject to Social Security tax will increase to $94,200 from $90,000. This will not impact most people, only those earning more than $90,000 annually. People receiving Social Security benefits continue to pay SSA and Medicare related payroll taxes if employed or self-employed.

First Care celebrates National Home Care and Hospice Month

More than 4.5 million Americans prefer to be treated at home when they're sick, according to First Care Medical Services. They prefer the security and comfort of their own beds in their own homes, which is why First Care is celebrating National Home Care & Hospice Month this November. This year's national theme is "When You Are Well, and Especially When You Are Sick, There Is No Place Like Home."

Why do they celebrate? More than just providing excellent care where and when patients need and want it, home care and hospice saves the United States and commercial health insurers billions of health care dollars each year, according to First Care. It noted there is no more cost-effective provider of health care in the U.S.

With the exception of surgery, modern home care has all the bell and whistles of hospital care. Home care providers work diligently to keep Americans in their homes. As Thanksgiving approaches, remember those who provide home care. They make a difference everyday for seniors, disabled individuals and infirm people. They make it possible for home care to be where the healing begins.

"Caring for the sick, elderly and dying in their homes truly is a privilege for us," said Audrey Hanson, RN, with First Care's Home Care & Hospice. "Home care and hospice professionals, volunteers and modern medicine make it possible for most people to stay in their homes where they want to be."

Founded in 1984, First Care's Home Care & Hospice provides comprehensive home health and hospice care from its Fosston headquarters with branch offices in Thief River Falls and Fertile. Its team of professionals and volunteers provides services ranging from high tech nursing and medical care to basic assistance with the activities of daily living for elderly, disabled, chronically or terminally ill people in the comfort of their own homes.

It is kicking off the monthlong celebration by hosting an employee celebration potluck. Other events are also planned to notify the public about home care and hospice.

"The most frequent comment we hear from patients and families is they wish they would have had hospice care earlier, so it's important for our community to be aware of services provided before they are needed – both home care and hospice," Hanson said.

room equipment, dry floor (ice covering), basketball floor, office fixtures, laundry room equipment and skate room equipment. All of those items have since been purchased.

Once the fundraising effort began, many individuals, including the Wignesses, stepped forward to assist in contacting prospective donors for this project. The volunteers' assistance led to the project's success.

The Wignesses continue to work in a second-floor conference room of Thief River Falls City Hall to process checks that are still coming in for REA extras. They are there Wednesday mornings, primarily due to the fact that five years were offered to people to pay their pledges.

The need continues for additional funds. To make a tax-deductible donation to the project, contact Jerry or Marilyn Wigness at home (681-4051).

Local family learns of pioneer relative's accomplishments

A group that included Terry and Judy Nelson, Thief River Falls, toured Germany and the Scandinavian nations of Denmark, Sweden and Norway in September. The group, which included Terry, Judy, John and Phillis Nelson of Sioux Falls, S.D., Bernice Nelson Peterson of Thief River Falls, and her cousins Char Stumpf and Barb Rivitz, both of Little Falls, visited family sights in each of the four nations during the trip.

One of the sights was a monument for Engebret Soot, (1786-1859) a relative of the family. Engebret Soot was born at the small farm "Soot" in Aurskog, Norway. As a young man he started working as a blacksmith and carpenter, but after a while he was building sawmills, dams and timber canals all over Aurskog. Timber merchants in Haslden (a town by the sea) soon realized his abilities and assigned him to simplify the timber transport over "Otticd," the short strip of land between the lake "Stora Le" and the lake "Oymarksjoen" in the continuing system of rivers and lakes called the "Haldenvassdraget."

In 1827, he completed the "Otteid canal." This new canal contributed considerably to the supply of timber to the sawmills in Halden. He was then hired as the floating inspector with the responsibility for the Haldenvassdraget" and settled down in a place called "Ostre Otteid."

In 1847-1849, he built the "Soot canal," Norway's first sluice canal. Through this canal system, the lakes and rivers of "Mangen" (Mangenvassdraget) was connected to the lakes and rivers all the way down to Halden (Haldenvassdraget). The Soot canal was in operation from 1849 to 1932.

What's unique about Soot canal is that Engebret Soot transformed a river (running north-east) to a timber canal transporting floating timber southwest (against the current) by building 13 sluice chambers and 16 sluice gates.

The Otteid canal and the Soot canal supplied Haldenvassdraget and thus the sawmills in Halden with a large quantity of timber. Engebret Soot later engineered the Haldenvassdraget canal system further south. Engebret Soot became quite famous for his engineering talent and abilities and he was summoned as an advisor and engineer all over the southern part of Norway and also to Gothenburg and "Gota canal" by Trollättan (another Swedish town).

Otter Tail offers several tips on space heaters

With high fuel oil, natural gas, and propane prices, many people are buying small electric space heaters to save. While it's true that heating with electricity may be less costly than heating with fossil fuels, Otter Tail Power Company offers these tips for buying and using portable electric space heaters.

- Don't fall for claims of added efficiency on overpriced electric space heaters. All electric space heaters operate at 100 percent efficiency. Because they convert all electricity to heat, they all are equally efficient so claims of added efficiency are false. A 1,000-watt heater uses 1 kilowatt-hour per hour of operation no matter what type of heater it is. (Heat pumps are the only option that can claim greater efficiency because these units capture free heat from the environment.) The type of heater you choose can help you feel more comfortable at a lower heat setting, ultimately reducing hours of operation and saving some money. For example, an electric heater that distributes warmth from a greater surface area, such as a portable baseboard or a radiator-shaped heater, can increase comfort by distributing heat more evenly. A small compact heater, meanwhile, can produce the same amount of heat but it will be more localized. Either will heat your room.
- Select a portable electric heater that has a thermostat so it doesn't run all the time. A unit with a good thermostat can help maintain a constant temperature and not overheat an area. If using one without a thermostat, consider operating it on a timer to avoid wasting energy and to avoid safety issues should the heater be left on when no one is home or attending it.
- Select the proper wattage for a portable electric space heater so it doesn't overload your electrical wiring and create a fire safety issue. Don't be tempted to buy a higher-wattage unit because of the additional heat it can deliver. The smaller the wattage the less likely it will overload your wiring. Portable electric heaters come in a variety of sizes. The most common are 1,000-watt and 1,500-watt units, and some have low, medium, or high settings. Obviously, 1,500-watt units will give more heat (5,120 Btu). But if you choose a higher wattage, it's also more critical to make sure that the electrical circuit you use is adequate. One sign of an overloaded circuit is blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers. Here are some other indicators.
- Make sure that the outlet into which you plug your portable electric space heater is tight fitting.
- Feel the outlet surface after the unit has operated for a while. If the outlet or the wall surrounding it become too warm, the wiring is becoming overloaded. Discontinue using that outlet for your heater and consider a lower-wattage heater.
- Do not use a circuit that has many other items plugged into it.
- Look for a portable electric heater that automatically shuts off if tipped over and that has protective casing over the heating element to avoid the potential for burns.
- Never use a portable electric space heater or any electric appliance near wet areas such as bathtubs and sinks.
- Keep portable electric space heaters away from flammable materials such as curtains, bedding, newspapers, etc.
- Read and follow manufacturer's instructions.

If you have any questions about safely operating a portable electric space heater or about how its use will affect your electric service bill, please call Otter Tail Power Company's Idea Center at 800-493-3299.

Blood Drive planned in Goodridge

On Thursday, Nov. 10, citizens of Goodridge will have an opportunity to make an important, personal contribution to the welfare of this community. Between 7:30 a.m. and noon on Nov. 10, a mobile drive will be held at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Cindi Kotrba, coordinator of the drive, would like everyone to consider this an invitation for personal action - the simple, satisfying action of donating blood for a person in great need. In about an hour participants give the most precious gift of all - the "Gift of Life."

In our area, approximately 5,000 units are needed each month to supply the needs of patients served by United Blood Services. This blood can only come from caring individuals - the human body is still the only source.

Appointments for this blood drive may be made by calling Sylvia Wiseth at 378-4117, or Audrey Rogalla at 681-2595.

This event is sponsored by the Goodridge Lion Tamers Lions Club.

Newfolden student is peer academic assistant for BSU

Trent Nelson of Newfolden is a peer academic assistant (PAA) at Bemidji State University for the 2005-2006 school year. Nelson is a sophomore majoring in geography.

As part of the First Year Residential Experience program, the PAAs aid university freshman in the transition from high school to college. Peer academic assistants work with students to help adjust socially as well as academically to campus life. In addition, the PAAs establish an academic action plan with each student to outline their goals, study habits and career direction.

Toi Wright presents Asian cuisine to gourmet cooking class

The Marshall County Central gourmet cooking class welcomed Thailand native Toi Wright to its classroom on Oct. 24. The class focuses on skills in cooking new and unusual food, including ethnic foods.

Wright showed the students how to make authentic Thai egg rolls. She visits the Asian Markets in Minneapolis to shop for authentic ingredients such as Tyj Spring Roll Pastry, and Tuong Ot Sac Biet Cho Cha Gio (sweetened chili sauce) which were used in her demonstration.

She explained the difference between Thai egg rolls and other Asian egg rolls. The main difference is that the Thai rolls are made with raw meat as opposed to cooked meat. She modeled the preparation, assembly and special cooking techniques as she talked her way through the process. Students and teachers were impressed with the delicious outcome.

Students also showed an interest by asking Wright many questions about her culture. Benjawan Toi Wonglean, also known as Toi, was born in Udon, Thailand. Udon is in the northeast part of Thailand. She came to the United States in 1982 when she was 29 years old. She liked the United States, so she moved here.

She met Chris, her husband, in Alaska in 1990. They moved to Michigan and later to Thief River Falls. She learned how to cook from her mother and grandmother.

The gourmet cooking class greatly appreciated that Wright took time out of her busy schedule as owner of Toi's Studio for Hair in Thief River Falls.

Polkas, waltzes return to airwaves each Saturday

Their show might be the last thing left to be restored following the ravages of the 1997 Red River flood.

After a seven-year hiatus and a frequency change, old-time music lovers Ron and Elsie Shereck returned to the public radio airwaves Saturday morning, Oct. 29, on KSRQ, Pioneer 90.1 FM.

The couple resides near Tabor. On Saturday, April 19, 1997, the Sherecks hosted their popular weekly old-time music show on KFJM in Grand Forks, just as the flood waters began to overtake large portions of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks. KFJM's transmitter site was damaged in the flood and was off the air for an extended period. The Sherecks, and their beloved mix of polkas, waltzes, and two-steps, did not return after the eventual recovery.

Elsie Shereck was never happy about the abrupt end to their program, which they had hosted for about four years. "It was just bang – it was done," she said.

"We walked out of the studio that morning and Grand Forks was going underwater," said Ron Shereck, who played in dance bands as a drummer and buttonbox player beginning in 1966.

But the time was finally right for a return to the airwaves. Ron and Elsie both agreed that there was a need for an outlet for these songs on the area radio dial.

"Some stations in the outlying areas, Grafton and Jamestown, have some old-time music, but it's preproduced," Ron said. "You lose a lot when it's not happening live in the studio."

"The Saturday Morning Barn Dance" features polka, waltz, two-step, and even country-western music from local and national acts, including Cathy Erickson, Odell Braaten, the Country Polkateers, and the Six Fat Dutchmen. "It's music that is good to dance to, so a lot of young people like it too," Elsie said.

Travis Ryder, Pioneer 90.1 manager, said the inaugural edition of the Sherecks' new program was a successful start, with one sponsor, Thygeson Construction, already on board, and a handful of enthusiastic listeners who had heard about the show by word of mouth.

"With wider publicity in the coming weeks, we expect this program to become a real phenomenon," Ryder said. "People are hungry for a program like this."

Musicians are invited to send in their recordings and information on upcoming appearances. The station is also seeking business and listener support for the new program. The station's mailing address is KSRQ, 1101 Highway One E., Thief River Falls, MN, 56701. Ryder's phone number is 218-681-0791. "The Saturday Morning Barn Dance" airs on Pioneer 90.1 FM each Saturday from 7 to 10 a.m.

New agricultural apprentice job training offered

People with a "green thumb" who are interested in a career working in the horticulture industry have a new opportunity, thanks to a partnership of a leading Minnesota agricultural organization and a leading Minnesota university.

The Communicating for Agriculture Exchange Program (CAEP) and the University of Minnesota, Crookston (UMC) are teaming up to offer a new, formal horticultural apprenticeship program. The apprenticeship program will feature practical, on-the-job training at Minnesota nurseries, garden centers and horticultural businesses, combined with online educational courses and applied technical information.

The Minnesota job Skills Partnership Program recently awarded a $260,000 grant to the joint UMC/CAEP horticultural apprenticeship project. UMC will develop 15 training modules and coursework instruction that will be delivered online through the university's Center for Adult Learning program. CAEP will manage the placement of apprentices and oversee their training programs at Communicating for Agriculture (CA) business member horticultural operations in both urban and rural areas of the state.

CA is a national nonprofit rural organization headquartered in Fergus Falls. CA has operated its own international agricultural exchange program for 20 years, which has grown to become the largest of its kind in the United States. This year, CAEP coordinated the placement of more than 1,500 trainees from more than 50 countries on host farms and ranches; nurseries, greenhouses, flowers and other horticultural operations; wineries; equine operations; turf management, citrus and other agribusinesses nationwide.

"We're excited about this new apprenticeship program. It will offer opportunity for advancement and the start of a rewarding career for people who have a passion for working with plants. And it will provide the practical skill development and training our landscape and horticultural business members tell us their industry needs," said Wayne Nelson, CA national president.

The new apprentice program will be an expansion of the international exchange program, providing practical and job skills development training for domestic workers. Upon completion of the training program and the online educational coursework, apprentices will receive an apprenticeship certificate to assist them in improving their earnings and advancing their careers into management in the industry. Linder's Greenhouses & Garden Centers, Gerten's Wholesale Nursery Center, Wagner's, Bergen's Greenhouses and Bailey Nurseries are among CA business member companies involved in the project. All have hosted CAEP international trainees for several years.

"The face of agriculture in Minnesota is changing," said Dr. Richard Nelson, UMC's associate vice chancellor of Academic Affairs. "While production agriculture's raising of crops and livestock still dominates, other types of specialty agriculture and related businesses like horticulture are increasing their presence and role in the overall industry. This type of training available online and through apprenticeships will allow industry the ability to educate their employees and be able to keep up with changes in the workforce."

For more information about the apprenticeship program, go to www.caepusa.org or call CA at 1-800-432-3276.

Hugo's, SuperOne Foods, Kmart, Pamida, Target and Wal-Mart. The class created a list of products all of the stores may sell. Geiser noted that portion of the project wasn't as scientific as it could be due to the distance from Thief River Falls to the nearest Target and Wal-Mart. As a result, students picked only one day to go to those stores as opposed to going to the other stores several days and averaging out the prices they found. Geiser said the prices may also change if a shopper goes to a store when a particular sale is occurring or decides to go on another day when a sale is not occurring.

"You can still find your good deals at Kmart, SuperOne, Hugo's," said Geiser, who noted those stores and Pamida are already competitive due to their advertisements of sales. He added that Wal-Mart doesn't have a lot of sales.

With what they learned from the price comparison study and other assignments, students then wrote position papers in which they argued for or against a Wal-Mart store in Thief River Falls.

"I think it's a successful project because it's given us a lot of new viewpoints on the situation," said Mark Brown, a junior in the global issues class.

Brown learned the effects of a Wal-Mart store on other stores, he said. Brown referred to the possibility that a Wal-Mart store could close down other stores.

Up until he started the project, Brown was "in between" favoring and disliking the idea of a Wal-Mart in Thief River Falls, he said. However, once he worked on the project, he liked the idea of a Wal-Mart in the city and wrote a position paper in support of the company.

"[The project] was pretty fun," said Ryan Olson, a senior who noted he learned Wal-Mart was "not as good as what people think." Olson, who wrote a paper in opposition of the store for his global issues class, added that Wal-Mart shuts down small businesses and doesn't treat its employees fairly.

Senior Lucas Genereux, another student in the global issues class, wrote an essay in support of a Wal-Mart store in the city. "I think it's going to be good for the town itself," said Genereux, who noted the store may bring a lot of people to Thief River Falls from other nearby cities.

At the same time, Genereux noted he was against the company in the long run because Wal-Mart's lower prices may, in turn, cause its supplying manufacturers to send jobs to China.

Genereux and his classmates weren't the only LHS students to complete a unit on Wal-Mart. Nordine created a lesson plan similar to the one created by Geiser. However, his geography class studied Wal-Mart from a cultural standpoint. The class learned where Wal-Mart builds stores and what that means to those cities. Instead of doing a price comparison like Geiser's class, Nordine's class surveyed LHS students and teachers on whether they thought Wal-Mart was good or bad for Thief River Falls.

Its survey found 67 percent of the students and teachers completing the survey thought Wal-Mart was good for the city. Twenty-three percent had no opinion, and 10 percent thought it was bad for Thief River Falls. The survey also included such open-ended questions as where respondents would like to see the store located and in what ways Wal-Mart would be an advantage or disadvantage to Thief River Falls.

Wal-Mart's negative impact

doesn't include health benefits. You probably won't even get health benefits, unless you're in that lucky bunch of about half of Wal-Mart's 1.2 million workers that get health insurance with a $1,000 deductible. When you're making $14,000 a year, that doesn't sound too appealing.

So now you're thinking, "What if I don't need a job, I just want some low prices." Well, those low prices can come back to haunt you. The health care Wal-Mart won't pay for, you'll have to in taxes. With Wal-Mart's low benefits for their workers, many of them apply for Medicaid, food stamps and housing assistance. It's called the "Wal-Mart Tax," and it costs taxpayers $1.5 billion a year in federal tax dollars. That $1.5 billion doesn't include state tax dollars spent on Wal-Mart employees.

How about all the local business owners who expect a business boom when Wal-Mart rolls into town? Wal-Mart stores in the U.S. average $1 million in sales per week. A majority of sales that go to Wal-Mart comes from small businesses.

Wal-Mart chose to expand to Iowa some years back and studies showed that after an initial 3 percent spike in business for the competing retail stores, their business plummeted. Market analysts estimate that for every new Wal-Mart Supercenter that opens, two local supermarkets will close. Does Thief River Falls have that much to lose?

Forget Thief River Falls for a minute, and think of the impact Wal-Mart has on the nation. Besides all the money in taxes you pay thanks to the "Wal-Mart Tax," Wal-Mart is putting people out of jobs all over the country. Wal-Mart outsources its jobs to China, where it can pay workers 50 cents an hour to make items for their stores. This has caused factories to close all over the country.

So Wal-Mart is coming to town, are you still pretty excited? I believe that the things you risk to lose, small businesses and American jobs, is worth more than what you'd be gaining, low prices.

Wal-Mart's positive impact

Well, I, for one, am all for Wal-Mart coming to Thief River Falls. I believe that more good benefits from Wal-Mart will outweigh the bad. You just have to take a look at what Wal-Mart has done in the past for other communities and what it is doing now all over the state.

In Minnesota, Wal-Mart employs over 18,000 people and the average full-time wage is $10.53 per hour. For those who say that Wal-Mart is bad for other companies, in 2004, it spent over $2.9 billion for merchandise and services with 1,254 suppliers in the state of Minnesota. Last year, Wal-Mart gave over $2.4 million to local causes and organizations in the communities it serves.

Back in 2001, when Detroit Lakes opened its Wal-Mart Supercenter, its residents weren't sure on how the store would affect their community. Now Detroit Lakes' Wal-Mart employs 375 people and new businesses have opened near the store, including a Taco John's, a strip mall and a car wash. Mike Norby, a resident of Detroit Lakes, thinks that Wal-Mart has brought more people to town and has slowed the flow of customers going to Fargo to shop.

My friends and I go to Grand Forks maybe six or seven times a month. While we're there, we always go shopping at Wal-Mart because of its low prices. I know that there are a lot of people like us in Thief River. So I believe with Wal-Mart coming here, that more people would stay in Thief River to shop and would also draw in more customers from out of town.

The biggest reason Wal-Mart would be good for our town is it's perfect for families that are on tight budgets. In studies, families save anywhere from $300 to $400 a year by shopping at Wal-Mart. Second, Wal-Mart will bring many jobs for our residents to work at. This Supercenter will be an asset to our city. The Wal-Mart Company is paying for everything from the road construction to water and waste lines to the stoplights, so it won't cost Thief River Falls a cent.

The residents of Thief River Falls think with a such a big store as Wal-Mart coming to town will force other, smaller stores out of business, which, in fact, Wal-Mart will attract other new businesses to Thief River just like what happened in Detroit Lakes. Don't think of Wal-Mart so much as a death sentence for other current businesses, but more as a springboard for more economic growth in our city.

I firmly believe Wal-Mart will be a positive addition to the town of Thief River Falls. It will help Thief River's citizens and economy, and it will help our town by drawing new stores to our growing city. I know once the Wal-Mart opens here, I'll be there.

Uniting people through music

was being dismissed from school because he was a Jew, and how embarrassing it would be to have to walk to his desk in front of his classmates to remove his belongings.

Oertelt described the de-humanization process. It didn't happen all at once, he said. By the time Oertelt said he was asked to leave school, he said he was actually relieved because by that time it had become so uncomfortable he hated being there.

Though they hoped things would get better and that the world would take notice, things got worse: curfews for Jewish people were implemented; people began disappearing; Jews were ordered not to appear in public places; Jews were ordered to wear yellow stars; and, Jews were eventually shipped to concentration camps in cattle cars.

Oertelt, his mother, his brother and his brother's fiancé were picked up and taken to a concentration camp in 1943. "Life was absolutely miserable by this time," said Oertelt.

By the time Oertelt was liberated on April 23, 1945, he weighed 82 pounds. He was the only one from his family to have survived the concentration camps.

Oertelt compiled his experiences for a book titled "An Unbroken Chain: My Journey Through the Nazi Holocaust," which the choir students are reading.

According to a review of the book, "the authors link together a chain of events or facts that saved Oertelt's life during the Holocaust. While in his early '20s, he and his family were sent to a succession of Nazi concentration camps. He recounts the horror of this time, the struggle to survive, and the efforts to help one another. He argues that 18 things kept him alive, 18 being the numeric value for the Hebrew word for "life." Among these links are the more commonplace, such as his good health before being incarcerated; his youth; and his profession of trained furniture maker, which occasionally helped him to secure less punishing work assignments. Others, however, are more remarkable, like the encounter with a foreman at a work site where Oertelt was working before being sent to the camps. This man, an assumed Nazi supporter, alerted the Jews on his crew to leave the site one day when the Nazis arrived, thereby giving them the chance to escape capture, if only for a little while."

Each Curves location is equipped with the same eight basic workout stations, with additional equipment varying between clubs. Recovery stations, are placed between each piece of equipment and participants alternate 30-second repetitions between resistance training and recovery stations. Members will rotate through the various resistance equipment and recovery stations for 30 continuous minutes.

"We don't change weight or anything," Knott said, adding that members work at a pace that they are comfortable with. "If they feel the need to get more out of it, they work harder."

The Curves program is also successful because of its diet program. When following the plan, members eat five small meals, rather than three large meals each day. Eating five small meals increases one's metabolism and keeps participants from feeling hungry.

Curves memberships are available in several variations, including reduced rate student memberships, and traditional memberships starting at a dollar a day. Curves accepts Blue Cross/Blue Shield Insurance.

With a membership, participants receive a free edition of the official Curves magazine, "diane," (sic) named after the wife of Curves founder, Gary Heavin. Thief River Falls Curves members also receive a monthly newsletter that updates members to their peer's progress.

Each woman who joins Curves has her own goals. Like many exercise programs, Curves participants have realized health benefits besides weight loss. This is the case for Margie Nelson, a one-year member of Curves.

"I have my bone density checked every year and every year it's been going down, down, down," Nelson said, noting that doctors were about to prescribe medication for her loss of bone density. "I've been with Curves for a year and my bone density went up for the first time."

"When Margie came in that day so excited I almost cried," Knott said. "You get to hear these testimonials, they're not going to the doctor as much, or they no longer need to take medication."

Success stories like Nelson's are no surprise to Rick Karboviak, personal trainer and acceleration associate at Life Fitness Center. Karboviak explained that the average female loses 1 percent of her bone density each year after menopause. He also explained that in strength training, bones act as levers and when stressed to the optimum level, bones will adapt and become stronger. During a three month period of regular resistance training, like the program offered by Curves, bone density can increase by as much as 2 percent.

Aside from health benefits, another plus for members is the comradery that is developed through working with the same group on a regular basis.

"The fellowship is great, you get to meet so many people and hear all these (success) stories," Nelson said.

Knott said that most members tend to workout with the same group on a regular basis, something that has proved successful to the tune of 2,862 pounds and 4,621 inches lost since the fitness center opened in 2001. Curves is open 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday (except 1 to 3 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursdays) and Saturday, 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. For more information on Curves membership, call Jill at 681-2257.

A closer look

When it comes to physical fitness in the Thief River Falls area, women are leading the charge. According to Rick Karboviak, personal trainer and acceleration associate at Life Fitness Center (LFC), women account for 350 of nearly 700 LFC's active memberships, approximately 70 percent of the club's total membership. Karboviak has witnessed first hand, the boom in women's fitness. He said most new members join in the hopes of improving their appearance, specifically by losing fat in problem areas like their thighs and core (waist) area.

Karboviak designs fitness programs around weight training, with 8-12 rep sets and two to three sets per exercise. Though much different than the Curves exercise plan, Karboviak said there are many benefits to both programs, especially for beginners.

"[Curves] is one opportunity for someone who is new to fitness," Karboviak said. "It is an inviting atmosphere and you can get the recommended 30-minute workout."

Noting that many of his clients began their journey towards physical fitness, only to plateau, Karboviak cautions potential Curves participants to find ways to vary their workout and keep their body responding to training.

"Successful fitness is finding out what strategy will work for you," Karboviak said.

LHS changes play performances to Saturday and Sunday

Lincoln High School (LHS) has announced the return of the fall play. Performances of "You Can't Take It With You," are scheduled Saturday, Nov. 12 and Sunday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the LHS auditorium. Tickets are available at Kezar Music and at the door.

This is a change from the published dates in the school calendar. Due to the playoff success of the football team, which will play Nov. 11, and since there are football players in the cast, the fall play has been moved back one night.

Cast members include Dane Jenson as Martin Vanderhof (Grandpa), Annie Odegard as Pennie Sycamore, Mallory Asp as Essie Carmichael, Sam Mattison as Ed Carmichael, Mark McCullough as Paul Sycamore, Sean Anton as Mr. DePinna, Ava Kong as Rheba, Joe Welch as Donald, Calli Adamson as Alice, Zach Johnson as Tony Kirby, Ben Willis as Mr. Kirby, Ana Olson as Mrs. Kirby, Ryan Josephson as Mr. Henderson, Josh Kappes as Boris Kolenkhos, Chesnay Dobias as Grand Duchess Olga Katrina, Dana Larson as Gay Wellington, Grant Spears as G-Man, Robby Stenson as G-Man-Jim, and Ryan Josephson as G-Man-Mac. The show is directed by Phil Schmidt, and the assistant director is student Cole Bylander.

"You Can't Take It With You," a three-act comedy that takes place in 1938, is considered "one of the most popular and successful plays of modern times." The show is suited for the auditorium, which was recently remodeled to its 1938 glory.

It is a play that centers on a quirky family that seems crazy, but audience members find out the family members are the sanest people of all. At the center of this family is Martin Vanderhof, who could have been a rich man, but said, "It just took too much time" and now collects snakes. Pennie writes plays, Essie is a candy-making "ballerina-want-to-be" and her husband, Ed, plays the xylophone and prints anything! Paul makes fireworks with Mr. DePinna, a man who delivered the ice eight years ago – and just stayed. Throw in servants, a Russian ballet instructor and a grand duchess, and one has an interesting household.

The only relatively normal one is Alice, but she falls in love with Tony Kirby, the boss' son. When the Kirby family comes for dinner on the wrong night, the world of high society meets the Sycamore family, and everyone spends the night in jail.

"Not only is this an interesting and funny show, but the cast is fun as well," said Schmidt. "We have everyone from freshmen to seniors, from those with years of experience to first-timers on stage."

To add to the charm of this 1930s play, there are authentic pieces from the Pennington County Historical Society.

Lincoln High School (LHS) will perform its fall play, "You Can't Take It With You," this weekend in the LHS auditorium. Due to the football team's success in the playoffs, performances have been moved back a night to Saturday, Nov. 12 and Sunday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. Tickets are available at Kezar Music and at the door of the auditorium the nights of the performances. The Thief River Falls TIMES

THIEF RIVER FALLS PROWL
DOMINA

Prowlers Section 8AAA champions

It didn't matter what class it was, Thief River Falls played championship-caliber football Friday night when the Prowlers overwhelmed Perham 48-6 in the 2005 Section 8AAA playoff finals.

A large turnout of Thief River Falls fans at the Alerus Center in Grand Forks, N.D., looked on as the Prowlers won their first-ever post-season high school football title to earn a spot in the Class AAA state quarterfinals.

Thief River Falls went from being the small-school underdog in Section 8AAAA to big-school status in Section 8AAA this year when the Minnesota State High School League made its every-other-year class/section adjustments. There were immediate concerns from some area coaches that the Prowlers' program, with its numbers and pure physical strength, could overpower Section 8AAA opponents. Their fears were justified. For now, at least.

However, it took a scare from first-round playoff foe Roseau to get the Prowlers focused. They needed a fourth quarter rally to beat the Rams 26-20, but then dominated in the semifinals and finals when they out-scored defending state champion East Grand Forks and an 8-2 Perham squad that knocked out the section's top seed by a combined 97-13.

"Right now, we're playing pretty good football," acknowledged Jeff Mumm, in his 21st season as Thief River Falls head coach. "It's exciting to go on. It's fun."

The Prowlers out-gained the Yellowjackets 413-140 in total yards and had a 19-4 advantage in first downs. Sixty-one of those Perham yards came on a third quarter touchdown pass.

With the Thief River Falls defense smothering the Perham attack, the Prowlers' offense was within striking range of the end zone on every change of possession. The seven Thief River Falls touchdowns came on drives covering 44, 47, 53, 35, 29, 37 and 48 yards.

"The defense did a great job," confirmed Mumm. "They gave us

Half of AAA teams back for playoffs

■ TRF lone first-time qualifier

Half of the field for the 2005 Class AAA state high school football playoffs return from a year ago.

Delano, Glencoe-Silver Lake, Becker and Plainview/Elgin-Millville were in the 2004 state quarterfinals, with Becker reaching the title game before losing to East Grand Forks 31-14.

Newcomers this time around are Thief River Falls, International Falls, Worthington and Albany.

Actually, the Prowlers, who will be making their state debut Friday when they play at Albany, are the only rookies when it comes to the state playoffs. The Huskies, on the other hand, will be making their 17th state appearance in the 34-year history of the playoffs. They won state titles in 1989 and 1997, and had a runner-up finish in 2000.

Three teams in this year's Class AAA field have won state titles in various classes since the playoff system began in 1972.

Becker is in the playoffs for the 11th time. The Bulldogs are looking for their first title after runner-up finishes in 1990, 1994, 2001 and 2004.

Delano, a state runner-up in 2003, and International Falls are both in the playoffs for the eighth time.

Glencoe-Silver Lake is a state qualifier for the sixth time. The Panthers won state titles in 2000 and 2003, and had a runner-up finish in 2002.

It will be the third state quarterfinal trip for Worthington and Plainview/Elgin-Millville – a 2002 state champion.

Thief River Falls captains held the 2005 Section 8AAA high school football championship trophy high in the air for everyone to see following the Prowlers' 48-6 win over Perham Friday at the Alerus Center in Grand Forks, N.D. Accepting the trophy from Jim Sims, Director of Student Activities for School District 564, were, from left, Matt Nordhagen, Michael Forney and Alex Carlson.

TRF, Albany are first round foes

Albany 11-0

■ Regular season - def. Monticello 57-13; def. Montevido 67-21; def. Minnewaska Area 41-7; def. St. Cloud Cathedral 49-7; def. Long Prairie-Grey Eagle 57-0; def. Sauk Centre 40-0; def. New London-Spicer 57-0; def. Melrose Area 63-13.

■ Section 6AAA - def. Wadena-Deer Creek 64-7; def. Staples-Motley 35-12; def. Litchfield 25-7.

TRF 7-4

■ Regular season - lost to Crookston 42-20; def. Hibbing 41-0; lost to Detroit Lakes 20-12; lost to Duluth East 29-28; def. Cloquet 27-22; def. Grand Rapids 39-20; def. Duluth Central 34-27; lost to Duluth Denfeld 27-26.

■ Section 8AAA - def. Roseau 26-20; def. East Grand Forks 49-7; def. Perham 48-6.

Albany has the record, the rankings, playoff experience and the home field edge going into Friday's Class AAA state high school football quarterfinal game. But Thief River Falls is coming on fast.

The 11-0 Huskies were ranked No. 4 in the final regular season Class AAA state poll. They've out-scored the opposition 555-87 this fall. This is their 17th appearance in the state playoffs.

All that and Albany was still the No. 2 seed in Section 6AAA, where the Huskies beat top-seeded and previously unbeaten Litchfield 25-7 in the finals Friday at St. Cloud State University.

Thief River Falls, meanwhile, was not ranked after a 4-4 regular season. The Prowlers struggled mightily to get by Roseau in the Section 8AAA quarterfinals, but have been impressive in back-to-back blowouts against East Grand Forks and Perham in the semifinals and finals, respectively, to earn their first-ever state playoff berth.

"They're 11-0 for a reason," said Thief River Falls coach Jeff Mumm, assessing this week's opponent. "They're a very solid football team."

However, if the Prowlers can match their performances against the Green Wave and Yellowjackets, they'll be able to play with the Huskies, according to Mumm. "We're playing so well right now, and the kids are playing with so much confidence," he said. "It's going to take a pretty good football team to beat us."

The two teams might think they're looking in a mirror when they line up for the 7 p.m. kickoff, indicated Mumm, who exchanged game film with Albany coach Mike Kleinschmidt Saturday. "They're very similar to us," he said. "They line up and come right at you. They want to run the football, but they'll put it in the air if they have to."

Albany's offense features 5-10, 160-pound senior running back Justin Shay, who has rushed for 1,344 yards this fall, averaging 8 yards per carry on his 168 attempts that netted him 21 touchdowns. Eric Harlander, a 6-0, 170-pound senior quarterback, has thrown for 1,277 yards (72/98) and 18 touchdowns. The Huskies' leading receiver is 6-2, 175-pound senior Josh Overman with 36 catches for 808 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Thief River Falls counters with 5-8, 165-pound senior Jon Drees, who has rushed for 1,169 yards and averaging 9.3 yards per carry. Not far behind is 5-7, 165-pound junior Michael Benedict with 901 yards great field position. Offensively, we had a short field most of the night."

That script was played out from the start when a first-possession Perham punt was followed by a six-play, 44-yard Thief River Falls touchdown march, ending with a 6-yard quarterback sneak by Michael Forney with just 3:26 elapsed.

Perham tried to respond following the ensuing kickoff by reaching the Thief River Falls 25-yard line. But on a second-and-three play, Thief River Falls linebacker Alex Yaggie came up with an interception at the Prowlers' 1-yard line.

Four second quarter touchdowns all but guaranteed a Thief River Falls win.

The outburst started when the Prowlers went 47 yards in six plays to score on a 31-yard Jon Drees touchdown run. Drees scooted down the left sideline and used a spin move to get around the final Perham defender just inside the 10. A big hole in the middle of the line allowed Michael Benedict to step across the goal line on the two-point conversion for a 14-0 game 2:29 into the second quarter.

Thief River Falls' only scoring drive that began on the Prowlers' side of the 50 came after a punt return penalty put them at their own 47. Eight plays later they were in the end zone as Forney found a wide-open Alex Carlson in the middle of the field for a 10-yard touchdown toss. Tom Loe's kick made it 21-0 with 4:04 to play in the half.

A 27-yard Jeremy Sich punt return to the Perham 35 helped hike the spread to 28-0 on a three-play series that included a 1-yard plunge into the end zone by Benedict with 2:22 on the clock.

But the Prowlers weren't done. On first down, a Perham pass was picked off by Sich at the Yellowjackets' 40 and returned to the 29. After an 18-yard Forney-to-Benedict swing pass, a quarterback sneak from three yards out produced a 34-0 scoreboard gap with 1:22 showing.

"What a great effort," said. Mumm. "Our kids came to play. They got after it. Nothing fancy; they just executed."

Perham opened the second half with an onside kick. Thief River Falls recovered the ball, and when an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty was tacked on, the Prowlers had the ball at the Yellowjackets' 37.

It took just four plays to produce Thief River Falls' sixth touchdown of the night as Benedict went through the middle and ran over defenders on a 17-yard score. Loe's kick pushed the lead to 41-0.

A 9-play, 48-yard Thief River Falls drive made it 48-0 as fullback Chad Johnson scored on a one-yard dive play with 6:14 remaining in the third quarter.

Perham got on the board moments later when Marcus Hendrickson passed to Tyler Doll on the left side, and the receiver turned a short gain into a 61-yard touchdown with a mid-field spin.

Drees finished the night with 197 yards on 22 carries. The Prowlers' success on the ground didn't require much of a passing game, but Forney was still an effective 4-for-4 in the air for 64 yards and a touchdown. Yaggie had a pair of interceptions.

"Nothing fancy on our part," offered Mumm. "We're just getting it done. We're playing smart and we're playing physical. We had 100 percent attendance in the weight room, and it shows. Our kids are strong, and they can move. They're multi-sports athletes who compete."

Thief River Falls, after a 4-4 regular season, takes a 7-4 record into the state quarterfinals Friday at Albany.

and a team-high 11 touchdowns. The Prowlers, too, have a 1,000-yard passer in 6-3, 195-pound senior Michael Forney, who has thrown for 1,116 yards (70/118) and 16 touchdowns. Alex Carlson, a 6-2, 185-pound senior, and Alex Yaggie, a 6-0, 185-pound junior, have both caught 16 passes – Carlson for 330 yards; Yaggie for 257.

Albany and Thief River Falls have met only once previously in football – the 2001 season opener at Albany, where the Huskies, coming off a state runner-up finish in 2000, handled the Prowlers easily, 47-14.

It might not have been the smoothest ride during a regular season that included a pair of one-point losses, but the adversity helped mold the team, pointed out Mumm. "There were some bumps along the way," he admitted. "But I think the close losses, the injuries and the suspensions all helped to make us a much closer football team. Right now we're healthy and we're playing well as a team. It's a business-like approach for them. This is where they wanted to be and where they expected to be. And we're not done yet. The kids don't want to turn in equipment yet. They want to keep on playing."

You're keeping pretty good company at this point of the season, noted Mumm. "You look around and suddenly you realize, there's only eight of us left," he said. "We think we're deserving to be here."

The event will begin immediately following the Veteran's Day program that will begin at 11 a.m. at the same site.

It's the first-ever state appearance for the Prowlers.

Snowmobiles will need new sticker when using trails

As people prepare for snow and winter recreation, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources reminds snowmobilers of a new sticker requirement.

Anyone planning to ride on a state or Grant-in-Aid snowmobile trail in Minnesota this winter must purchase a Minnesota Snowmobile State Trail sticker for their snowmobile. Generally, if people ride on groomed trails, they will need the sticker. Those who ride only on private land or on lakes would not need to purchase the sticker.

Trail sticker price is $16 for an annual permit or $31 for a three-year permit. This sticker fee is in addition to the snowmobile vehicle registration fee of $48.50 for three-years. The annual trail sticker permit is valid only from Nov. 1 through April 30.

Revenue generated from the sale of the snowmobile state trail stickers will go to the Grant-in-Aid program to fund trail maintenance and trail acquisition. Local snowmobile clubs receive funding through the Grant-in-Aid program.

There are several ways to purchase the Minnesota Snowmobile State Trail stickers. Annual permits can be purchased from a deputy registrar or any of the 1,800 electronic licensing agents throughout Minnesota, by telephone at 1-888-665-4236, or through the DNR Web site at www.dnr.state.mn.us.

Three-year stickers may only be purchased when registering a snowmobile or renewing a registration. Registration through a deputy registrar's office, by mail to the DNR, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155, or with an online renewal at www.dnr.state.mn.us.

A $3.50 convenience fee will be added to stickers purchased by telephone or online.

Violation of the snowmobile state trail law will require the purchase of an annual permit at the price of the three-year permit, $31.

State Legislators passed this sticker law during the 2005 session. The law went into effect Oct. 1.

Snowmobilers need the sticker to ride Minnesota's 20,385 miles of snowmobile trails. More than 18,000 of those miles are managed and maintained by local snowmobile clubs through the Grant-in-Aid program.

For more information on this and other snowmobile laws, see the 2005/2006 Minnesota Snowmobile Safety Laws, Rules and Regulations book or the DNR Web site at www.dnr.state.mn.us/regulations/snowmobile.

Alex Yaggie stepped in front of Perham receiver Caleb Anderson for an interception at the Thief River Falls 1-yard line in the first quarter of Friday's Section 8AAA high school football playoff championship game at the Alerus Center. The interception preserved a 6-0 Thief River Falls lead at the time. Yaggie had two interceptions in the Prowlers' 48-6 win that sends them into the 2005 Class AAA state football playoffs. Thief River Falls will play a 7 p.m. state quarterfinal game at Albany Friday. The winner moves on to the Nov. 19 semifinals at the Metrodome.

Local CAP cadets attend NCOS

Civil Air Patrol (CAP) Cadets Staff Sgt. Jordan West, Senior Airman Michael Swanson and Airman 1st Class Brandon Widing from the Northwest Minnesota Composite Squadron of Thief River Falls attended the Non-Commissioned Officers School (NCOS) and Basic Cadet Officers Course (BCOC) held Oct. 20 to 23 at Camp Ripley. Both the adult and cadet staff teach the course with the cadet staff directly responsible for the cadet students.

Cadet 1st Lt. Amanda LeTourneau was also present at the NCOS and BCOC. She served on the general staff as the public affairs officer. Her responsibilities included maintaining a strong communications link between the staff, instructors and students with written and verbal announcements. She also documented activities by taking photographs. LeTourneau also was responsible for the preparation of all graduation certificates and awards. She served as the emcee at the graduation ceremony at the conclusion of the courses.

At NCOS and BCOC, West, Swanson and Widing received classroom training outlining the responsibilities and duties of a CAP cadet non-commissioned officer. Each cadet then practices the classroom training by speaking in front of groups, managing projects and acting as the leader of his or her flight in various scenarios.

At NCOS, West received the "Honor Cadet of the Bravo Seminar." Each of the four seminars at NCOS comprises a flight of 16 cadets. The instructors and staff of NCOS choose the honor cadet for each seminar. This award is coveted by each cadet and shows outstanding performance within the individual seminar.

West also was chosen to receive the "Non-Commissioned Officer School, Bruce Sexton Award for a Distinguished Graduate." Each year, the award recognizes the single cadet who has demonstrated outstanding skills and knowledge as a non-commissioned officer at NCOS. The instructors and staff choose the cadet based on academic testing scores, leadership, personal attitude, and knowledge of military customs and courtesies.

The Bruce Sexton Award is named after a longtime Minnesota Wing CAP member. Sexton served in the Army as a non-commissioned officer in World War II in the Pacific Theater and again during the Korean War. He has a first-hand knowledge of the duties of the non-commissioned officer and how important these duties are when carrying out any assigned mission.

6,500 Minnesotans treated each year for traumatic brain injuries

The Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) recently released a report documenting six years of data on Emergency Department-related traumatic brain injuries (TBI).

"This report serves as companion to an earlier report on nonfatal hospitalized TBI released in May and is another step toward understanding the full spectrum of TBI in Minnesota," said Minnesota Health Commissioner Dianne Mandernach.

TBI is damage to living brain tissue caused by external injury that may result in temporary or permanent cognitive, physical, behavioral or emotional changes. It has been estimated that 80 percent of TBI are treated in the Emergency Department (ED), yet very few population studies have been conducted to confirm this estimate.

Dr. Allen Brown, medical director of Mayo Clinic's TBI Model System, said, "Mild traumatic brain injury is by far the most common level of injury severity; it can cause lasting disabling conditions, and it often goes unrecognized. Early identification of TBI in emergency departments, with follow-up referral to a comprehensive brain rehabilitation program, is crucial to limiting associated health problems."

Some highlights of the report covering 1998 to 2003 include:

- Each year, at least 6,500 Minnesotans were treated and released from EDs for a TBI, for a six-year total of 38,543 new cases.
- ED-treated TBI affects all ages: The peak age groups were adolescents and young adults, for whom the leading cause was sports and recreation activities; then infants and young children followed by older adults, for both of whom the leading cause was falls.
- The data showed an increase in TBI-ED during the six-year period; this may be due to increases in sports and recreation, and motor vehicle traffic-related TBI-ED.
- Males were more likely than females to receive ED treatment for a TBI; this difference is most pronounced for ages 5 to 29.
- The rates of TBI-ED were higher in the seven-county metropolitan area than in Greater Minnesota; however, the difference decreased over the six-year period.
- Median TBI-ED charges increased 72 percent over the six-year period, from $751 per visit to $1,290; total charges exceed $44 million.
- The methods used for tracking TBI-ED are still under development. More information on demographic features and risk factors will be part of a future report.

The following are some examples of strategies that can be used to prevent a TBI:

- Always wear a helmet, regardless of age, when bicycling, skateboarding, snowboarding or using scooters.
- Do not leave infants/children unattended on elevated surfaces, such as changing tables, counters or sofas.
- For older adults, decrease the risk for falls through regular physical activities and exercise that strengthen legs and improve balance.
- Avoid driving while sleep-deprived or distracted (e.g. cell phone usage).
- Use seat belts for "every body, every seat, every time."

"This report further supports that brain injury is a significant public health problem," said Tom Gode, executive director for the Brain Injury Association of Minnesota (BIAM). "Many of these individuals treated in the ED will never return to their pre-injury lifestyle and will need ongoing support."

BIAM offers a wide range of resources to Minnesotans with brain injury through its Resource Facilitation program. Persons with brain injuries, as well as their family members and healthcare professionals, may call BIAM for information about brain injuries, referrals or help. Call 1-800-669-6442.

The MDH report, titled Emergency Department-Treated Traumatic Brain Injury, Minnesota 1998-2003, was produced by the MDH Injury and Violence Prevention Unit based on data reported by 1221 (92 percent) of Minnesota's EDs. The report is available online at www.health.state.mn.us/injury/pub/index.cfm.

New vaccine for children helps prevent serious infections in older adults

Use of a new children's vaccine has been linked to a reduction in serious bacterial infections in older adults, according to a study authored by Minnesota researchers and collaborators that was published Oct. 26 in JAMA, the Journal of the American Medical Association. The bacteria, pneumococcus, can cause serious infections, such as bloodstream infections and meningitis in people of all ages, but young children and older adults are particularly vulnerable.

The study was conducted by Catherine Lexau and colleagues at the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH), seven other U.S. participating institutions and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). It found that the rate of serious pneumococcal infections among adults age 50 and older declined by 28 percent in the four years following introduction in 2000 of the pneumococcal conjugate vaccine for infants and young children.

The study analyzed data on the infections from eight U.S. cities and regions from 1998 through 2003. The locations had a total population of nearly 19 million. One of the areas was the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

Researchers studied nearly 10,000 cases of serious pneumococcal infections. They found that the disease rates declined from 40.8 cases per 100,000 people in 1998-99 to 29.4 in 2002-03 in people age 50 and over (-28 percent). Moreover, the rate of disease in these adults caused by the seven pneumococcal bacteria subtypes covered by the children's vaccine declined by 55 percent. There were not substantial declines, in other subtypes. The declines first occurred in 2001 following initial use of the new children's vaccine in 2000, and then dropped further in 2002-03 as more children were vaccinated.

"This is strong evidence that vaccinating young children against pneumococcal disease helps to protect older adults in the population at large," Lexau said.

The declines were likely due to decreased community transmission of the bacteria. The vaccinated children carry these pneumococcal bacteria subtypes (covered by the vaccine) in their throats less often. This, in turn, reduces exposure to the bacteria for adults.

"The findings of this study are important because serious pneumococcal infections are very frequent in older adults and the elderly, and the death rate is high. About one in five people over the age of 65 who get these infections die from them," Lexau said.

Based on results from 2002 and 2003, researchers estimate that 6,250 serious pneumococcal infections and 550 deaths per year were prevented among Americans age 50 years and older compared to the years before the vaccine was available.

The other seven cities and states involved in the study were San Francisco County, Calif.; Rochester, N.Y.; Portland, Ore.; Connecticut; Atlanta; Baltimore; and Memphis, Nashville, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn. The study was one of a number of ongoing collaborative projects involving the CDC-sponsored Emerging Infections Program (EIP).

More information about the EIP and pneumococcal disease can be found on the MDH Web site (www.health.state.mn.us).

Seal attic bypasses before adding insulation

Adding insulation in the attic will not reduce heating bills this winter as much as might be expected unless all attic bypasses are sealed first, advised the Minnesota Department of Commerce Energy Information Center.

Attic bypasses are hidden air passageways that lead from the heated space into the attic. Because warm air rises, it is continuously moving up these passageways and escaping into the attic during cold weather, which is called the stack effect. As a result, even though the attic should be cold, attic bypasses make it a semi-heated space, which is a waste of energy.

"Remember that insulation materials do not stop air from moving into the attic," said Phil Smith, energy specialist. "They only filter and slow the air on its way out."

Before looking for attic bypasses, make a sketch of the room layout below the attic floor that shows the location of interior walls; switches and fixtures. Then wear a dust mask or respirator and protective clothing before entering the attic.

To look for bypasses, you may have to lift up and peek under the existing attic insulation. Signs to look for are: wet or dirty insulation, dust build-up underneath the insulation, water staining under the insulation, water staining or frost build-up on roof boards and roofing nails, and places below where there have been ice dam and moisture condensation problems. Finding any of these signs are good indicators that there is a bypass below.

"On frosty mornings, step into the yard and look up at your roof," said Smith. "If you see an area where the frost has melted away, you have an attic bypass problem there."

The Home Energy Guide "Attic Bypasses" provides detailed instructions on how to find and fix attic bypasses in areas including chimney caseways, plumbing penetrations and kneewalls.

Some common bypass areas and how to fix them:

- Tops of interior walls: Use flexible long-life caulk to seal smaller gaps and holes, and expanding foam sealant for larger gaps.
- Electrical penetrations: Seal with expanding foam sealant where the bypasses enter and leave the attic.
- Dropped ceilings: Cut a piece of gypsum board to fit over the area, and nail and caulk it into place.
- Ceiling light fixtures: Seal the junction box above the fixture with caulk, and when adding a new fixture, use a plastic junction box. Seal both where the box meets the ceiling and where the wire enters the box. Before sealing an old fixture, check wiring in the attic for deterioration before proceeding. Be sure to shut off electricity to light fixtures before working on them. Recessed light fixtures are even more of a problem; see the guide for details.
- Attic entry: Install weather-stripping around hatch entries and insulate the top of the hatch. With stairway or pull-down stair access, build an airtight plywood box to fit over the stair assembly.

"Finding and fixing bypasses will take some time, but the savings in your energy bill makes the effort worthwhile," said Smith. "You'll also reduce ice dams on the roof, which are caused by attic bypasses."

To get a CD or paper copy of the energy guide, call 1-800-657-3710 or place an order online at www.commerce.state.mn.us.

Don't give free rent to open beef cows

October is a good time for most beef producers to examine their beef cows and to palpate their cows for pregnancy status to avoid surprises in the spring. There were a few hot weeks throughout the 2005 breeding season, which could have caused short-term infertility in the bulls or a greater number of early embryo deaths than normal. Regardless of the reason, with the prospect of highly valued feeder calves, this is not the time to be boarding open cows, especially if they could be culled now and replaced with some of the high quality bred heifers advertised in upcoming sales throughout the region.

The cost of having cows checked for pregnancy will vary but is in the range of a few dollars per cow. Many veterinarians perform pregnancy checks on a fee-for-time basis. Thus, if a facility functions well enough to enable 30 cows to be checked per hour, the cost per cow is much less than if only 15 cows can be examined per hour.

Remember that having cows checked for pregnancy and then making no change in management only satisfies one's curiosity; it will not result in an economic return. In addition to culling the open ones, knowing their pregnancy status will allow for managing cows at different stages of pregnancy in different ways. For example, cows that are going to calve later in the season may be culled, sold to another producer who may plan to calve later or managed differently in terms of nutrition.

Producers can make pregnancy detection even more valuable if they combine it with the examination of each cow. This should be the time that producers give cows a "once over" or annual review:

- Body condition score her - Is she a five or six (just right), or is she overly thin or fat?
- Check her eyes. Is she blind? Does she have cancer eye?
- Check her feet and legs. Does she have any injuries, swollen joints or bad feet that are limiting her ability to graze, walk and look after her calf?
- Look at her udder. Is it nice and balanced with well-placed teats? Is it hanging to her hocks with an open big teat? Does it have scar tissue from mastitis?
- Check her teeth. Does she have a full set? Are some missing or overly worn?
- Check her mental health. Is she calm and easy to work? Does she put you over the fence and try to stomp someone when the person tags her calf?
- Treat her for grubs and lice.

Sleep patterns examined in Old Farmer's Almanac

Think you have an early bedtime? Check out the sleep patterns of several animals in the all-new Old Farmer's Almanac for Kids or on its companion Web site, Almanac4kids.com. Both are filled with the kind of wacky facts, fun activities, and weather predictions that have made The Old Farmer's Almanac famous. To make even better use of The Old Farmer's Almanac for Kids, you'll find a free ten-chapter Activity Guide on the Web site, too.

Catching Some ZZZZZZZZs

Every living creature needs to sleep. Scientists think that sleep helps an animal's body recover from all the work it did when it was awake. Some animals sleep at night, while others sleep during the day.

Animals that aren't concerned with being hunted – lions, for instance – can sleep anytime they want. Rabbits, on the other hand, have to watch out for danger all the time, so they take many short naps. The most expert napper of all is the ostrich. Ostriches never sleep for more than 15 minutes at a time.

Dozy Dolphins

The dolphin's brain is divided into two halves, just like a human brain - but dolphins do something humans can't do, they put one side of the brain to sleep while the other stays awake. Then the other side takes a nap while the first side stays alert.

Who Sleeps the Most?

Animal sleep time per day include bat 20 hours, python, 18 hours, tiger, 16 hours, squirrel, 15 hours, ferret, 14 hours, hamster, 14 hours, cat, 12 hours, dog, 10 hours, pig, eight hours, cow, four hours, horse, three hours.

The Really Deep Sleepers

Ever feel like staying in bed for days and days? Some animals do. In winter, bears, squirrels, and groundhogs just curl up and sleep for weeks. They lower their body temperatures, slow down their hearts, and conk out, or hibernate. Groundhogs, for example, bring food into their underground burrows in the autumn, seal the openings to their tunnels, and then lower their body temperatures from 98 degrees to 38 degrees Fahrenheit (from 36 degrees to 3 degrees Celsius) and sleep until spring. Once in a while, they warm up a bit and eat a little of the stored food. Then it's back for more shut-eye. By the time they get up in the spring, they have lost almost half their body weight.

New Breakthrough Technology in Cataract Eye Surgery

Cataract surgery has become one of the most successfully performed surgical procedures in modern medicine. Now there is a new technique for cataract surgery that makes the experience easier and more comfortable for the patient.

The Clear Cornea technique makes an incision 1/8th of an inch long. The opening is so small, that in most cases, no eye patches or sutures are required.

When making this tiny incision, your doctor uses a sharp diamond blade that causes very little trauma to the eye and allows clearer vision more rapidly than with older techniques. Patients can return to normal activities with minimum interruption in their daily routine.

If you or someone you love has signs of cataracts such as blurred vision or glare, call or visit your local eye care provider and learn more about this new procedure.

Hallowe'en Party

"Mrs. H. K. Nelson and Mrs. Gaston Ward were hostesses at a Hallowe'en party at the home of the latter Friday evening when their daughters, Lois Nelson and Vivian Ward, entertained a group of friends between the hours of five and eight o'clock. Games and contests formed the diversion of the afternoon, prizes being awarded to Adrian Magnuson and Darleen Edwards. A luncheon was served at 5:30 o'clock by the hostess and many lovely gifts were presented to the honor guest. Those present were Margaret Werstlein, Jean Senstad, Christine Ronland, Kathleen Scanlan, Jewel Warner, Marjory Ann Wangenstein, Violet Christenson, Ardith Mae and Marilyn Ostby, Darleen Edwards, Robert and Donald Aspelund, and Adrian and James Magnuson."

The guests included Joan Dahlquist, Patricia Patterson, Marion Oden, June Hanson, Wanda Hanson, Marjory Lane, Betty Weeding, Clarine Nelson and Joyce Olson."

Goodridge Hallowe'en Carnival

"The Hallowe'en carnival held at the school house on October 31, proved to be quite a success. At eight o'clock the grade program was given in the assembly room and after this the crowd went to the other rooms, where such things as the fish pond, beauty parlor, etc. were located.

"The fish pond, art gallery, shooting at the target, beauty parlor, and a trip around the world were upstairs. The fish pond seemed to be quite an attraction for the children at least. Downstairs there were the fortune telling booths, museum and the candy and carnival assortment stands.

"Lunch was also sold. All the rooms and booths were decorated in gay colors and everyone seemed to be enjoying himself immensely."

St. Hilaire Carnival Successful

"The annual carnival given by the students of the local school Tuesday evening was very well attended. Approximately $125 was taken in. A program of miscellaneous musical numbers was presented at 8 o'clock after which the carnival booths were visited by the people. Lunch was served in a room decorated in Japanese fashion. One of the main features of the evening was selecting a carnival queen. This honor was won by Miss Dorothy Gunstad."

"Mr. Grinley: When at Minneapolis I heard a boys' glee club sing 'The Lost Chord' with a pipe organ and two pianos. Aanstad: Gosh, no wonder it was lost!

St. Hilaire Spectator

St. Hilaire, Red Lake County, Minnesota November 11, 1905

News Items

The temperance lecture at the Imperial Hall last Sunday afternoon was well attended.

The ladies of the Lutheran Synod church will give a 'lutefisk' super at their church on Thursday, November 16. Supper will be served from 6 to 9 p.m. All are welcome.

The southbound freight last Wednesday had a badly burned caboose which had caught fire at Thief River Falls in some way unknown.

It is not often that harvest extends into November, but it did this year, and quite a number of farmers have been at work lately cutting grain that was standing on account of wet ground. Very little if any of the grain so saved will have a market value, but it is thought that it will make good feed for livestock."

Still Making Lumber

There are no signs of a let-up down at the sawmill and Manager Evans claims they will run the mill as long as they can get logs into the mill. On Monday afternoon the piston rod that runs the carriage was broken, but it was fixed Monday night and work was resumed Tuesday morning. The weather seems to be getting better every day, and it looks now as if the mill would run all of next week at least."

Creamery Addition Stockholders of Local Creamery Vote to Double the Capacity of the Plant

The stockholders' meeting of the St. Hilaire Creamery association held a special meeting at the village hall last Monday. The meeting was well attended and the sentiment unanimous that it was necessary to enlarge the plant.

It was determined to build an addition to the creamery proper, and also build an ice house and refrigerator. A new churn, vats and other machinery will also be put in. It is expected that work will soon start on these improvements."

Adjourned Until the 21st

The Wylie branch line case in which the town of Wylie endeavors to restrain the proposed action of the Great Northern railroad company from tearing up the rails that are laid into the city of Wylie and thus entirely destroy the value of the place as a trading point, was brought up in district court before Judge Watts Saturday afternoon, says the CROOKSTON JOURNAL. By the joint agreement of the parties involved, the case has been set off until the 22nd of the month when it will again be brought up before Judge Watts, and probably settled one way or another. Meanwhile the restraining order that prevents the railroad company from tearing up the tracks and stopping transportation on the line will be in effect. This order remains in effect until the case is brought to an end.

The attorneys in the matter came to an agreement for the postponement of the case last Saturday afternoon and the Judge granted the move for adjournment."

FROM THE PAGES OF THE TIMES

Probate Court Room In New Court House Is Dedicated Friday

"The attractive quarters of Probate Judge Herman A. Kjos in the new court house were formally dedicated in impressive exercises Friday afternoon. Judge Kjos presided over the program, which opened with an invocation by the Rev. E. C. Mead, following which probate judges from seven nearby counties were introduced, as well as Glenn Richardson of Lake Bronson, son of Ira C. Richardson, former probate judge here.

"Pictures of Wilhelm Michelet who served as probate judge from 1910 to 1918, and Ira Richardson, 1918-1920, were unveiled by O. L. Ihle, pioneer county resident, followed by a talk by H. O. Chommie, local attorney and municipal court judge.

"Mrs. Gaston Ward unveiled the picture of her father, the late Judge Lars Backe, who served from 1920 to 1932, and H. O. Berve gave a short eulogy. A picture of the late Judge Andrew Bottelson, who served from 1932 to 1940, was unveiled by his daughter, Mrs. Alvin Holzknecht, followed by laudatory remarks by L. W. Rulien.

"Judge Paul A. Lundgren of district court delivered the dedicatory address, giving the history of the probate and juvenile court and pointing out the important functions served by the court."

County Board Acts To Approve Addition Of 18 Dists. To S.D. 18

"At the November meeting of the Pennington county board Tuesday, action was taken to approve the addition to Thief River Falls School District 18 of eighteen rural districts.

"The board conducted the final hearing on the dissolution of 18 rural school districts. The following were dissolved and attached to Thief River Falls School District 18: 2, 4, 11, 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 35, 41, 42, 51, 53, 135, 149, 194 and portions of Districts No. 125 and 219J.

"Three Marshall county districts, Nos. 118, 133 and 159 also held final hearing Tuesday on the matter of dissolving and becoming attached to District 18, according to County Auditor Charles Rodekuhr.

"Three other Pennington county rural districts, 7, 55 and 127, presented resolutions to the board for similar action. Final hearing for these districts was set for November 22 at 6 p.m.

"Mr. Rodekuhr said all existing contracts in force in affected school district will be honored. District 18 is now in the process of providing facilities to handle the pupils thus added."

Pediatric Section Of Hospital Now In Use First Time

"For the first time since the completion of the building program, Northwestern Hospital has opened up its pediatric section on the third floor of the hospital, Harold W. Peterson, administrator, stated today.

"This became necessary because of a large influx of children to the hospital. Recently there have been ten or more children hospitalized in this special section.

"Opening of this section has made it possible to take all children off other floors, which are now serving adult patients only. Those who have visited the hospital are impressed with the fine facilities available for the hospitalization of children in this special section."

Keep Off River Ice, Says Police Chief

"While the river pool is frozen over, the ice sheet is still precariously thin, Police Chief Elton Cummings stated today, at the same time urging parents to instruct their children to stay off the ice. Cummings also called attention to the danger of children skating on icy streets and running the risk of being hit by a passing car."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

Excel Has Another Lawsuit

"Something must be wrong with the town of Excel, as it will be the third suit similar to the one it now has on hand. As some farmers from there said, every resident of that town would like to get the water off his farm, no matter if his neighbors are drowned out. That is the way it has gone on right along for many years past. Now it comes to the explosion and more will follow. We consider it a very poor way of doing business."

At Last! At Last! Thief River Falls Boys Win a Foot Ball Game

For the first time this year, the Thief River Falls high school foot ball players won a foot ball game Saturday, defeating the team from Fertile at the home grounds by a score of 69 to 0. The local team has been strengthened considerably of late and the boys have been doing some practice work. If they keep on improving, we will soon have a team that can defeat anything in this section."

Loss Not Great

H. O. Rollag, who is the owner of the boat Christina, which was sunk up at the Red lake, returned to this city last week from a trip up there and has gone back to Sisseton, South Dakota, where he is now conducting a store. He says that no effort will be made to raise the boat until the water is frozen over solid, and that his loss will not be as great as he first anticipated."

It Would Be a Big Ad

There is considerable talk about town to the effect that it would be a big advertisement for Thief River Falls if an electric light was placed upon the water tank. It could be seen for many miles out in the country, and would serve to direct travelers on a dark night. Superintendent Peterson says that it would be almost impossible to have an arc light placed up there, as none of his force would care about going up on the tank every day to fix the light."

Men Are Very Scarce Good Wages Will be Paid in Woods This Year

The demand for men to work in the woods this winter is far better than ever before and wages will be high. All of the big lumber firms are figuring upon cutting as much pine as they can secure men to do it, and anyone wanting work will have no trouble in securing a job. In Minneapolis and Duluth where thousands of men are hired each fall for the woods, there is said to be a great shortage. The reason assigned is that many lumbermen have gone west and the cut will be larger this year than ever before."

One On Tedford A Former Thief River Falls Man Fooled

One of the hunting yarns from the northern woods tells of a Cass Lake man, Charles Tedford by name and well known in Thief River Falls, who had boasted too much of his new gun. His companions discounted the merits of the killing piece and got some Indians to fix up a wooden partridge on a tall branch. Then they led Tedford with the new gun to the spot and told him to bring down the game.. There followed some tall shooting, in the course of which the victim used up all his ammunition and most of his vituperative vocabulary. After exhausting both, a man climbed the tree and loosened some wires which held the partridge and let it down."

Library Proposition Passed

"The results of the election Tuesday included the passing of the library proposition, whereby ownership of the Thief River Falls library will now be turned over to the city. The total number of votes was 358, with the following counts:

| | Yes | No |
| Ward 1: | 107 | 55 |
| Ward 3: | 80 | 28 |

"The vote was much smaller than many had anticipated and is accounted for by the fact that a large number of residents here hold claims on the reservation and also that the mill is closed down and a large number of men employed in that institution have departed for the woods."

Shirley Now a Thing of the Past Rails Between Wylie and Shirley All Up

The work of gathering up the rails, ties and bridge material that has been going on, on the Wylie branch from Shirley to that point has been finished and a line of road which was long in use by the Great Northern for the Thief River Falls branch is no more.

Wylie which fought hard to retain the line is still connected with the outside world by the iron bands by a line from St. Hilaire with a daily mixed train service. This however is very unsatisfactory. The mail for Wylie is now sent by way of Red Lake Falls from which point it is supplied by a star route. With the removing of the rails, farmers for miles around between Shirley and Wylie supplied themselves with a goodly supply of firewood from the line which the company considered not fit for use. A good highway is not left which can easily be made into a road that would equal any thing in this upper country."

Perils of parking in Thief River Falls

Income or enforcement issue?

Thief River Falls City Council recently approved an increase in parking fines in the city from $10 to $15 that will take effect Jan. 1. The decision begs the question: Is this being done to raise income for the city or is it an enforcement issue?

I'm sure that as soon as the new fees are assessed, many people will start complaining. Ten dollars always seemed incentive enough for me to find a parking space in one of the city's many free parking lots. I know that there are many residents and visitors in this community, however, who are too forgetful, too busy and/or too important to bother with having to find a parking space in one of the city's many free parking lots. They probably wonder aloud why we even have parking fines. It will be these individuals who complain the loudest when $15 tickets are issued, and it will be these same individuals who complain when they can't find a parking space near a business they want to visit.

I admit that on occasion, I am one of those busy or forgetful individuals. But, I am also well aware of the consequence. The fine is, as I said, enough of an incentive to make me start parking in the parking lots. Perhaps there are many people - too many people - out there for whom $10 is not enough of an incentive, and either come up with the $10 or ignore it. It could be that this attitude is causing a parking problem. Maybe $15 will force them to change their habits.

I've found that our friends and neighbors in bigger cities scoff at our fines and fees. That's nothing, they say, "Try getting a car out of an impoundment in the Twin Cities." The parking fine in Thief River Falls, they say, is one of the lowest fines one can be unfortunate enough to receive.

There may be a third explanation as to why the fines are increasing. Given that our city leaders believe that enforcing parking restrictions is a good and necessary public policy, I don't think it should surprise anyone that the cost of providing staff to enforce those parking restrictions has increased over the past dozen years.

Of course, all of this talk about parking restrictions and tickets should remind all of us that calendar parking restrictions will take effect Nov. 15. After all, the winter season is upon us.

I find it interesting that as the snow piles up, and ice turns road surfaces at our intersections into ice-skating rinks, that the number of complaints about parking tickets seem to abate. Snow and ice seem to give us a much clearer perspective of parking restrictions.

Remember veterans on Veterans Day

I've tried just about everything I can think of when it comes to reminders. At one time, I had one of those handy calendar books on my desk that I used to schedule appointments in - that is until I discovered that people were making appointments for me without asking. Now I use a PalmPilot - a computerized device that is programmed to sound an alarm five to 15 minutes before my next appointment. It works and works well unless I fail to program an event. Still, I find we all need reminders now and then.

Veterans Day is on Friday, Nov. 11. The dry historical fact of Veterans Day is that it was formerly Armistice Day, Nov. 11, the anniversary of the armistice that ended World War I in 1918. But history is much more than dates, places and statistics. It lives through the people who were there - the personal stories those individuals - their beliefs, their memories, memories of friends and enemies who died.

Today, Veterans Day is much more than recognition of the sacrifices made for World War I. It is much more than a date or a place. Tens of millions of Americans have served in the Armed Forces of the United States and hundreds of thousands of Americans have given their lives during the past century. It is all of these soldiers that we remember, and it is their memories we honor. Lest we forget, we call on all citizens to preserve the memories of those who have served in our military by recording their stories. We remind you to set down in type, tapes, discs, CDs and photographs all that you can to create a history that lives. Only through these stories will we be able to give an accurate and full account of what it means to be a citizen of the United States.

One more reminder: Put it in your calendars, write it down on notes, or put it in your computer: While Veterans Day falls on Friday, Nov. 11, we have been reminded that the Veterans Day ceremony at Lincoln High School will be conducted on Thursday at 11 a.m.

Kiffmeyer announces advance in voter rights

In a press conference Tuesday, Secretary of State Mary Kiffmeyer announced a major leap forward in voter rights for the state of Minnesota that will be in place for 2006.

"In 2002, Congress passed the Help America Vote Act mandating a variety of election improvements, including providing every voter with the ability to detect and correct procedural errors on their ballots and providing privacy and independence for every voter, Kiffmeyer said.

"I am pleased to announce that we have negotiated a contract for new voting technology that can be used in every polling place in the state, and that will bring to all voters the ability to detect and correct procedural errors on their ballots. It also will provide voters with disabilities the opportunity to vote privately and independently for the first time.

"The ability to detect and correct procedural errors on ballots is something that voters in many Minnesota polling places have not had – only those who used precinct-based optical scan voting machines in their polling places have had this opportunity until now. Areas of our state without this technology – roughly half the precincts containing 20 percent of the population – have not had this opportunity, which means those areas of the state have had higher ballot error rates and more votes that have not counted. That is about to change."

Under the contract, the secretary of state's office will receive Automark ballot-marking machines from Election Systems and Software at a base price of $4,895 each. As a result, local units of government will be able to purchase machines at this price to meet the requirement of the Help America Vote Act (HAVA).

"The Automark is something new and revolutionary," said Kiffmeyer. "You might think of the Automark machine as a sophisticated 'pen' that allows voters with disabilities to mark their ballots without relying on someone else to help them if they choose. (Election judges will still be available to help people who want assistance.)"

As for paying for this new equipment, Congress provided funds specifically to pay for this part of HAVA. Minnesota has already received and the Legislature has authorized the expenditure of $35 million in federal money to make this objective a reality. This money is a pass-through to the local units of government, amounting to over $7,000 per precinct in the state and an additional $3,000 for precincts in current hand-count and central-count areas.

"Many precincts in our state share polling places with other precincts," said Kiffmeyer. "Some of these combined polling places may be able to share a single Automark machine, thereby leveraging their pre-precinct appropriation."

In accordance with legislation passed last year, counties are currently developing plans that are to include provisions on how they will meet HAVA's requirements and how they will finance their improvements. Congress mandated that the election improvements be in place for any federal election taking place after Jan. 1, 2006.

Dayton joins colleagues in closed-door session

Sen. Mark Dayton joined with his Senate colleagues in a rare, closed-door session to discuss prewar intelligence and the failure of Congress to provide oversight of the Bush administration during the Iraq War. The special session ended with a resolution that six members—three Democrats and three Republicans—would form a task force and report back to the Senate, no later than Nov. 14, on the status of the Senate Intelligence Committee's Phase 2 investigation and the projected timetable for its completion.

Last year, the Senate Intelligence Committee began its investigation of the intelligence that led the United States into the Iraq War. Phase 1 of that investigation revealed that American prewar intelligence was "dead wrong." In July, 2004, Intelligence Committee Chairman Pat Roberts (R-KS) promised that Phase 2 of the investigation, to determine whether the White House had intentionally misled the public,, would commence following the presidential election. To date, the Senate Intelligence Committee has not proceeded with Phase 2.

"I can't think of anything more serious than the question of whether the administration misled America into war," said Dayton. "The American public and the families of the more than 2,000 soldiers who have courageously died since this war began to deserve answers."

Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) called for the closed-door session, citing the indictment of Vice President Dick Cheney's Chief of Staff, I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby. Reid said the indictment "provides a window into what this is really all about: How this administration manufactured and manipulated intelligence in order to sell the war in Iraq and attempted to destroy those who dared to challenge its actions."

All senators were present for the recent closed-door session and were required to turn over their mobile phones and all other communication devices. Senate staff members and the viewing public were cleared from the Senate Chamber, before the lights were dimmed and the doors were closed. No vote is required to call a closed-door session.

Coleman offers hospital technology bill

Sen. Norm Coleman has introduced legislation to make Minnesota's Critical Access Hospitals (CAH) more competitive for health information technology grants and modernize their health information technology systems. The Critical Access to Health Information Technology Act of 2005 would create a grant program, administered by the secretary of health and human services, to allocate the federal funding to states based on their number of CAHs. Each state would then award its grant allocation on a competitive basis to government and private nonprofit hospitals that are designated as a CAH.

New health information technologies have been shown to reduce medical errors by making the system more efficient and effective. These new technologies are more adept at catching diseases sooner when they are less expensive to treat, and have reduced hospital lengths of stay and rehabilitation.

"Currently, Minnesota ranks third in the number of critical access hospitals in the nation. Minnesota is the Medical Alley and I want to make sure those smaller communities have the opportunity to deliver the best of care possible," said Coleman. "Most rural hospitals do not have the personnel capabilities, or access, to compete with larger health systems for funding. Each year, we are witnessing significant advances in healthcare technologies that improve the quality of healthcare for patients. If we have the means to help reduce medical errors, improve quality of care, and reduce rising healthcare costs, it is imperative that small towns and communities benefit as well."

"The Critical Access to Health Information Technology Act of 2005 would help small, rural hospitals meet growing expectations that healthcare facilities of all sizes provide electronic medical records and other current technology. New medical school graduates expect these resources as well, so it is important to physician recruitment. This bill would give these hospitals some much-needed support, strengthening rural hospitals, which are such important community resources," said Ben Koppelman, member, MHA Small, Rural Hospital Committee, administrator, Albany Area Hospital and Medical Center.

"Minnesota's rural hospitals deeply appreciate Senator Coleman's understanding of the vital role technology plays in modern medicine. By spurring prudent investments in health information technology, Senator Coleman's bill would help ensure the right information is available at the right place at the right time. The benefits are clear; this bill would improve care coordination and reduce healthcare costs," said Al Vogt, chair, MHA Small, Rural Hospital Committee, CEO, Cook Hospital and Convalescence and Nursing Care Unit.

In addition, this bill includes a provision supporting the next generation of coding system (ICD-10) that will modernize and expand the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services' capacity to keep pace with changes in medical practice and technology. The ICD-10 will identify technologies used to perform new procedures. The adoption of ICD-10 will allow for far more accurate, detailed and descriptive coding, billing and payment for procedures and the underlying medical conditions, and will allow the system to adapt as future changes.

E85 grants available

As the result of a plan passed by the 2005 Minnesota Legislature, service stations in the state installing E85 pumps are now eligible for financial assistance. The plan, reached in agreement with the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, provides a total of $500,000 in assistance to owners of service stations that qualify.

"As the use of E85 becomes more popular, service stations will have to find a way to cater to the demand," said Rep. Greg Davids (R-Preston). "I think this plan is an effective step towards easing the burden some service station owners might feel in an attempt to meet the demand of motorists. I hope the financial assistance available will encourage more service stations to offer E85, so they can experience the benefits of the fuel that many drivers and the state of Minnesota as a whole are already experiencing."

Under the plan, a total of $15,000 per site is available for reimbursement. Covered costs can include new tanks and related components. Service stations installing pumps in areas of the state where E85 is not currently available will be given the highest priority in receiving funds.

The alternative fuel - consisting of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline - is now available in 34 states, with Minnesota leading the nation in its development.

Several domestic car manufacturers have announced new Flex Fuel automobiles for 2006 - vehicles specifically designed to burn E85. Those vehicles are also able to burn most any combination of ethanol and gasoline.

"It's of high importance that E85 be made available statewide in Minnesota, especially since the state is the national leader in its production," Davids said.

Benefits of E85 include:

- E85 is a renewable energy source, reducing our dependence on foreign oil.
- The use of E85 can result in a 35 percent reduction in greenhouse gas emissions and produces less potentially harmful tailpipe pollutants.
- E85 is competitively priced to gasoline, and in some areas of the state it actually costs less per gallon than regular unleaded.
- Because it is manufactured locally, the use of E85 puts money directly back into Minnesota - upwards of $580 million per year.

Biodiesel fuel quality important

On October 27, Flint Hills, a petroleum refinery in Minnesota formerly known as Koch Petroleum, reported that some of their stored biodiesel had a flash point below the minimum of 130 degrees C. The refinery requested that the Minnesota Department of Commerce issue a 10-day variance of the B2 requirement to give them time to resolve the problem and resupply.

Flash point is one parameter of the biodiesel specification. The biodiesel specification is in place to help ensure quality fuel. The flash point of this fuel, although slightly out of spec, was still well within the parameters required for a safe, high-performing fuel. However, since spec fuel is required in the B2 law, Flint Hills asked for the variance, which the Department of Commerce agreed to issue.

As with petroleum diesel, biodiesel fuel quality is of paramount importance and is one of the industry's top priorities. The biodiesel supplier and the petroleum refinery will evaluate the situation and work to resolve the issue so that the B2 requirement will resume within the 10-day time frame.

Diesel fuel disruptions due largely to the hurricanes have created a diesel fuel shortage throughout the nation, especially in northern states like Minnesota. Claims that the B2 requirement has somehow contributed to this shortage are baseless. The addition of biodiesel to the Minnesota diesel fuel supply has actually been very effective at helping to extend the diesel supply with a renewable, homegrown, cleaner burning fuel during this critical time.

Although independent testing of the fuel in question is underway, initial investigation indicates that the biodiesel batch could have been contaminated at some point with a residual amount of a lower flash point fuel.

LEGALS

November 9, 2005

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS
OCTOBER 11TH, 2005, 10:00 A.M.

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Pennington County Board Room in Thief River Falls, MN, Tuesday, October 11th, 2005, at 10:00 a.m. Members present: Bob Carlson, Donald Jensen, Oliver "Skip" Swanson, and Charles Naplin. Members absent: Arden "Bud" Comstock.

County Engineer Mike Flaagan met with the Board and said Wendel Teigland has requested a centerline culvert on the south side of Section 20 in Goodridge Township. Mike said according to the survey the water flows north, so he doesn't see a need for the culvert. No further action was taken by the Board on this issue.

Mike then said there is a petition to clean County Ditch #55 along Sections 5, 8, 17, and 20 in Hickory Township, totalling approximately 2 1/3 miles. All affected landowners have signed the petition, and Mike agrees it should be cleaned. Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to clean Branch 1 of C.D. #55 along the west side of Sections 5, 8, and 17 in Hickory Township. Motion was unanimously carried.

Engineer Flaagan then said Dean Philipp contacted him and would like to petition into the judicial ditch system. Mike will be sending him a form letter to find out more information on the land he would like to drain. The issue will also need to be brought to attention at a joint ditch meeting.

Mike then commented on the rates that the County charges for blading and snowplowing. Other area counties have increased their rates due to fuel prices and so forth, and he believes we should do the same. Pennington County currently charges $60.00/hour and for private drives there is a $25.00 minimum charge. Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to increase the County's blading and snowplowing rates to $70.00/hour and a $30.00 minimum charge for private drives. These charges are to be effective Jan. 1st, 2006 for townships and Nov. 1st, 2005 for private driveways. Motion was unanimously carried.

Mr. Flaagan then commented on the culvert that Cecil Anderson had previously requested for C.D. #36 along Section 23 of Smiley Township. He couldn't find any records that indicate if the culvert was in at the time the ditch was established. No further action was taken at this time.

Mike then mentioned that applications for the motor grader position are due Friday, October 24th, and he asked if the Road Committee would like to sit in on the interviews. It was decided that the interviews will take place on Monday, October 24th, 2005, from 1-4 p.m., and that the Road Committee will sit in on the interviews.

Mike then said the soil survey results for the cold storage facility are back and the gravel will be going in soon. He is still waiting on the building plans from UBC.

Chairman Naplin then said he has been getting complaints in regards to the 110th, 120th, and 130th Avenues being damaged from trucks hauling gravel for the Wal-Mart sight. The contractors are supposed to return the road to its condition before work began, so he will contact them in regards to this.

There was a motion by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve the advertising of the former solid waste and compost facility for sale. The advertisement will be placed three times in the local paper, The Times, in accordance with statutes. The property will be sold on November 8th, 2005 at 10:00 a.m. Motion was unanimously carried.

Chairman Naplin then presented two proposals for the replacement of the truck scale at the solid waste facility. The first proposal, from Northwest Scale, Inc. of Fargo, ND, came to $39,460 and included sales tax and a 4-week delivery time. The second proposal, from Fairbanks Scales, Inc. of St. Cloud, MN, totaled $39,443 without sales tax and included a 7-week delivery time. After some discussion on the matter, there was a motion by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Jensen, to accept the proposal from Northwest Scale, Inc. of $39,460 for a new truck scale. Motion was unanimously carried.

County Auditor Ken Olson then presented a letter from the Thief River Falls Sno-Drifters requesting a change in the snowmobile trail route that now follows County Road 62 to Highway 59 S. They want to reroute at 150th Ave. NE to County Road 8 and then East to Highway 59 S. The Board gave their approval to the route change pending review by the County Engineer.

Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve the appointing of Arlene Thune, Dave Strong, and Bob Wald to the Board of Adjustments as per the Pennington County Shoreland Ordinance. Motion was unanimously carried.

Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve and have Chairman Naplin sign the Programmatic Standards for Combination Programs Serving Battered Women, General Crime, and Sexual Assault Victims. Motion was unanimously carried.

Auditor Olson then mentioned that the Score block grant has been approved for fiscal year 2006 in the amount of $49,079, with the County match being 25%.

Mr. Olson then mentioned that Rural Cellular Corp (RCC) is going to put a 255' cellular tower in Section 17 of Wyandotte Township. No action by the Board was needed.

Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Carlson, to approve the minutes of September 27th as written. Motion was unanimously carried.

Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve the following Commissioner warrants of October 14th, 2005 as presented. Motion was unanimously carried.

Phi Theta Kappa had a spectacularly successful Halloween food drive for the Area Food Shelf in Thief River Falls. On Nov. 1, the organization delivered the food to the food shelf. Pictured delivering the food is, from left: Kristen Underdahl of Newfolden, Karl Anderson of Greenbush, Marit Dalen of Thief River Falls, and Adam Paulson, adviser. Paulson thanked the community for being so generous. He added that the staff and students at Northland Community and Technical College - Thief River Falls also helped make this a successful event by donating so much food off at the drop-off sites at the college.

Sarah Mattison (left) and Chasity Johnson attended the Rotary Youth Leadership Award (RYLA) camp at the University of Minnesota - Crookston (UMC) during the month of July. RYLA is devoted to developing leadership skills.

Mrs. Kirby (played by Ana Olson) fainted into the arms of her husband, Mr. Kirby (played by Ben Willis), as their son, Tony (played by Zach Johnson), looked on in this rehearsal of the Lincoln High School (LHS) fall play, "You Can't Take It With You." Performances are scheduled this weekend in the LHS auditorium. Due to the football team's success in the playoffs, performances have been moved back a night to Saturday, Nov. 12 and Sunday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. Tickets are available at Kezar Music and at the door of the auditorium the nights of the performances. # Recycling opportunities

Thief River Falls City Council hears from supporters of recycling

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Thief River Falls City Council members may look at their garbage differently after attending the Nov. 8 council meeting. Kathy Huschle, environmental problems instructor at Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC), talked to the council about recycling.

Huschle spoke on behalf of NCTC students who participated in an academic service learning project about recycling. Students in three classes – environmental problems, state and local government, and composition 2 – participated in the project.

"As a result, we are in support that we propose and create more recycling in Thief River," Huschle said.

In October, city leaders proposed purchasing two large containers for the recycling of plastic, glass, tin and aluminum. If purchased, those containers would be placed at SuperOne Foods and Hugo's. They asked Pennington County to pay the processing fees to recycle the items. Pennington County initially agreed to pay those fees, and Howard Person, Pennington County solid waste officer, is working to confirm that County Board commissioners still want to do that, he said Nov. 9.

Currently, two large Dumpsters are located at SuperOne Foods and Hugo's for people to recycle their newspapers and magazines. At the council meeting, Huschle detailed reasons why the city should offer residents more opportunities to recycle. To show the need for recycling, she referred to an activity her environmental problems class completed. Students in the class weighed their personal garbage. After separating the recyclables from other garbage and weighing their garbage again, they found their 45 pounds of garbage decreased to 19 pounds.

Thief River Falls spent approximately $196,023 to process 3,439 tons of garbage in 2004, Huschle said. Using the 42-percent difference her class found after weighing its garbage on the two occasions, she added the city would have saved $82,329.66 if its sanitation customers recycled.

However, most towns with populations similar to that of Thief River Falls initially see a decrease of about 20 percent when residents start recycling, Huschle noted. Using that figure, she said Thief River Falls would save $39,204.46 if more recycling options were available.

Thief River Falls resident Maggie Anderson spoke in support of the classes' project and more recycling opportunities in the city. Anderson, who moved here 10 years ago from a Maine city with a population of about 200, noted she was disappointed with the lack of recycling here.

Anderson was among several local residents who attended the council meeting. About five NCTC students were in attendance as were Steve Nordhagen and Kent Hudson from Alpha Recycling.

City Council heard about a proposed water rate increase. The council did not vote on the water rate increase; however, Utilities Director Arlo Rude noted it would be brought to the Nov. 21 council meeting for approval.

If approved, beginning in January, residents and business owners would see an increase between $0.25 and $18 per month for water. The lowest rate increase – $0.25 per month – would be for customers currently paying $10.50 per month for water. The largest rate increase – $18 per month – would be for customers currently paying $748 per month for water.

"That raises about $47,000 and our revenue up to $1,490,347," said Rude, who noted the water utility would be about $30,000 short in revenue if it did not increase its rates.

Prior to discussing increases in water rates, the water treatment plant's mortgage was refinanced. However, Rude said, the utility was

Holiday Train plans TRF stop Dec. 14

Musical lineup is announced

A poem written on Christmas Day 1864 by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, a challenge issued in the last century in Ireland and the timeless appeal of unconditional love inspired some of the songs in this year's upcoming shows on the lighted Holiday Train.

The Holiday Train will travel to Thief River Falls Dec. 14. It will travel to various locations throughout Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. Holiday lights adorn the train, which travels from town to town to help raise money for local food banks.

Prior to the train's arrival, a spaghetti supper will be held at the Heritage Center. Proceeds from the dinner and the subsequent train stop will go to the Area Food Shelf.

The train is scheduled to stop in Thief River Falls from 8:05 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 14. It will stop at City Hall. Performers include John Gorka, a folk musician; the Ennis Sisters, a Celtic-pop trio; and Canadian Country Music Association award winner Tracey Brown.

County rejects bids on compost facility, property

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The Pennington County Board of Commissioners rejected all three purchase bids it received for the sale of the county compost facility and surrounding land. Bids to purchase the facility were opened at the start of the board's Nov. 8 meeting.

Three bids were received prior to the meeting for two tracts of land that make up what used to be the county compost facility. Tract A contains 8.47 acres and is improved with two metal commercial buildings totalling 56,000 square feet. Tract B contains 8.4 acres and is unimproved.

The bid opening began with County Board Chairman Charles Naplin describing the bidding procedure. All sealed bids would be opened and Tract A, Tract B and total bids announced. Bidders would then be given the opportunity to raise their bids verbally.

Opening bids were received from Omega of Thief River Falls, Tract A - $10,000 and Tract B - $1,000; Arctic Cat, Tract A - $1,000 and Tract B - $500; and Karl Bjorkman, Tract A - $500 and Tract B - $500. The lowest bidder, Bjorkman, was not present at the meeting. Naplin then asked Arctic Cat representative Ron Ray if he would like to increase Arctic Cat's bid. He declined the opportunity. Omega was not given an opportunity to increase its bid.'

With a high total bid of $11,000 on the table, the Board unanimously rejected all bids. After rejecting all bids, County Auditor Ken Olson announced the value of the property, based on an appraisal from Boetcher Appraisal, to be $290,000 for Tract A and $42,000 for Tract B.

After rejecting bids, Commissioner Bob Carlson said of the compost facility bidding, "This is a disappointment."

Naplin added that the Board expected much higher bids than it received. When asked why they bid so low, both Ray and Steve Nordhagen of Omega had similar responses, that they were submitting bids to get a seat at the negotiating

County discusses courtroom needs

Three courtrooms needed to meet future needs of Ninth Judicial District

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The region should be prepared for consolidation of court facilities.

In a letter to Pennington County Commissioners, retired Ninth District Judge Dennis Murphy warned them that there has been a lot of talk about consolidating court facilities.

A letter written by recently retired judge, Dennis J. Murphy, was read into Nov. 8 record by Auditor Ken Olson. Addressed to commissioners, Murphy's letter thanked commissioners for their help over the years in maintaining and improving the courtrooms and court facilities in Pennington County. He stated that nearly every need was met.

"As you know, I have been very active in state administration of the new court system. I am also writing this letter to request that you consider building a new court facility. There has been a lot of talk about consolidating courthouses and having minimum contact with some of the court facilities in the sparsely populated areas, which includes almost all of western Minnesota.

"It is my belief that having a facility with at least three courtrooms and larger offices for more court administration staff, would be very beneficial to Pennington County in the future."

Speculating as to Murphy's intent, County Attorney Dave Olin said that the Minnesota court system wants its courts to be able to host two jury trials at one time, while increasing security. He also speculated that Murphy's suggestion to construct a facility with three jury-trial ready courtrooms, would be to out do what any other county would construct.

He added that the Minnesota

Getting Fit Together

Student Wellness Committee looks at challenge

Committee considers the impact of vending machines at first meeting

by David Hill
Editor

The health and safety of children in School District 564 - Thief River Falls, and a new Federal law are pushing student wellness to the forefront of education in School District 564.

In an effort to meet a new legal requirement that all school districts implement a local school wellness policy no later than the first day of the school year beginning after June 30, 2006, the School District in Thief River Falls created a Student Wellness Committee.

That Committee, comprising of students, physical education teachers, the food service director, local citizens, administrators and other volunteers, met Tuesday, Nov. 9, at the District Service Center in Thief River Falls.

The new federal law is driving a lot of the activity around this issue, but media coverage of student obesity rates, and an increasing awareness of the benefits of health improvement goals, are also generating some of the interest.

But why focus on schools?

In ena ing its nutrition policy, the Grand Forks, N.D., public schools committee found that "eating habits are learned early in life, and school board interventions are indicated as potential key components in achieving public health improvement goals. Poor nutrition and fitness habits are the root causes of several serious public health problems in America."

While there may be many reasons for a wellness policy, School District 564 is focusing on who would benefit most from a wellness policy. "We're not doing this to satisfy people in Washington, D.C., or fulfill a mandate of law," said School District 564 Superintendent Irv Peterson. "We're doing this for our kids and our communities. That's the bottom line."

In the months to come, members of the Committee in Thief River Falls will assess conditions in the District and examine needs.

At its first meeting, the initial focus of the group seemed to be venting about vending machines. Several parents, and members of the Committee, and even the two students on the Committee, acknowledged that students often bypass healthful meals from food service for a can or bottle of soda and candy. The presence of vending machines makes that possible.

Helen Anderson, co-chair of the Committee, said people would not believe the amount of soda consumed at the school.

What's wrong with soda?

Soda is one of the items considered of little or no nutritional value. In addition, sodas are considered to be the leading source of extra calories for children. A 20-ounce bottle

SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL HOMESTEAD

The special Agricultural Homestead Provision was created to extend homestead status (which can result in lower property taxes) to those property owners, or their sons and daughters, who actively farm the land. The 1999 Minnesota Legislation passed legislation that extended the homestead classification to certain farmland that is not immediately adjacent to an owner's place of residence. The 2000 Legislation also extended the homestead to members of a family farm corporation, joint farm venture, limited liability company or partnership. The legislation provides for homestead or non-contiguous farmland under the following conditions:

Agricultural property consisting of at least 40 acres shall be classified homestead, to the same extent as other agricultural property, if all the following criteria are met:

1- the owner, or the owner's spouse, or a son or daughter of the owner or owner's spouse either on the person's own behalf as an individual or on behalf of a qualified entity in which they are a partner, shareholder or member actively farms the agricultural property;
2- the owner of a agricultural property is a MN resident;
3- neither the owner or their spouse may claim another agricultural homestead in MN;
4- the owner does not live farther than four townships or cities, or a combination of four townships or cities, from the agricultural property; and
5- be listed as a farmer/operator by the Farm Service Agency (Form 156 EZ)
6- file a Schedule F with their federal income tax return.

The following definition constitutes "actively farming". Persons engaged in actively farming must participate in the day to day labor, administration, and management of the farm. They must assume all or a portion of the financial risks and they must participate in any profits and losses.

Additionally:

- The farmland must be a minimum of 40 acres in size and,
- The farmland must meet the definition of agricultural property contained in MN Statutes 273.124, Subd. 14(b)
- Land enrolled in CRP or RIM do not qualify for the homestead classification, it will continue to be classified as agricultural

This special homestead provision is only available to qualified individuals that make application by the filing deadline of December 15. To find out how to apply for the special agricultural homestead and receive the proper application from contact

Acknowledge the efforts of family caregivers this month

National Family Caregiver Month is celebrated in November to draw attention to the work of 50 million family caregivers across the United States.

Those who are caregivers have a long and complicated job description. They might provide 24-hour care to someone who has a dementia illness or someone who is physically unable to navigate the activities of daily living without constant assistance. They may take care of a parent, a child, or both at the same time. Some work at a full-time job outside of their homes and a second shift providing care for someone who needs assistance with meals, paying bills, transportation to medical appointments, raking, shoveling, management of medications…the list goes on.

Family caregivers are also the backbone of long-term care in the U.S., saving $257 billion annually in healthcare costs by providing "free" care that helps to keep people in their homes and out of nursing homes.

To acknowledge the efforts of family caregivers in November and year-round:

- Send a card of acknowledgement or a bouquet of flowers to a family caregiver.
- Volunteer to stay with a care recipient for several hours so that the primary family caregiver can have a real break from constant responsibility. Regular breaks from caregiving are critical to physical and emotional health.
- Give a family caregiver a funny movie or book on tape. Humor is excellent medicine.
- Offer to prepare and deliver dinner to a family caregiver every Sunday (or Tuesday or Friday) for one month. Offer to bring Christmas dinner in December.
- Take a few minutes to write to legislators, reminding them of the necessity of financing home care for seniors.
- If you are a business owner, have a special promotion for family caregivers during the month of November.
- Ask your pastor, priest or rabbi to do a special service for family caregivers during the month of November.

To receive service, volunteer as a respite worker or get more information, call Diane Robson at 681-2885.

Respite and coaching are provided on a sliding fee basis. Caregiver discussion groups are free, and there are no "officers," no committees, and no jobs to do. Just come and benefit by the wisdom of the true experts – caregivers just like you.

The Lutheran Social Service Caregiver Support and Respite Program is funded through the Land of the Dancing Sky Area Agency on Aging as part of the Older Americans Act.

K-12 foundations: A funding source for schools and districts

Nov. 13-19 marks American Education Week, and National Philanthropy Day is Friday, Nov. 18. During these observances, local residents are reminded of the opportunity to give to the Thief River Falls Education Foundation (TRFEF).

In today's economic times, single source financing for schools and districts is no longer an option. Many economists, school leaders and school finance researchers are encouraging the establishment, growth and development of school foundations as a means of supplementing or enhancing educational opportunities for children.

School foundations are well known for achieving multiple benefits for the school or district they support:

- Enhancing and improving communication between the school or district and its respective community and alumni.
- Offering opportunities for community members to become involved with their local district through various volunteer activities and events.
- Garnering a variety of resources and funds for use by the school or district for the enhancement of educational opportunities for the children of the school or district.

The TRFEF has provided excellence in education for the past 15 years. It is a nonprofit foundation that supports public education through scholarships and grants. TRFEF is funded entirely by donations received through general and lifetime memberships, 564 Club memberships, memorials and private donations.

For more information, call 681-8711 or write to, the Thief River Falls Education Foundation, 230 LaBree Ave. S., Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Three Northland Community and Technical College employees from the Thief River Falls campus were selected to attend the 2005/2006 Academy for Leadership and Development. The recipients include Becky Holthusen, director of human resources; Stacy Hron, director of information technology services; and Gerry Schulte, business manager.

Enrollment is limited to 54 participants throughout the state. Potential candidates for the leadership academy are nominated by the college president. The overall focus of the program is to establish a high quality, cost-effective leadership development program and utilize a skills-based approach, grounded in sound theoretical leadership concepts, principles, and practices.

The leadership academy is a distinguished development program. The goal of the leadership program is to identify talented staff and develop their readiness and skills for leadership roles. It is designed to provide the leadership theories, practices and skills needed to support leaders, and those striving to become leaders, to lead their respective departments and colleges more effectively. This program is inclusive and focuses on leadership at all levels in the organization. The academy is supported and endorsed by the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities in cooperation with The Academy for Leadership and Development in Mesa, Ariz.

The program design is based on the concept of training-over-time, and allows participants to thoroughly understand and apply leadership concepts and skills. Participants attend 10 full-day leadership sessions scheduled over one year (an initial five-day session, followed a year later by a concluding five-day session) held in the Monticello area along with several one-day development activities scheduled throughout the year. Participants work on their own individual development plan during the year and meet regularly with a campus mentor.

Peterson was in stable condition Monday afternoon at MeritCare Hospital in Fargo, N.D. Peterson was found on the front porch of her neighbor's house in the 300 block of Virginia Ave., Warroad Police Chief Robert Cudaback said. He noted Weinard was found at the couple's home. Cudaback declined to say the caliber of the gun used in the incident as the incident remains under investigation.

SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL HOMESTEAD

The special Agricultural Homestead Provision was created to extend homestead status (which can result in lower property taxes) to those property owners, or their sons and daughters, who actively farm the land. The 1999 Minnesota Legislation passed legislation that extended the homestead classification to certain farmland that is not immediately adjacent to an owner's place of residence. The 2000 Legislation also extended the homestead to members of a family farm corporation, joint farm venture, limited liability company or partnership. The legislation provides for homestead or non-contiguous farmland under the following conditions:

Agricultural property consisting of at least 40 acres shall be classified homestead, to the same extent as other agricultural property, if all the following criteria are met:

1- the owner, or the owner's spouse, or a son or daughter of the owner or owner's spouse either on the person's own behalf as an individual or on behalf of a qualified entity in which they are a partner, shareholder or member actively farms the agricultural property;
2- the owner of a agricultural property is a MN resident;
3- neither the owner or their spouse may claim another agricultural homestead in MN;
4- the owner does not live farther than four townships or cities, or a combination of four townships or cities, from the agricultural property; and
6- file a Schedule F with their federal income tax return.

The following definition constitutes "actively farming". Persons engaged in actively farming must participate in the day to day labor, administration, and management of the farm. They must assume all or a portion of the financial risks and they must participate in any profits and losses.

Additionally:

- The farmland must be a minimum of 40 acres in size and,
- The farmland must meet the definition of agricultural property contained in MN Statutes 273.124, Subd. 14(b)
- Land enrolled in CRP or RIM do not qualify for the homestead classification, it will continue to be classified as agricultural

This special homestead provision is only available to qualified Individuals that make application by the filing deadline of December 15. To find out how to apply for the special agricultural homestead and receive the proper application from contact

Acknowledge the efforts of family caregivers this month

National Family Caregiver Month is celebrated in November to draw attention to the work of 50 million family caregivers across the United States.

Those who are caregivers have a long and complicated job description. They might provide 24-hour care to someone who has a dementia illness or someone who is physically unable to navigate the activities of daily living without constant assistance. They may take care of a parent, a child, or both at the same time. Some work at a full-time job outside of their homes and a second shift providing care for someone who needs assistance with meals, paying bills, transportation to medical appointments, raking, shoveling, management of medications…the list goes on.

Family caregivers are also the backbone of long-term care in the U.S., saving $257 billion annually in healthcare costs by providing "free" care that helps to keep people in their homes and out of nursing homes.

To acknowledge the efforts of family caregivers in November and year-round:

- Send a card of acknowledgement or a bouquet of flowers to a family caregiver.
- Volunteer to stay with a care recipient for several hours so that the primary family caregiver can have a real break from constant responsibility. Regular breaks from caregiving are critical to physical and emotional health.
- Give a family caregiver a funny movie or book on tape. Humor is excellent medicine.
- Offer to prepare and deliver dinner to a family caregiver every Sunday (or Tuesday or Friday) for one month. Offer to bring Christmas dinner in December.
- Take a few minutes to write to legislators, reminding them of the necessity of financing home care for seniors.
- If you are a business owner, have a special promotion for family caregivers during the month of November.
- Ask your pastor, priest or rabbi to do a special service for family caregivers during the month of November.

To receive service, volunteer as a respite worker or get more information, call Diane Robson at 681-2885.

Respite and coaching are provided on a sliding fee basis. Caregiver discussion groups are free, and there are no "officers," no committees, and no jobs to do. Just come and benefit by the wisdom of the true experts – caregivers just like you.

The Lutheran Social Service Caregiver Support and Respite Program is funded through the Land of the Dancing Sky Area Agency on Aging as part of the Older Americans Act.

K-12 foundations: A funding source for schools and districts

Nov. 13-19 marks American Education Week, and National Philanthropy Day is Friday, Nov. 18. During these observances, local residents are reminded of the opportunity to give to the Thief River Falls Education Foundation (TRFEF).

In today's economic times, single source financing for schools and districts is no longer an option. Many economists, school leaders and school finance researchers are encouraging the establishment, growth and development of school foundations as a means of supplementing or enhancing educational opportunities for children.

School foundations are well known for achieving multiple benefits for the school or district they support:

- Enhancing and improving communication between the school or district and its respective community and alumni.
- Offering opportunities for community members to become involved with their local district through various volunteer activities and events.
- Garnering a variety of resources and funds for use by the school or district for the enhancement of educational opportunities for the children of the school or district.

The TRFEF has provided excellence in education for the past 15 years. It is a nonprofit foundation that supports public education through scholarships and grants. TRFEF is funded entirely by donations received through general and lifetime memberships, 564 Club memberships, memorials and private donations.

For more information, call 681-8711 or write to the Thief River Falls Education Foundation, 230 LaBree Ave. S., Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Enrollment is limited to 54 participants throughout the state. Potential candidates for the leadership academy are nominated by the college president. The overall focus of the program is to establish a high quality, cost-effective leadership development program and utilize a skills-based approach, grounded in sound theoretical leadership concepts, principles, and practices.

The leadership academy is a distinguished development program. The goal of the leadership program is to identify talented staff and develop their readiness and skills for leadership roles. It is designed to provide the leadership theories, practices and skills needed to support leaders, and those striving to become leaders, to lead their respective departments and colleges more effectively. This program is inclusive and focuses on leadership at all levels in the organization. The academy is supported and endorsed by the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities in cooperation with The Academy for Leadership and Development in Mesa, Ariz.

CORRECTION

According to Hugo's Manager Gary Anderson, a survey comparing Wal-Mart's prices and other stores' prices that was featured in the last edition of The Times was incorrect. He noted Hugo's hasn't sold Charmin (24-pack) for as high as $8.62. Anderson also noted the store doesn't sell 50-pound bags of Pedigree dog food. The survey was completed by the Lincoln High School global issues class.

Wiseth's guest was her granddaughter, Amber Hughes of Escalante, Utah, and Mildred Hughes of Warroad was also a guest. Wiseth won first prize in the birdhouse contest held at the district meeting.

Is it faith or ego and power?

Poor Pat Robertson, always saying what he really believes. Now the cable-television comedian and former presidential candidate has condemned little Dover, Pa., to a string of potential natural disasters for "voting God out of their school."

Dover voters did nothing of the sort, of course. They merely kicked out eight school board members who wanted to inject theology into the science classes in the form of a half-baked pseudo-theory called "intelligent design."

After hinting that Dover's vote makes the town a strong candidate for an earthquake or attack of the bird flu, Robertson said he had just wanted to make clear that "our spiritual actions have consequences."

Yep, you'd better watch how you vote or you might get smote.

A crackpot like Robertson would be little more than a joke if so many people didn't take him seriously. Even though the main qualification to succeed at mass religion seems to be that one be psychopathic enough to hear messages from God about hurricanes and elections, the public eats it up and keeps sending mounds of money.

Standards of intelligence for mass media religious leaders continue to sink, yet their influence in Washington, D.C., has swollen to the point where the White House took the trouble to run the Harriet Meirs Supreme Court nomination past Robertson and other holy charlatans before announcing the news to the press.

Talking with God about school boards, hurricanes and the Supreme Court might seem standard stuff for televangelists, but Robertson isn't the only current public figure to get instructions from God: Our own president recently told a group of Palestinian Christians that God told him to go to war in Iraq.

Folks, anytime you have a leader sending people to their deaths in an optional war overseas because of an alleged conversation they had with God, you've got big trouble.

If you are acting on instructions from God, what do silly little matters such as congressional approval, or budget constraints, or faked intelligence data, or world opinion, or opposition from heathen Democrats, or the possible deaths of thousands – what do any of those matter?

If you are convinced that God has given you instructions, you develop a moral assuredness which is downright dangerous. The world becomes black and white, good vs. evil, and determining which side you are on doesn't demand a lot of introspection.

What happened to the humility of a Lincoln, or a Washington, who in their public pronouncements and private ruminations called on the Almighty for wisdom, but who never claimed divine sanction for their specific policies?

The alleged "faith" of Robertson and President George W. Bush amounts to little more than ego and power dressed up in holy robes. It is a faith which somehow finds a way to call itself Christian while it ignores any part of the New Testament which can't be applied to petty matters of private personal behavior.

The founding fathers were adamant about keeping our government secular, and for good reason. They knew that religion in the public sphere tended to make the religion hollow and the government intolerant.

The Supreme Court has been so insistent upon the separation of church and state because the founders, in their writings, demanded such a separation to the point of specifically condemning state funding for religious schools.

The failure of the Miers nomination to the Supreme Court is encouraging. Bush tried to pass poor Miers off as a legitimate nominee simply because he "knew her heart." In other words, he knew that she shared his brand of religious faith.

Can you imagine a Catholic, or a Jew, or a Moslem trying to get by with such a trick? They'd be run out of the country!

Nothing wrong with public figures having a strong religious faith. They need all the strength they can get. But when leaders act like they have a monopoly on God and wield their religion as a club, they've become dangerous.

...Easter and Christmas

Hard to believe, but there were no Lutheran churches in the small Minnesota town mentioned in today's column. In fact, it must be nigh onto impossible for there to be no Lutheran churches, but there were none mentioned. Gee, I just visited a little Minnesota town where there were four churches, and every one of them was Lutheran. Nonetheless, there are none in today's story.

However, as the following story goes, there were only the four denominations represented in this Minnesota town, and since it might contain bits and pieces of their separate doctrines, I don't want to mess around and pretend that one of them was Lutheran.

Lutherans, please pardon the fact that you are not mentioned. And while we're at it, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists and Catholics please excuse the fact that you are mentioned, just in case this story offends you. Remember, it is all in fun. Here is the story:

There were four country churches in a small Minnesota town: The Presbyterian church, the Baptist church, the Methodist church and the Catholic church. Each church was overrun with squirrels.

One day, the Presbyterian church called a meeting to decide what to do about the squirrels. After much prayer and consideration, they determined that the squirrels were predestined to be there and they shouldn't interfere with God's Divine Will.

In the Methodist church, the squirrels had taken up habitation in the baptismal font. The deacons met and decided to put a cover on the font and drown the squirrels in it. The squirrels escaped somehow and there were twice as many in the baptismal font the next week.

In the Catholic church, a group of parishioners got together and decided that they were not in a position to harm any of God's creations, so they humanely trapped the squirrels and set them free a few miles outside of town. Three days later, all the squirrels were back.

But the Baptist church came up with the best and most effective solution. They baptized the squirrels and registered them as members of the church. Now they only see them on Easter and Christmas.

Now, last, but not least, all you Easter and Christmas churchgoers, please don't be offended either. It's wonderful that you come to visit God's house on the holidays; however, you might consider trying a visit on a regular Sunday morning. After all, if you had a friend you only visited an hour or so a couple of times a year, you might find you and your friend don't have too much in common. Why not surprise your friend, God, and visit Him at an unexpected time. You might find you like the experience so much, you'll become a regular visitor.

Let's face it. People love movies. And why not? What other medium allows an easy and quick escape from reality, not to mention admittance into worlds they could only dream of? I, too, fall prey to the fantastical promise of film, but not only as a viewer. You see, for me the magic lies not only in seeing a movie, but creating one as well.

My friends and I (dubbed the "Curious Anteater Productions" film group) have, on many occasions, collaborated to make short films, fake commercials, and whatever else our collective minds contrive. At present, we are undertaking a larger and more comprehensive filmmaking venture than we have previously done. It is a short film comedy (approx. 20 minutes...not quite feature-length), complete with a sturdy plot, colorful cast of characters and an assortment of locations. It will be a year this month since we began work on it, giving us the novelty of several different seasons.

We've worked through many conditions and struggled with many situations ranging from harsh weather to missing props and a stolen leopard-print vest. Scheduling conflicts have delayed shoots and scenes have had to be reshot several times until our cinematic goals have been met. Despite the hindrances we face, we persist, because we know that what we are working for is good and fun.

It intrigues me how many aspects of the filmmaking process there are. I also look at how they fit together, and how important each of them are to the overall production. It takes a stable set, a functioning camera, able actors, sufficient lighting, and lots more planning than the audience will come to realize and appreciate.

When I watch a movie, I of course, see the normal things an audience sees, but I also perceive it from the standpoint of an amateur filmmaker. I analyze the method of storytelling the director (the big shot in charge of the movie) uses. I notice the shots, the transitions, the scope, the tone, and all of the other subtle elements that are combined to construct the visual and ambient soul of the movie.

Every filmmaker has his or her own unique style, whether it be Steven Spielberg or Alfred Hitchcock, but what they have in common is the ability to tell a story. That is where my filmmaking ambitions stemmed from: the desire to tell a story. The screen is a wonderful canvas on which to paint my imagination, to tell a tale not with words but with sights, sounds, and emotions. For me, it is filmmakers like Quentin Tarantino and M. Night Shyamalan that inspire new and exciting storytelling techniques. It is movies like Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind and Star Wars that challenge our perceptions and evoke thoughts and feelings.

Filmmaking and film-experiencing are two of my passions, because they help amateur movie-makers like me to realize and convey stories to entertain, inform and inspire us to see the worlds within the realm of imagination.

ACTIVITIES

Fine-Feathered Holder

This fine-feathered Thanksgiving project holds plenty of treats! To make one holder, cut six inches off the top of a brown paper lunch bag and save the bottom part. Cut six 2-inch by 5-inch strips of brown construction paper. Fringe each strip along one side. To both the front and back of the bag, glue three strips (fringe down) so that they overlap slightly. Bend the fringe upward. Cut a brown head, a yellow beak, a red wattle and tail, and white eyes with black centers from construction paper, then glue the red tail on one end of the unfringed side and the completed head on the other unfringed side. Fill the completed holder with treats, such as pretzels or bags of candy corn. Gobble, gobble!

PARENTING TIPS

Fostering Creativity

Creativity is the ability to originate ideas, to redefine old situations with new perspectives, to find new solutions to old problems, and to see new relationships between seemingly unrelated objects, ideas or actions. We often think of creativity as an artist's special ability to translate thoughts, words or actions into a new form. But creativity should be a part of everyone's life beginning during the preschool years.

Creativity is a valuable personal resource. Because the world is rapidly changing, we cannot predict the needs of the future. One of the most important tools you can give your child is the ability to shift gears and take a new approach in the fact of change.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

One way to talk to your child and to encourage creativity is to ask questions that require more than one word answers. For example, instead of asking "What is it?" say "Tell me about it."

Fall changes and performances recognized

Fall is in the air, but according to the calendar, winter should be in the air (I think it is only hours away as I write this). We certainly have had an extended fall, a beautiful fall by most standards, and one that has been greatly appreciated by many folks that I have spoken with. Fall sports seasons have been extended too. We have had much success on many fronts athletically this fall. We have had great performances by individuals and by teams in Prowler Country. Congratulations to athletes and coaches in all sports. Sometimes we have the tendency to measure success in these activities only by wins and losses, but there is much more involved. Yes, we have had many wins in the box scores, but we have had many success stories when talking about individual growth, teamwork, team growth through the season, and many life lessons learned. Thanks to all our athletes and coaches for all the hard work you have done.

As of this writing, we still have swimmers competing. April Peterson and Allyson Helling will be competing in the state swimming meet. Allyson was also named the Section Swim Athlete of the Year. Coach Lacy Wallace was also named Section Girls Swim Coach of the Year. Congratulations to all!

The football team also performed admirably in the state playoffs. Their performance last Friday at Albany was outstanding. Although they lost a close game on the scoreboard, and the season is over, they made everyone from Thief River Falls extremely proud. Their display of teamwork, sportsmanship, and skill was outstanding. Their legacy of sportsmanship and responsibility and maturity was printed in a recent publication of the Minnesota State High School League. Congratulations!

The fall play has had its curtain call as well. Many hours of dedicated practice went into this production too. It was a great comedy that the audience thoroughly enjoyed and I think the performers did as well. Hopefully the rescheduling of the fall play allowed you to see the production.

Our series of concerts has also begun. The next few weeks will present opportunities to hear our musicians at both Lincoln High School and Franklin Middle School perform. I am always amazed at the high quality of these performances. Our talented instructors work hard with very talented and enthusiastic students. It is a great formula for providing outstanding listening entertainment for our community. Please take advantage of these opportunities. The senior high choir had a very successful and fun telethon this weekend. Congratulations and thanks to all who had a hand in that, as well as to all who called in pledges.

November is the month that preliminary tax statements are sent to property owners in Minnesota. There will be significant increases on these property tax statements, as I have mentioned before. Be expecting an increase on your tax statement. The average school tax increase in our district is just over 13 percent, but yours could be higher or lower, depending on changes to your property value. The statewide average is somewhere around 20 percent. Most of these changes are due to changes in the law from our recent legislative session this past spring and summer. Some increases around the state are due to levy referendums again this year.

Some of our revenue that has been in the form of state aid in previous years has been changed to a local property tax levy this year by the legislation. There are areas of school revenue that have been increased this year, but many of the increases on your property tax statements are not from increased school revenue, but from state shifts. The state shifted $139 million from state aid to property tax levies this year.

If you have a group or service club that would like me to come to explain some of this to you, please call my office to arrange that. There also will be Truth in Taxation meetings hosted by cities, counties, and school districts across the state in the next few weeks.

This week is American Education Week. It is a week to thank all our teachers for their outstanding work and dedication to teaching our children and young people. When you see a teacher this week, give them a smile and a pat on the back, and tell them "Thanks for all you do". We certainly are blessed in Thief River Falls to have such great teachers in all our schools.

Enjoy the rest of November. Bundle up and get into a good book. Take care and God Bless.

55 donate during LHS blood drive

The Lincoln High School Student Senate coordinated and sponsored a successful blood drive on Nov. 2. A total of 67 people volunteered to donate at their drive to help patients in this area, 55 were able to give and 67 units were collected. There were 47 first-time donors, most consisting of students.

High School blood drives make up a large percentage of the community blood supply in the fall, winter and spring. United Blood Services appreciates the time and energy the Student Senate puts forth to organize their high school blood drive, as well as the support from students, faculty and administration. Others who assisted with the drive were: Joan Abercrombie, Danita Torkelson, McDonald's, The Times and KTRF.

Host families sought for student exchange program

Want to know more about the world and its people but haven't the time or the funds to travel? Families who have participated in an exchange program have reported a new appreciation for other cultures and a great satisfaction in opening their home and hearts to an international visitor. Family members not only learn of another country but also become better acquainted with their own sense of nationalism, history, and traditions.

International Student Exchange Inc. (ISE) is presently seeking host families for students from 60 different countries. Students between the ages of 15 and 18 are carefully screened by ISE for suitability. They bring their own spending money and are fully insured.

A student attends the local high school and is expected to bear his or her own share of household responsibilities. The length of stay can range from six months to a full year, depending on the host's wishes. An ISE representative will help those interested in hosting an exchange student select the student from numerous student applications that include a photo of the student, biographies, and letters.

For more information on being an ISE host family contact Trista Lund, ISE Area Representative at 218-681-2325 or email tlund@mncable.net.

...Easter and Christmas

Hard to believe, but there were no Lutheran churches in the small Minnesota town mentioned in today's column. In fact, it must be nigh onto impossible for there to be no Lutheran churches, but there were none mentioned. Gee, I just visited a little Minnesota town where there were four churches, and every one of them was Lutheran. Nonetheless, there are none in today's story.

However, as the following story goes, there were only the four denominations represented in this Minnesota town, and since it might contain bits and pieces of their separate doctrines, I don't want to mess around and pretend that one of them was Lutheran.

Lutherans, please pardon the fact that you are not mentioned. And while we're at it, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists and Catholics please excuse the fact that you are mentioned, just in case this story offends you. Remember, it is all in fun. Here is the story:

There were four country churches in a small Minnesota town: The Presbyterian church, the Baptist church, the Methodist church and the Catholic church. Each church was overrun with squirrels.

One day, the Presbyterian church called a meeting to decide what to do about the squirrels. After much prayer and consideration, they determined that the squirrels were predestined to be there and they shouldn't interfere with God's Divine Will.

In the Methodist church, the squirrels had taken up habitation in the baptismal font. The deacons met and decided to put a cover on the font and drown the squirrels in it. The squirrels escaped somehow and there were twice as many in the baptismal font the next week.

In the Catholic church, a group of parishioners got together and decided that they were not in a position to harm any of God's creations, so they humanely trapped the squirrels and set them free a few miles outside of town. Three days later, all the squirrels were back.

But the Baptist church came up with the best and most effective solution. They baptized the squirrels and registered them as members of the church. Now they only see them on Easter and Christmas.

Now, last, but not least, all you Easter and Christmas churchgoers, please don't be offended either. It's wonderful that you come to visit God's house on the holidays; however, you might consider trying a visit on a regular Sunday morning. After all, if you had a friend you only visited an hour or so a couple of times a year, you might find you and your friend don't have too much in common. Why not surprise your friend, God, and visit Him at an unexpected time. You might find you like the experience so much, you'll become a regular visitor.

View from the director's chair

Let's face it. People love movies. And why not? What other medium allows an easy and quick escape from reality, not to mention admittance into worlds they could only dream of? I, too, fall prey to the fantastical promise of film, but not only as a viewer. You see, for me the magic lies not only in seeing a movie, but creating one as well.

My friends and I (dubbed the "Curious Anteater Productions" film group) have, on many occasions, collaborated to make short films, fake commercials, and whatever else our collective minds contrive. At present, we are undertaking a larger and more comprehensive filmmaking venture than we have previously done. It is a short film comedy (approx. 20 minutes...not quite feature-length), complete with a sturdy plot, colorful cast of characters and an assortment of locations. It will be a year this month since we began work on it, giving us the novelty of several different seasons.

We've worked through many conditions and struggled with many situations ranging from harsh weather to missing props and a stolen leopard-print vest. Scheduling conflicts have delayed shoots and scenes have had to be reshot several times until our cinematic goals have been met. Despite the hindrances we face, we persist, because we know that what we are working for is good and fun.

It intrigues me how many aspects of the filmmaking process there are. I also look at how they fit together, and how important each of them are to the overall production. It takes a stable set, a functioning camera, able actors, sufficient lighting, and lots more planning than the audience will come to realize and appreciate.

When I watch a movie, I of course, see the normal things an audience sees, but I also perceive it from the standpoint of an amateur filmmaker. I analyze the method of storytelling the director (the big shot in charge of the movie) uses. I notice the shots, the transitions, the scope, the tone, and all of the other subtle elements that are combined to construct the visual and ambient soul of the movie.

Every filmmaker has his or her own unique style, whether it be Steven Spielberg or Alfred Hitchcock, but what they have in common is the ability to tell a story. That is where my filmmaking ambitions stemmed from: the desire to tell a story. The screen is a wonderful canvas on which to paint my imagination, to tell a tale not with words but with sights, sounds, and emotions. For me, it is filmmakers like Quentin Tarantino and M. Night Shyamalan that inspire new and exciting storytelling techniques. It is movies like Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind and Star Wars that challenge our perceptions and evoke thoughts and feelings.

Filmmaking and film-experiencing are two of my passions, because they help amateur movie-makers like me to realize and convey stories to entertain, inform and inspire us to see the worlds within the realm of imagination.

ACTIVITIES

Fine-Feathered Holder

This fine-feathered Thanksgiving project holds plenty of treats! To make one holder, cut six inches off the top of a brown paper lunch bag and save the bottom part. Cut six 2-inch by 5-inch strips of brown construction paper. Fringe each strip along one side. To both the front and back of the bag, glue three strips (fringe down) so that they overlap slightly. Bend the fringe upward. Cut a brown head, a yellow beak, a red wattle and tail, and white eyes with black centers from construction paper, then glue the red tail on one end of the unfringed side and the completed head on the other unfringed side. Fill the completed holder with treats, such as pretzels or bags of candy corn. Gobble, gobble!

PARENTING TIPS

Fostering Creativity

Creativity is the ability to originate ideas, to redefine old situations with new perspectives, to find new solutions to old problems, and to see new relationships between seemingly unrelated objects, ideas or actions. We often think of creativity as an artist's special ability to translate thoughts, words or actions into a new form. But creativity should be a part of everyone's life beginning during the preschool years.

Creativity is a valuable personal resource. Because the world is rapidly changing, we cannot predict the needs of the future. One of the most important tools you can give your child is the ability to shift gears and take a new approach in the fact of change.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

One way to talk to your child and to encourage creativity is to ask questions that require more than one word answers. For example, instead of asking "What is it?" say "Tell me about it."

Fall changes and performances recognized

Fall is in the air, but according to the calendar, winter should be in the air (I think it is only hours away as I write this). We certainly have had an extended fall, a beautiful fall by most standards, and one that has been greatly appreciated by many folks that I have spoken with. Fall sports seasons have been extended too. We have had much success on many fronts athletically this fall. We have had great performances by individuals and by teams in Prowler Country. Congratulations to athletes and coaches in all sports. Sometimes we have the tendency to measure success in these activities only by wins and losses, but there is much more involved. Yes, we have had many wins in the box scores, but we have had many success stories when talking about individual growth, teamwork, team growth through the season, and many life lessons learned. Thanks to all our athletes and coaches for all the hard work you have done.

As of this writing, we still have swimmers competing. April Peterson and Allyson Helling will be competing in the state swimming meet. Allyson was also named the Section Swim Athlete of the Year. Coach Lacy Wallace was also named Section Girls Swim Coach of the Year. Congratulations to all!

The football team also performed admirably in the state playoffs. Their performance last Friday at Albany was outstanding. Although they lost a close game on the scoreboard, and the season is over, they made everyone from Thief River Falls extremely proud. Their display of teamwork, sportsmanship, and skill was outstanding. Their legacy of sportsmanship and responsibility and maturity was printed in a recent publication of the Minnesota State High School League. Congratulations!

The fall play has had its curtain call as well. Many hours of dedicated practice went into this production too. It was a great comedy that the audience thoroughly enjoyed and I think the performers did as well. Hopefully the rescheduling of the fall play allowed you to see the production.

Our series of concerts has also begun. The next few weeks will present opportunities to hear our musicians at both Lincoln High School and Franklin Middle School perform. I am always amazed at the high quality of these performances. Our talented instructors work hard with very talented and enthusiastic students. It is a great formula for providing outstanding listening entertainment for our community. Please take advantage of these opportunities. The senior high choir had a very successful and fun telethon this weekend. Congratulations and thanks to all who had a hand in that, as well as to all who called in pledges.

November is the month that preliminary tax statements are sent to property owners in Minnesota. There will be significant increases on these property tax statements, as I have mentioned before. Be expecting an increase on your tax statement. The average school tax increase in our district is just over 13 percent, but yours could be higher or lower, depending on changes to your property value. The statewide average is somewhere around 20 percent. Most of these changes are due to changes in the law from our recent legislative session this past spring and summer. Some increases around the state are due to levy referendums again this year.

Some of our revenue that has been in the form of state aid in previous years has been changed to a local property tax levy this year by the legislation. There are areas of school revenue that have been increased this year, but many of the increases on your property tax statements are not from increased school revenue, but from state shifts. The state shifted $139 million from state aid to property tax levies this year.

If you have a group or service club that would like me to come to explain some of this to you, please call my office to arrange that. There also will be Truth in Taxation meetings hosted by cities, counties, and school districts across the state in the next few weeks.

This week is American Education Week. It is a week to thank all our teachers for their outstanding work and dedication to teaching our children and young people. When you see a teacher this week, give them a smile and a pat on the back, and tell them "Thanks for all you do". We certainly are blessed in Thief River Falls to have such great teachers in all our schools.

Enjoy the rest of November. Bundle up and get into a good book. Take care and God Bless.

55 donate during LHS blood drive

The Lincoln High School Student Senate coordinated and sponsored a successful blood drive on Nov. 2. A total of 67 people volunteered to donate at their drive to help patients in this area, 55 were able to give and 67 units were collected. There were 47 first-time donors, most consisting of students.

High School blood drives make up a large percentage of the community blood supply in the fall, winter and spring. United Blood Services appreciates the time and energy the Student Senate puts forth to organize their high school blood drive, as well as the support from students, faculty and administration. Others who assisted with the drive were: Joan Abercrombie, Danita Torkelson, McDonald's, The Times and KTRF.

Host families sought for student exchange program

Want to know more about the world and its people but haven't the time or the funds to travel? Families who have participated in an exchange program have reported a new appreciation for other cultures and a great satisfaction in opening their home and hearts to an international visitor. Family members not only learn of another country but also become better acquainted with their own sense of nationalism, history, and traditions.

International Student Exchange Inc. (ISE) is presently seeking host families for students from 60 different countries. Students between the ages of 15 and 18 are carefully screened by ISE for suitability. They bring their own spending money and are fully insured.

A student attends the local high school and is expected to bear his or her own share of household responsibilities. The length of stay can range from six months to a full year, depending on the host's wishes. An ISE representative will help those interested in hosting an exchange student select the student from numerous student applications that include a photo of the student, biographies, and letters.

For more information on being an ISE host family contact Trista Lund, ISE Area Representative at 218-681-2325 or email tlund@mncable.net.

Pearl Jahnke, 88

Rio Rancho, N.M. - Pearl Jahnke, 88, formerly of Red Lake Falls, died September 24, 2005 in New Mexico.

Graveside services will be held on Thursday, November 17, at 3 p.m. at Oak Grove Cemetery in Red Lake Falls, with Rev. Gary Graff officiating.

Pearl Amelia Elise Jahnke was born on September 17, 1917 in rural Red Lake Falls, the daughter of Ludolf and Anna (Rosch) Jahnke. She was baptized October 14, 1917 at Emmanuel Lutheran Church in Wylie and confirmed May 25, 1930.

Pearl graduated from Lafayette High School in Red Lake Falls and attended Moorhead State Teachers College. She taught rural and elementary school for six years. Pearl attended a one room school and even taught in one. She then transferred to the Minnesota Business College in Minneapolis to study secretarial science.

She was very successful as a secretary working at a variety of locations, including Pioneer Engineering, the Lemington Hotel and retiring from Arthur Anderson and Company. At Arthur Anderson, she was secretary to Audit Partner, Jay Wein. In 1973, Pearl was named Secretary of the Year by the Minneapolis Gopher Chapter of the National Secretaries' Association now called the International Association of Administrative Professionals – IAAP. Pearl was very active in the National Secretaries' Association, having served as the Chapter secretary and chairman of the CPS committee.

Pearl loved history, taking many courses and Elderhostel trips. About a trip to Germany with Elderhostel she said "the instructor was excellent and did a wonderful job of condensing the history of Germany and Bavaria into 12 hours of lecture. Your sightseeing is much more meaningful when you understand the background of the area." Pearl loved to travel, criss-crossing the globe to visit many wonderful sights. One of her regrets was having to give up travel due to her health. She really missed it.

Her church was very important to her throughout her life. At Calvary Lutheran, in New Mexico, she was chairman of the telephone prayer chain. Pearl shared this quote in her 1982 Christmas letter—Death is not extinguishing the Light. It is putting out the lamp because the dawn has come. Tagore.

In the words of her friends, Pearl was descried as a great teacher, my "single" role model, very active, always on the go, so many friends, a quiet sense of humor, very proficient, and an excellent secretary. One of her friends, Philip DeJaelais, said that he ordered parts from Pioneer Engineering where Pearl worked. He was amazed as every time he called and gave a part number, Pearl recognized him by the number without him giving his name.

Funeral services were held on Saturday, November 12, at Gustav Adolph Lutheran Church of Strathcona, with Pastor Curt Matz officiating.

Rosabelle Leona Steffen was born March 13, 1916 on a farm near Radium, to Herman and Louise (Schulz) Steffen. She was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran faith and attended school in a two room country school until entering high school in Warren. In order for Rosabelle to attend high school and further her education she and her cousin rented a room in Warren at the age of 13.

Following graduation from Warren high school Rosabelle went on to attend and complete teachers training. She taught at numerous schools in Marshall County until 1945. She was united in marriage on April 15, 1945 to Norman Johnson at McCrea Lutheran Church in Radium, and the two made their home in Strathcona until moving in 1954 to the home Norman built in rural Strathcona.

Rosabelle's love of teaching brought her to start taking additional teaching classes and achieving her associate's degree in 1960. She soon after accepted a job teaching at Knox Elementary school in Thief River Falls. While teaching, Rosabelle continued with her own education and eventually achieved her bachelor's degree in education in 1964. Norman passed away on August 5, 1980 and Rosabelle continued to teach in Thief River Falls until her retirement in 1984.

She continued to make her home in Strathcona until entering the Greenbush Community Nursing Home in August 2005.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: My teenage children receive Social Security through my retirement. A friend said that my wife, who is not yet age 62, should be getting benefits too. Correct?

A: This really depends on the ages of the children getting benefits on your record. When someone is getting Social Security retirement or disability, or has died and is insured for survivor benefits, some family members can receive benefits. For children, benefits are usually payable if the child is under age 18 but can continue to about age 19, varying with birth date and school year, if the child is a full time student up to the high school level.

Payment to a severely disabled adult child is possible if his or her disability existed before age 22. Benefits to your wife could be payable even though she is not yet age 62 if at least one of the children getting SSA benefits is under age 16 or severely disabled and living at home. Other factors, such as her earnings, come into play.

Assuming your children are over age 16 and not disabled, benefits would not be payable to your wife at this time. Benefits for family members are routinely discussed during the application process but families can change. For example, children need not be a "pre-existing condition" to receive Social Security on your record. Should you two have another child, he or she could start receiving SSA benefits on your record. Since there would then be a child under age 18 receiving benefits through your record, your wife would likely be able to also.

Q: What will be the maximum earnings taxable for Social Security in 2006?

A: In 2006 the maximum earnings taxable for Social Security will be $94,200, up from $90,000. People earning less than $90,000 will not see any difference in the amount of SSA tax paid. There is no limit on the earnings taxable for Medicare. People receiving Social Security benefits continue to pay SSA and Medicare related payroll taxes if employed or self-employed.

Q: Did Social Security tax rates change for 2006?

A: Tax rates did not change from 2005. For 2006 they continue at 7.65 percent each for employer and employee and 15.30 percent for the self-employed. Earnings include gross wages and net income from self-employment. As before, the 7.65 percent tax rate is a combined rate for Social Security and Medicare. The SSA portion for combined retirement, survivor and disability benefits is 6.20 percent up to the 2006 taxable maximum earnings of $94,200. The Medicare portion is 1.45 percent on all earnings.

TRF student is founding member of Minnesota Appreciation Club at CLU

Members of the newest club at California Lutheran University, the Minnesota Appreciation Club (MAC), have pledged to "Follow the call of the Loon." The club was approved by the Associated Students of California Lutheran University in September and co-founders Katie Crosbie and Andrea Stenson, report that MAC already has more than 35 members.

Both natives of Minnesota, Crosbie, who grew up in Lakeville, and Stenson, who grew up in Thief River Falls, moved to California to begin their freshman year at CLU in 2003.

"When you choose to attend a college far away from home, it is always nice to meet people who share your background," said Crosbie.

With the hope of bringing Minnesotans at CLU together and educating others about their home state, Crosbie and Stenson worked together to put their plan into action. When Stenson left during the summer to study abroad in Australia, fellow MAC cabinet members Lauren Coss, Maple Grove, Autumn Malloy, Las Vegas, Nev., Katie Mahlberg, Buffalo and Jared Glesne, Coon Rapids, helped to make the club official.

The club is not exclusively for Minnesota natives. "An overwhelming number of students on this campus have family or friends in Minnesota, so we wanted this club to be open to all students who appreciate or want to learn more about the land of 10,000 lakes," said Crosbie. Currently, approximately 75 percent of the members are originally from Minnesota. Other members hail from Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, Wisconsin, Colorado, Nevada and Washington.

MAC's monthly meetings include the Minnesota Appreciation Test, which is designed to challenge native Minnesotans on how much they know about their home state while educating the "Minnesotans-at-Heart." The club is currently planning events for its members and the CLU community that include trips to the beach, Hollywood and Universal City Walk, taping of television shows in Los Angeles, and group trips to Target, a Minnesota-based company. Because the club also has a service focus, members will be sending cards to Minnesotans who are serving in Iraq.

High school page program offers opportunities

Rep. Brita Sailer invites local high school students to participate in the Minnesota House of Representatives High School Page Program. The program, open to students in their junior year, provides the opportunity to spend a week in St. Paul meeting with elected officials and assisting members during legislative session.

"Pages really get to be a part of the action in the Minnesota House for a week - meeting with representatives, helping members on the House floor," Rep. Sailer explained. "Some pages have even gone on to run for state office."

The program, in its 31st year, is modeled after a similar program in the U.S. Congress. High school pages are provided with a stipend to cover food expenses and lodging for their week in St. Paul. The program includes mock committee debates designed to inspire students to think critically about the issues facing our state, individual meetings with state representatives, assisting members during legislative session, and the opportunity to meet with constitutional officers, members of the judiciary, lobbyists and members of the media.

Applications must be postmarked by December 15. Students selected for the program will spend a week in St. Paul between March and May, 2006 with students from across the state. Applications are available online,at http://www.house.leg.state.mn.us/edprog/introletter.asp or by calling the House Educational Programs Office at 651-296-1298. Rep. Sailer can be contacted at (800) 920-5867 or by e-mail at rep.brita.sailer@house.mn.

Student Wellness Committee in TRF looks at challenge

of soda, for example, contains 16 teaspoons of sugar and 250 calories.

Items of little or no nutritional value are of specific interest to nutritionists and this Committee.

Myrna Erickson, co-chair and director of food services in Thief River Falls, explained that public school food services operates under many legal requirements. One statute states that schools cannot sell foods of minimal nutritional value to children in the food service area during the lunch and breakfast periods. Unfortunately, the law is very specific about where it can be applied - in the food service area, which means vending machines can be located just outside the doors of the cafeteria. Erickson also pointed out that students are obtaining foods of minimal nutritional value from concession stands and school stores.

Additionally, eliminating vending machines from schools in Thief River Falls may not be possible. Several years ago, the District entered into a contract with Pepsi to provide Pepsi products in the schools.

Under this contract, the school received some gifts up front, including a $25,000 donation for a computer lab. It also receives some yearly gifts, including $2,000 for scholarships at Lincoln High School, and a commission on the number of cases of soda sold.

Harry Nelson, business manager for the District, said in an interview after the meeting, that the District receives three checks per year. In one year, the checks amounted to a little over $2,000 over the summer months, and the other two checks were a little over $5,000 each. That money is divided among the schools for use as they see fit. (The contract expires in 2008.)

Jean Larson, former school board representative and a citizen now serving on the local committee, said completely shutting down vending machines may not be the answer. Pepsi may have other, more healthful substitutes for candy and sodas, she said.

A goal of a subcommittee looking at vending machines will be to look at what those options might be, and what students would buy.

Several Committee members noted that input from youth will be very important to developing the wellness policy, and were pleased to see that two students, Sarah Michaels, and Barrett Holen, are serving on the Committee.

Nutrition is only part of the new wellness mandate. According to the new federal law, physical education is another essential component of any wellness policy. Therefore, physical activity will also be examined.

As discussion progressed on the topic last week, it became obvious that the Committee will have many more items to discuss in the months to come. In addition to examining the issues, the Committee must come up with a policy that is not less restrictive than USDA requirements, and its effectiveness must be measurable. In meeting this challenge, the Committee will be looking at what other communities and school districts have done, and what the research says.

Childhood obesity and health is a serious problem, and one which the Committee is determined to address.

"It's a much bigger problem than vending machines," said Barb Kalinoski, school board representative.

The next meeting of the Committee has been scheduled for 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 6. One item on the agenda will be the development of a survey that will look at students' vending machine product preferences.

Fuel costs

by Paul Oehlke
FBM, Fergus Falls

We are all painfully aware of the increase in fuel prices this past year. I have looked at data from the past five years of figures from Northwest Minnesota Farm Business Management (FBM) Program data:

In 2000, northwest Minnesota region farms enrolled in FBM Programs spent $395 for drying and $9,541 for fuel and oil. In 2004, they spent $989 for drying and $11,828 for fuel and oil (total $12,817). This is a 29-percent increase.

Northwest Minnesota corn farms spent $9.63 for drying and $16.46 for fuel and oil to total $26.09 per acre. This cost $31.4 cents per bushel based on the 2004 average yield of 83 bushel. Using the last five-year average yield of 104.6 bushels, this cost decreased to 24.9 cents per bushel.

Northwest Minnesota soybean farms spent $11.17 per acre for fuel and oil, which cost $64.8 cents per bushel based on the 2004 average yield of 17.2 bushel. With the last five-year average yield, it decreased to 37.2 cents per bushel.

Northwest Minnesota spring wheat farms spent $1.54 for drying and $9.66 for fuel and oil for a total of $11.20 per acre. With the 2004 yield of 46.6 bushels, it cost 24 cents per bushel and 23.8 cents based on the last five-year average yield.

There are many variables involved with fuel costs. Fuel may be purchased at year's end to manage income taxes. Fuel inventories vary yearly. Drying costs vary each crop year based on acres of each crop grown and moisture content. How much was spent at the elevator for moisture discounts or drying costs not included in your own records?

To reduce energy costs look at forward or seasonal buying opportunities. Consider reducing trips across the field and/or trips to town. Study Extension materials or your operator's manual to ballast your tractors correctly and maintain your equipment for optimum performance. Examine ways to make your crop drying methods more efficient. Soil test to make sure you are not applying excess nutrients. Select varieties with a lower harvest time moisture content. Finally, become a better marketer to recapture some of your increased energy costs.

For more information on this or other farm financial management issues, call 1-800-969-6282 and ask about the FBM program in your area.

First snow calls for patience

As Minnesota braces for snowfall this week, Public Safety officials are urging drivers to be patient and take their time as they re-acclimate their driving skills to the challenge of snow and ice on roads. Icy road conditions contributed to nearly 60 deaths and over 4,500 injuries in 2004.

"It's time for drivers to shift into 'winter' gear," said Kathy Swanson, director of the Office of Traffic Safety (OTS). "Motorists need to be accountable for their driving behavior to avoid tragedy - slow down and buckle up."

Swanson advises motorists to relearn how their vehicle responds on snow or ice by testing brakes to get a feel for the road. Swanson adds that patience and focus on driving are keys to safe winter driving - not only because of the inclement conditions, but also because of time pressures exerted by the holiday season. "If you or your passengers don't arrive safely, the reason for rushing no longer matters."

OTS recommends the following for safe winter driving:

- Always use seat belts.
- Give yourself plenty of travel time - don't put your schedule before safety.
- Clear snow and ice from all vehicle windows, hood, headlights, brake lights and directional signals.
- Adjust speed to road and weather conditions.
- Lower speeds help drivers avoid crashes and minimize those that occur.
- Keep a safe stopping distance between vehicles, and leave extra room between your vehicle and snowplows or other removal equipment.
- Avoid using cruise-control.
- Headlights must be turned on when it is snowing or sleeting.

Historically during the winter months in Minnesota, the number of vehicle crashes, especially property damage crashes, increase substantially.

still $2,000 short. As a result, part of the utility's depreciation will be used to cover that $2,000.

Operating costs will also increase in 2006, according to Rude. He noted it will cost $30,000 to pump sludge, utility costs have increased to about $10,000, the water towers have to be inspected at a cost of $6,000, and there are payroll increases.

The council approved a low quote from Thief River Ford in the amount of $19,249 for the purchase of an airport pickup truck subject to receipt of state funding. State funding would cover 70 percent of the cost, and the city would cover 30 percent. The city also solicited bids from Northern Motors and Westside Motors, but Northern Motors was the only other bidder.

The next council meeting is scheduled Nov. 21 at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

County discusses courtroom needs

court system is trying to reduce the travel of trial judges for security purposes and it will instead place the travel burden on counties transporting defendants to trial. Simply put, it is unlikely Pennington County would be assigned trials with its existing facilities after courts are consolidated.

When asked by commissioners what kind of time table the county would have to construct a new court facility, Olin said trials could be assigned regionally in as few as five years.

table. Nordhagen further backed up his opening bid by stating that the buildings had little value.

"To be realistic, unless you're going into the composting business, that building is useless," Nordhagen said. He said that he didn't expect his opening bid to be the winning bid, but he submitted it to get a place at the table. He added that the $332,000 appraisal value "is unrealistic."

Ray had similar comments for the board.

"I find that both Les's (Omega) and Arctic Cat followed the proper procedure for placing a bid," Ray said. "I'm not sure what the county is looking for in a proposal."

After further discussion, the board set Dec. 13 as the next bid opening for the facility. As before only sealed bids will be accepted. Bidders will bid on both parcels, but they will not have an opportunity to raise their bids.

Board approves TRF tax abatement proposal. The board previously approved the proposal at its June 28 meeting, on the condition that the Thief River Falls School District and City of Thief River Falls also approve the proposal. SD 564 never approved the proposal. According to Mike Moore, community development director, the school board feels approving the tax abatement proposal will send a mixed message to its tax payers if it asks for a levy referendum in upcoming years.

Under the tax abatement proposal, owners of property ready for occupancy (new homes) within two years of acquisition of the undeveloped property can have their taxes abated for three years. The abatement would start and be applied to taxes the first year, after the home is occupied and certified as such by the building official.

The board again approved the proposal pending city of Thief River Falls approval.

Engineer's items

- The board approved the hiring of permanent part-time employees Kurt Philipp and Jim Johnsrud.
- The board approved final payment of $3,367 for highway project CP 57-05-04 to Rude's Construction. The project's total cost was $12,747.
- The board approved two furnace purchases for Highway Department shops. County Engineer Mike Flaagan presented price quotes of $10,192 for the Goodridge shop and $3,664 for the Bray Township shop. Both approved quotes were received from Brodins Comfort Systems, Thief River Falls.
- The board approved the hire of Gerald Hermreck as motor grader operator, effective Dec. 1. Hermreck will replace the retiring Roger Kriel.

Nutrition Education Instructor Tammy Malwitz introduced to board. Malwitz will work through Minnesota Extension and serve both Pennington and Red Lake Counties. She will work with organizations in each county. Her position is funded through a USDA grant.

Jennifer Olson, NWRDC and Mike Hruby, Pennington County Sheriff present hazard mitigation plan. Each county will be required to have a hazard mitigation plan in place for presidential declared disasters. Counties without plans during declared disasters would receive a deduction in funding. Commissioners will review Olson's plan and they could take action at the Nov. 22 meeting.

Sheriff's items

- Board approves sheriff department overtime totalling 40 hours for the installation of a new computer system. Hruby said the substantial amount of overtime is necessary to input more than 5,000 codes into the department's database.
- Hruby reported that the department is now operating with digital communications. He said, with the new tower, hand held radios can be used through most of the county and mobile units can now cover the entire county.

The next meeting of the Pennington County Board of Commissioners will be Nov. 22 at 5 p.m.

IMPORTANT PROPERTY TAX HOMESTEAD NOTICE

You must contact your county assessor to file homestead application on or before December 15, 2005, if one of the following applies:

- You are a property owner or qualifying relative of a property owner and you have changed residences during the past year and are using the property for homestead purposes; or
- You are a property owner or a qualifying relative of the property owner and the use of the property has changed during the past year; or
- You are now using the property for homestead purposes, and the property was not receiving the homestead classification in the past.

A qualifying relative for homestead purposes depends on the type of property. For residential property, a qualifying relative can be a parent, stepparent, child, stepchild, grandparent, grandchild, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, or niece of the owner. This relationship may be by blood or marriage. For agricultural property, a qualifying relative can be a child, grandchild, or parent of the owner or a child or grandchild of the spouse of the owner.

Once you have been granted the homestead classification, no further applications are necessary unless they are specifically requested by the county assessor.

If you should sell, move, or for any reason no longer qualify for the homestead classification, you are required to notify the county assessor within 30 days of the change in homestead status. Failure to notify the county assessor within the 30-day period is punishable by recalculation of tax as non-homestead, in addition to a penalty equal to 100 percent of the homestead benefits.

Holiday Train plans TRF stop December 14

About 15 years ago, Gorka of the Twin Cities was looking for a holiday song to record for Windham Hill's "Winter's Solstice III" CD. Scanning sheet music for inspiration, Gorka came across the hymn "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day" by Longfellow. "Since I don't read music all that well, I started singing the words, making up a tune as I went along," he said.

Gorka is looking forward to his five-day Holiday Train tour across Minnesota and North Dakota, living with other professional musicians in vintage private rail cars on a 13-car freight train outlined in hundreds of thousands of holiday lights.

"I like to play for audiences that are not the usual kind," said Gorka. "It's fun to be new to an audience. That's what I'll be hoping to see - a lot of new people - people who may have heard my name but have no idea what I do."

Karen Ennis and her sisters, Ma[illegible] and Teresa, know [illegible] or two about making live [illegible] the [illegible] temperatures [illegible] unusual venues. Over [illegible] they entertained Canadian troops on a ship and in the desert in the Persian Gulf. They performed through two snowstorms on the 2003 Holiday Train in the Midwest and traveled from Montreal, Quebec, Canada, to Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, on the 2004 Canadian Holiday Train.

Last year, Karen Ennis played a penny whistle, and Teresa Ennis played the bodhran (pronounced BOH-rahn), an ancient Celtic drum made out of goatskin, in the Canadian Holiday Train shows, weather permitting. Maureen Ennis, who writes many of their songs, plays acoustic guitar.

Weather permitting, they'll use the old fashioned instruments on "Touch me if you Dare," which was written in the 1900s.

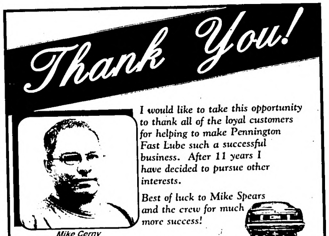
"Two men in a bar in Ireland were having an argument. One guy challenged another guy and said, 'Touch me if you dare,' sort of egging him on. There was a fight [illegible] and somebody there thought this would make a good [illegible]. Now I don't know how the [illegible] Karen Ennis [illegible] a laugh.

Brown has performed in every Holiday Train show since 2000. She produces the shows with her husband, music producer Randall Prescott. Their daughter, Kelly, will sing either "I Love Christmas" from the Holiday Train CD or "Merry Christmas Baby." Brown will sing "I'll be Home for Christmas" in an up-tempo swing beat. "I was thinking of all those who will be away from home for Christmas, and it's one of my favorites," she said.

After five years of performing outside in the winter on the Holiday Train, the cold doesn't faze the seasoned entertainer.

Brown credits her stamina to long underwear, living in Ontario, Canada, and the reception the entertainers receive at each stop.

"I know this sounds corny, but you look down at the crowd and you feel warm all over," said Brown. "It's not like other concerts where people are checking you out to see what you can do. They're thrilled to be there."



Thank You!

Albany holds off Thief River Falls comeback bid to win football playoff match-up...

Huskies edge Prowlers 14-8 in state quarterfinals

After his team won the Section 8AAA title with one-sided victories against East Grand Forks and Perham in the semifinals and finals, respectively, Thief River Falls coach Jeff Mumm liked the Prowlers' chances as they readied themselves for their first-ever appearance in the Minnesota state high school football playoffs. "We're playing so well right now," he said following a 48-6 drubbing of the Yellowjackets. "It's going to take a pretty good football team to beat us."

The Prowlers did run into a pretty good football team Friday at Albany. And they lost the Class AAA quarterfinal match-up, 14-8.

Mumm was right, though. It took one of the best teams in the state to beat the Prowlers. They put together another top-notch performance. However, they didn't play a perfect game. It was probably good enough to come out a winner against most teams, but not against an unbeaten squad that had out-scored 11 opponents by a combined 555-87.

"This was a state tournament game; a tremendous football game," offered Mumm after the Prowlers' season ended at 7-5. "We went blow-for-blow with one of the best teams in the state; nobody has been able to do that to them all year. But we had a couple of miscues. They probably did too, but they got by with it. Give Albany a lot of credit; they're a great football team."

Albany advanced to the state semifinals on the strength of two touchdown passes from quarterback Eric Harlander to tight end Josh Overman. The first one was a conventional 60-yard bomb in the opening minutes. The second was a short shovel toss resembling an option pitch that went for 38 yards and supplied the Huskies with a 14-0 fourth quarter cushion.

It took Albany just four plays and 1-minute, 35-seconds to put points on the Michael Field scoreboard as Harlander went deep over the middle to Overman for the game-opening touchdown. Overman had a step on the defensive back as he made an over-the-shoulder catch the receiver bobbled momentarily before he secured the ball and sprinted into the end zone. Harlander did double-duty by drilling the extra-point kick.

The play had the visiting Prowlers and their large contingent of fans reeling. And the Huskies came close to putting it away early when their next two possessions took them deep into Thief River Falls territory. But what might have been a 21-0 spread instead remained a one-touchdown difference as the Thief River Falls defense twice stopped Albany on downs - first at the Prowlers' 19, and then at the 9-yard line.

Albany was knocking at the door again in the final minute of the first half, but the Thief River Falls defense repeated its earlier efforts by getting the Huskies to give up the ball at the Prowlers' 18.

Thief River Falls also saw three scoring opportunities slip away. A second quarter Michael Forney-to-Alex Carlson pass would have been good for 32 yards and a first down at the Albany 9-yard line, but the play was called back due to a holding penalty. A smart-looking drive to open the second half carried the Prowlers to the Huskies' 13 before stalling out. Then, after forcing a three-and-out Albany punt, the visitors were right back at the Huskies' 6-yard line, only to lose a fumble on an inside counter play that was recovered by Josh Wolford at the 10.

The score didn't change until the Huskies, facing a third-and-nine, executed that short Harlander-to-

New coach makes TRF hockey debut

If the players can match the enthusiasm and work ethic displayed by first-year Thief River Falls girls head hockey coach Katie Anderson, the Prowlers will be on their way to rebounding from last year's struggles that resulted in a 2-17-1 record.

Anderson, a Bemidji State University graduate who served as an assistant coach in Duluth last winter, put her team on the ice Tuesday for their 2005-06 debut at East Grand Forks.

"I am truly excited to be in Thief River Falls," said Anderson. "Since being here, I have felt a lot of support from the school district, parents and community, and only see things going in a positive direction this year. The girls seem really enthusiastic, and I look forward to helping them grow both as hockey players and people."

Thief River Falls had trouble scoring goals in 2004-05, relying heavily on goalie Trudy Erickson to be competitive. With Erickson lost to graduation, the netminding duties fall to sophomores Brandi Hermanson and Jade Gothberg.

"Our goaltenders will need to gain some varsity experience," acknowledged Anderson. "The team will have some new systems to learn, and that could be a challenge. But they all seem to be adapting very well to a new coach and a new way of doing things."

If their efforts in practice have been an indicator, the Prowlers are eager to please their new coach. "Our strengths would have to be hard work," offered Anderson. "I think we have players with strengths both offensively and defensively."

Returning letter winners include Hermanson; senior forwards Val Meyers, Megan Snyder, Chasity Johnson and DD Rambeck; senior defenseman Kjelsy Loeffler; junior forwards Brooke Rundell, Brittni Johnson, Ashley Meunier, Kelly Thorstad and McKenzie Kayser; junior defensemen Kaley Holen and Janica Sorvig; along with sophomore defensemen Mauri Gonsorowski and Molly Peterson.

Others on the roster include sophomore Kimberly Duchscher; freshmen Alie Dorn, Megan Malwitz, Kendra Pederson, Brittney Schwab, Katie Aandal and Haleigh Stegman; plus eighth graders Carly Mattson, Maddy Aandal, Paige Bruggeman, Cait Sorvig, Abby Eyerly and Raina Pederson.

The numbers have allowed the Prowlers to put together their first junior varsity schedule this winter, a major step towards providing the Prowlers with a steady supply of talent at the varsity level, pointed out Anderson. "Overall, I think everyone is excited and is coming into the year with a positive attitude, including myself," she said.

Shoan Nelson and Craig Mattson are working as Anderson's assistant coaches this year.

Two Prowlers will swim at state meet

■ Allyson Helling, April Peterson advance from Section 8A

Allyson Helling and April Peterson will be Thief River Falls entries at the 2005 Minnesota Class A girls state swimming and diving championships, scheduled to be held Nov. 21-23 at the University of Minnesota Aquatics Center in Minneapolis.

Second place finishes at the Section 8A meet Friday and Saturday in Detroit Lakes extended the fall sports season for the two Prowlers. Helling will swim two state meet events after runner-up finishes in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle races. Peterson was second in the 100 backstroke.

Helling, who also anchored a pair of third place relay teams, was named co-recipient of Section 8A Swimmer of the Year honors, an award she shared with Brandi Werner of Park Rapids Area. Werner won the 50 freestyle and 100 backstroke, and also swim legs on first place 200 medley and 200 freestyle relay teams.

Thief River Falls was announced as the Section 8A swimming academic champion for the third straight year and the Prowlers' Lacy Knott was selected as Section 8A Coach of the Year for the second straight season.

Park Rapids Area won team honors with 368 points, followed by Detroit Lakes with 339, Thief River Falls 328, Warroad 252, Fosston/Bagley 229, Crookston 198, Perham 192 and Roseau 159.

Thief River Falls' chances of challenging for the title was once again hampered because the Prowlers are unable to incorporate diving into their program due to state regulations slapped against the Franklin Middle School pool, where they practice and host meets. The Panthers scored 40 points on the boards; the Lakers picked up nine points.

"The difference in the meet was diving," emphasized Knott.

Times turned in by the Prowlers met or exceeded the coaches' expectations. "The girls had a terrific meet, with nearly every swimmer swimming at least one personal best time, and many swimming personal best times in every event they swam," she reported.

The Prowlers were hoping to advance a relay team or two. But they missed that goal, even with season-best swims in all three races. "Despite disappointing third place finishes in each of the relays, the medley relay (Peterson, Casey Engelstad, Kailey Bakken, Helling) dropped three seconds, the 200 freestyle relay (Peterson, Ashley Meunier, Bakken, Helling) dropped

Jones, Sorteberg named top TRF runners

Evan Jones and Chelsea Sorteberg were named the most valuable runners on the 2005 Thief River Falls boys and girls high school cross country teams during the Prowlers' post-season banquet Thursday.

Most improved honors went to Trent Nelson and Chelsey Knutson, while hardest worker distinction went to Brendan Skime and Megan Bergland.

Recognized for team contribution were senior Tyler Holen; junior Blakely Two Teeth; sophomore Jake Toren; freshman Sara Sisler; eighth graders Travis Carlson, Mike Dyrdal; and sixth graders Emily Jones, Harley Alby, Paige Thune and Bergland.

"At the beginning, I put a slogan on the the team handbook that read: The New Era Begins," explained first-year Thief River Falls head coach Rick Karboviak. "And it has begun for Prowler cross country. One thing I looked for was steady progress. And I believe we achieved that. I was proud of all of our team this year. They fought, became better runners, better athletes and, as a result, better all-around people."

Karboviak said improvement wasn't limited to just the athletes. "I know they made me a better coach," he mentioned. "I used GPS technology to track their paces, speeds and distances, which allowed me to pick out the better routes we needed to do to get better each week. I've been able to converse with other coaches and trainers through the Internet, and have had international contacts on the usage of the GPS system in the training of athletes. My experience with coaching this team has been tremendous in that regard."

The cross country program draws a mix of student-athletes, according to Karboviak. "We are so diverse, which makes them better athletes in all the sports they play," he explained. "That toughness translates into being better runners."

Graduation will take five seniors from the line-up, but a young 2006 squad will still feature an experience group of runners, pointed out Karboviak.

Albany quarterback Josh Overman got off this pass before Thief River Falls defensive end Alex Carlson could get to the thrower in the first quarter of Friday's high school football playoff game. Overman threw for 141 yards and two touchdowns in the Huskies' 14-8 win.

Albany edges Thief River Falls

Overman toss into the middle that the receiver turned into what proved to be a game-winning 38-yard touchdown. Harlander's kick made it 14-0 with 8:48 remaining.

Thief River Falls answered, however, with a 13-play, 86-yard touchdown drive. The big-gainer came early on the march when Jon Drees got outside for a 40-yard run to the Albany 24. Michael Benedict went off right tackle from a yard out for the touchdown, and Drees took a dive play into the end zone on the conversion for a 14-8 game with 3:32 on the clock.

If that didn't get the Thief River Falls bench excited, then a successful on-side kick certainly did as Lucas Genereux recovered Tom Loe's bouncing squib boot at the Albany 48.

At that point, Mumm figured the Prowlers were destined to win. "All the planets were arranged in the right order," he said. "I thought we would pull it out."

However, the Prowlers still needed to make a play, and Albany didn't let that happen. A first down run lost a yard, a second down pass completion resulted in no gain and a long third down throw was intercepted by linebacker Matt Evans with 2:17 showing.

With the Prowlers out of timeouts, a 16-yard gain by Overman on a third-and-six pitch-out with two minutes remaining iced it.

Mumm certainly felt the sting of the loss, but he wasn't letting the defeat overshadow the Prowlers achievement. "I'm so proud of those kids," he said. "This was a great atmosphere. The facility, the weather and the great fan support is something we'll remember. The intensity in a game like this is unreal. You can't duplicate it in practice. You can only experience it in a game. Our kids handled themselves well. They played with a lot of class."

Prowlers make a good impression on Albany writer

The following letter was received by Irv Peterson, Superintendent of Schools for School District 564; Jim Sims, Director of Student Activities; and Jeff Mumm, the Prowlers' head football coach, then forwarded to The Times for publication:

Dear Jim, Irv and Jeff,

Just a note to commend you, your school, coaches, fans, band and players on a class operation.

On Friday, November 11, after a long trip and a spirited game, which was by the way, the toughest contest we've had by far, you all were unfailing in your graciousness both in person and in the press.

I had the opportunity to visit with a few of you before and after the game and to a person you offered good luck and no sour grapes. Just "best of lucks" and other positives.

I'm not sure who the gentleman was who approached my son and I on the field after the game, but what an example he was to us of how to deal with a tough loss and to still be big enough to offer his best.

I'm sure he was probably a Prowler parent.

I also had the opportunity to visit with your quarterback's dad after the game and while I'm sure he was emotionally torn up, as anyone would be at that time, he offered no excuses just congratulations. When we spoke about his son and his football career and how some in TRF wondered how the family could "let" him risk an injury in football that might affect his hockey career, he said, in reference to his son, "he played because he wanted to." As we looked down the field at the Prowlers gathered in the west end zone we talked about how they will never forget this night and how the underclassmen spoke to the seniors after their last game together.

At that moment in time, it was clear what participation with others in any worthwhile task means in the lives we live.

In closing, please feel free to share this mailing and best of luck to you all in all you do!

Sincerely,
Lowell Rushmeyer, Albany Huskies Booster Club President

NCTC men's basketball team starts season 1-1...

Northland splits first games

Weekend games against Wisconsin and Iowa foes during the Mesabi Range Classic at Virginia opened the 2005-06 Northland Community and Technical College men's basketball season.

The Pioneers beat University of Wisconsin-Barron County 92-80 Friday, but lost to North Iowa Area 81-60 Saturday in the four-team event.

Northland led UW-Barron 45-36 at halftime and maintained the spread through the second half.

"It was a typical first game," offered Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "We forced a lot of things. We're trying to go too fast on offense, and part of that is first-game jitters, I'm sure."

Ten Pioneers put their names in the scoring column, led by Jawaun Bowman and Cole Porter with 21 and 20 points, respectively. Bowman is a 6-3 sophomore from Richfield. Porter is a 6-5 freshman from Karlstad.

North Iowa Area posted a 41-31 Saturday halftime lead and built on that over the final 20 minutes.

Northland did not have a Day 2 double figure scorer. Nick Ricks (Thief River Falls), Bowman, Porter and Justin Mann (Bartonville, Ill.) all had nine points each.

"They're a scholarship school," mentioned Nikunen. "They have some good individuals who played well as a team. But it still should have been closer than what it was. We're still out of sync."

Northland will continue to cross state lines this week with games against North Dakota State College of Science Tuesday in Wahpeton and at Jamestown College Friday, where they'll face the Jimmies' junior varsity.

The Pioneers miss the steadying influence of players like Mike Howard and Jason Koch, who helped lead Northland to a first place tie in the Northern Division and a berth in the 2005 Minnesota Community College Conference state tournament, acknowledged Nikunen. However, he likes the chances of his newest edition. "Athletic-wise, we're a better team than we were last year," he said. "Potentially, it's as good a team as I've had here."

There is still a long ways to go, though, before the Pioneers will realize that potential, warned Nikunen. "We have four sophomores, but we're still a pretty young team," he pointed out. "Every season, it's a new work in progress. Where we are right now is not where we're going to be at the end of the season."

Pioneers lose opener 78-52

Providence beat Northland at its own game Friday as the Otterburne, Man., school used a fast break offense to defeat the visiting Pioneers 78-52 in women's college basketball.

It was the 2005-06 season opener for the Pioneers, who trailed 35-21 at halftime.

"We played very poor defense against their transition game," explained Northland coach Missy Majerus, who favors the upbeat tempo herself. "They got the rebound and took off with the ball."

Northland made its debut without the services of Chelsey Fering, one of the Pioneers' four sophomores. The 5-8 guard from Red Lake Falls went down with an ankle injury during practice late in the week.

Without Fering, the Northland offense didn't function very well, acknowledged Majerus. "She does a lot for us," she said. "With her out of the line-up, we were out of sync."

Amy Demchuck led the Providence fast break with a 36-point game. The Northland attack featured Ashley Kujawa with 12 points, Tara Blazejewski 11, Lisa Brintnell 10 and Kacey Anderson 10.

Northland struggled with a 30 percent 19-for-63 shooting night, which included a 2-for-14 showing from 3-point range.

Providence shot 46 percent (30/65), with a 5-for-13 effort on three's.

"Offensively it's going to take some time," said Majerus, whose team faced a tough Tuesday assignment against North Dakota State College of Science in Wahpeton.

Scoring

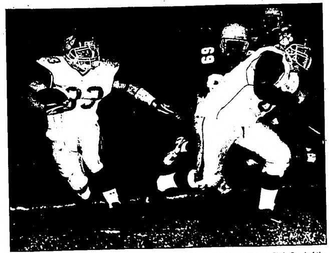
Providence - Amy Demchuck 36, Heather Bouy 23, Elizabeth Campbell 2, Dana Riccio 12, Jen Hostrup 9.



Looking for running room behind offensive guard Tony Dorn, Thief River Falls halfback Michael Benedict surveyed the field during the Prowlers' Class AAA state high school football playoff game at Albany Friday. Chris Sand of the Huskies (69) trailed the play. Unbeaten Albany won 14-8.

Last Friday, the seniors had a health program at the community center in Karlstad. There were 16 booths and each advertiser gave things away.

Judy Kleinvachter only took her friend Juno to the Scandia Cafe last week beside her usual Tuesday potato dumpling trip to Strandquist. This week, she is meeting her out-of-town hunting friends there. Buddy Berggren of Tower, Minn. and his son Anthony of Warroad; Ivadell Douglas of Park Rapids and Bobby Berggren and son Nels are all expecting to be there early. Hunters like to take a dumpling in their pocket for a snack. Some of her usual visitors will also be there.

Kristopher and Kenrick Anderson spent last week in New Ulm at the home of David and their sister Jenny Jansson doing a little carpentry work for them. Friday they arrived at Paul and Shirley Anderson's home to do some hunting together with Julia Rose from the Cities. Basil Bernard from Chatfield visited the Andersons, and on Monday, he went to Grygla to visit Owen and Diane Hagen.

Saturday, Kim Bernard of East Grand Forks, Wayne Bernard and Kym Grove of Shelly, arrived at the Andersons for hunting. On Saturday evening, they all had supper at the Andersons along with Eva Bernard, Janet Grove and Julia Rose of White Bear Lake. Julia returned to the Cities on Sunday evening.

With all the extra work Shirley Anderson had to do, she took the time to cook the best chicken soup and brought it to me. I wish to have the recipe for it. I had the worst cough that I could remember in years. Thanks, Shirley!

Douglas Holmstrom and Mr. Witkey from Farmington came to Dean and JoAnne Holmstrom's for hunting season. They visited Elsie and were glad that Elsie had finished winterizing her residence. So are a lot of other people.

Congratulations Prowlers. We're proud of you

"We're really proud of you" was the message delivered to the Prowler football team during a school-wide assembly Thursday. Events as these are reserved for recognizing championship teams and efforts. Organizers were careful to note that the pride and support they have for the Prowler football team applies to other teams and efforts, too.

Mayor Dale Wennberg, perhaps a little concerned about how students and citizens might perceive the signing a proclamation of support for the football team, noted that the community has had many teams that have done well. To all these teams and individuals, he added, "Know that we are always behind you."

Superintendent Irv Peterson said we're part of a greater team - from players to parents, peers, merchants and fans. When it comes to supporting our students and teams, each and every one of us has a job to do.

As members of this greater team, we all share something in common - the desire for the community, its citizens and youth to succeed. As members of this team, it is our job to remember that what we say and do has a direct impact on our community and how it is perceived by people who live outside of our community.

Part of our job - and your job - is to support all students and teams. At this point and time, I don't think there's anything wrong with showing a little support and enthusiasm for the Prowler football team. They gave it 100 percent and left everything on the field. We're really proud of you.

School District Wellness Committee begins heavy lifting on issues

School District 564 is taking steps to respond to a federal law requiring school districts to implement a wellness policy. A new committee assigned the responsibility of coming up with that policy, met last week for the first time. They quickly learned that this will be a difficult task.

Vending machines were the first target, maybe because they make such good, unmovingly wide targets. But the problem is more than machines, it's education and responsibility. The contents of vending machines can be changed. Changing attitudes, expanding knowledge, and encouraging people to take responsibility for the choices they make, however, will take much more work.

Congratulations to School District 564 and all other districts for taking on this task. As Superintendent Irv Peterson, Thief River Falls, noted it shouldn't be done to satisfy people in Washington, D.C., or to simply fulfill a mandate. It should be done for the children and communities.

Spirit of local cooperation needs to continue in TRF

Completion of a project that began many years ago as an effort to consolidate operations and save taxpayers money will be celebrated next week in Thief River Falls. On Nov. 21, a ribbon-cutting event from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., will celebrate the completion of the joint operations facility just south of the intersection of Highways 1 and 59 west of Thief River Falls.

The building houses employees of the Minnesota Department of Transportation, Department of Public Safety, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, and the Pennington County Highway Department, all in one facility. We hope the investment in this building, and effort expended in trying to promote cooperation among state and county departments, will result in greater savings and efficiency. We also hope this spirit of cooperation will continue for many years to come.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Remember to observe American Education Week

To the Editor:

November 13 through 19 marks the 84th annual observance of American Education Week. The theme of this year's celebration, "A Strong America Starts with Great Public Schools," highlights the importance of bringing together educators, parents, students and communities in a unified effort to build great public schools.

Minnesota's educators teach our children the basic skills, but they do so much more. They nurture and inspire children despite obstacles. They help students learn essential skills not always measured in testing, such as critical thinking, conflict resolution, respect, hard work, cooperation and problem solving. And the results show. Whether the measure is in graduation rates, test scores or teacher quality, Minnesota is a national and worldwide education leader.

But educators can't do it alone. As the old saying goes, it truly does take a village to raise a child. We must work together as a community to provide the best education possible for our students.

Parents, I invite you to visit your child's classroom and learn for yourself how you and your child's educators can work together. Take a moment to give a kind word of thanks to the teachers, counselors, classroom aides, custodians and all of the people who work so hard to educate your child.

If you do not have children, please consider visiting your nearest public school to see today's educators in action. Ask how you can contribute to a child's success. We will be happy to advise. And as always, we're glad to hear from you about how you think Minnesota can continue to provide Minnesota's students with a world-class education.

Judy Schaubach
President
Education Minnesota

Recycling in TRF is important and necessary

To the Editor:

As one of a group of Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) students participating in recycling projects, I would just like to highlight some recent activity that should be of interest to all of us.

First, it is important to emphasize that although recycling is important in any circumstance, it is especially so in today's economy. With the price of oil and, therefore everything else, climbing at an alarming rate, conserving resources is especially important. Those items that are constructed of plastic, aluminum and glass are especially impacted by the sharp rise in energy costs. As a result, it is very important that every household step up its efforts to conserve and recycle these items.

We applaud the Thief River Falls City Council for the steps it has taken to make it easier for all of us to improve our recycling habits. The council has discussed the purchase of dumpsters for the recycling of plastic, aluminum, glass and cardboard, which will be conveniently placed at Hugo's and SuperOne alongside the Dumpsters already available for newspapers and magazines. Besides the longer-term environmental impacts, this will have a more direct, tangible affect on our city economy. More recycling means less garbage. Less garbage means less cost to collect garbage. Less cost equals money saved by the city and citizens of the community.

We appreciate this investment in our future, and say "thank you" to the council for the steps taken to date.

Until these Dumpsters are in place, please continue to separate your recyclable materials and bring them to the Alpha Recycling Center at the edge of town on Highway 32 South.

Those of us whose futures will be greatly influenced by the resource and energy situation in the world tomorrow, appreciate the efforts of everyone in doing what can be done to safeguard that future. Recycling is an important and necessary part of those efforts.

Thanks for all your help,
Karl Anderson
NCTC student

Thief River Falls needs to start recycling

To the Editor:

I would like to share with your readers information about recycling in the city of Thief River Falls, and inform them about some recycling facts that could change the minds of those who oppose it.

Recycling, as many people know, saves energy and resources, as well as decreases pollution. There are many techniques for the outcomes of recycling, including reprocessing paper, using recycled glass to make fiberglass or "glasphalt" for uses in highway construction, remelting plastic and many other products.

I recently attended a Thief River Falls City Council meeting at which Kathy Huschle, the Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) environmental problems professor, conducted a very interesting presentation. In it, she explained what service-learning students at NCTC have been doing to enhance recycling in the city. These individuals conducted an experiment in which seven bags of garbage were sorted out by hand for recycling. In the end, they found that 40 percent of this small sample was in fact recyclable. Their main priority in conducting this experiment, as well as research, was to talk the City Council into placing recycling bins near two grocery stores - SuperOne Foods and Hugo's. At the end of the presentation, there was very little discussion, but the City Council brought up the point that it was not within its power to do so. It said it would pass the request on to the county level.

I'd just like to point out that if people in the community recycled, we could save millions of dollars in the community. By enhancing the importance of recycling, the city would be less cluttered and would save more money, as well as preserve our resources. What have we got to lose? Recycling is one jump toward a sustainable future, and it isn't that hard to sort through your own garbage at home. Sure, it may take more time sorting through your trash, but in the long run it may be the most important choice that you can make for the earth.

Sincerely,
Marie A. Dahlen
NCTC student

Hunters provide a service

by Rep. Brita Saller

The 2005 deer hunting season is, for the most part, now history. I read with interest the local newspapers where I saw many photos of the successful deer hunters in our area. There were some pretty impressive bucks out there.

Deer hunting season is a major event in our part of the state. It's a time of year when family members from out of town come back for weekends hunting favorite spots with parents, brothers and sisters, cousins and friends. Meetings and even some school events are carefully scheduled around it. Local organizations raise money by holding hunter's breakfasts and suppers. Craft fairs and bazaars abound.

State officials report that about 450,000 hunters participated in this year's firearm deer opener, and they will likely bag at least 200,000 deer this season. That's good news for residents of northern Minnesota, whether or not you're a hunter.

It's no secret that the herd size in our area has gotten out of control. Mild winters have played a big part. While a natural deer population density in a forested area might be around five to 10 deer per square mile, in the Park Rapids area, for instance, there are an estimated 43 deer per square mile. Deer hunting is our primary tool to keep the population in check.

Managing the deer population makes our rural highways safer. The Department of Public Safety reports that eight people in Minnesota died last year as a result of deer-vehicle collisions. There were 4,900 such crashes in 2004, resulting in $4 million in property damage. The most serious injuries occurred when people swerved to avoid hitting the deer. Fewer deer will mean safer roads, making us all better off (unless you're in the auto body repair business).

Many of us think of whitetails as a symbol of nature at its best. But the truth is, an overpopulated deer herd wreaks havoc on forests and agriculture. The northern deer herd is threatening several species of native plants and trees, especially white pine and white cedar saplings, wild lily-of-the-valley and wild orchids. Deer also help spread Lyme disease since whitetails are the major host of the deer ticks that carry the dangerous disease. Furthermore, as with any population, when there are too many of a certain species, they are not only hard on their habitat, but they fall subject to disease themselves.

Of course, a large deer population isn't all bad. The large northern herd size brings hunters to our area during deer season, contributing to the tourism and retail economies in our area. In 2001, deer hunting generated $236 million in annual retail sales in Minnesota.

For a lot of families, hunting helps them put meat on the table throughout the year. Some generous hunters have even begun donating venison to local families in need. Hunters in the Bemidji area can donate a deer, at no cost to them, through a community program sponsored by Department of Natural Resources volunteers and local food shelf. Bemidji Locker & Fish Co., located at 3001 Bemidji Ave., will process the deer and meat will be donated to the Bemidji Food Shelf. For more information, contact Coordinator Foster A. Hudson, at fhud@paulbunyan.net or foster.hudson@dnr.state.mn.us, or the processor at (218) 444-3244.

Eventually, we'll strike a balance with the deer population in Minnesota. Until then, I appreciate the service hunters provide to all of us.

Protect homeowners from abuse of government power

The Institute for Justice

The U.S. House of Representatives has overwhelmingly passed H.R. 4128, the Private Property Protection Act of 2005. The bill, sponsored by representatives from across the political and ideological spectrum, including Reps. F. James Sensenbrenner (R-WI), Henry Bonilla (R-TX), John Conyers, Jr. (D-MI) and Maxine Waters (D-CA), is a historic and important response to the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Kelo v. City of New London, which gave governments the green light to transfer property from one individual to another - on the mere promise of increased tax revenue. The bill denies, for two fiscal years, economic development funds to state and local governments that use eminent domain for private commercial development. It also directly prohibits the federal government from using eminent domain for private development.

"The House, including large numbers of members from both sides of the aisle, should be applauded for passing this bill, which will help protect American home and small business owners from the abuse of eminent domain," said Dana Berliner, senior attorney at the Institute for Justice, which represented the Kelo homeowners before the U.S. Supreme Court. "The legislation strikes the perfect balance. It serves to reassure every American that federal dollars - their own money - won't be used to kick them off their land, while allowing state and local governments to use federal dollars for actual public uses, like roads and military bases."

"Citizens around the country are in almost universal agreement that the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Kelo was wrong," said senior attorney Scott Bullock, who argued the Kelo case for the Institute. "The Private Property Rights Protection Act recognizes this outrage and goes a long way toward making things right! Government shouldn't fund the destruction of the American Dream, and this bill will make sure taxpayers aren't paying to evict their neighbors from their homes and small businesses."

"The Private Property Rights Protection Act highlights the fact that this nation's eminent domain and urban renewal laws need serious and substantial changes," said Chip Mellor, the Institute's president and general counsel. "It is up to the Senate now to do exactly what the U.S. Supreme Court refused to do: Protect homeowners from this abuse of government power."

Spent Money
Red Lake Falls Man Buys Out an East Grand Forks Saloon

"Angus Wood, proprietor of the Golden Slipper saloon at East Grand Forks, has been discharged at a preliminary hearing held in Judge Sullivan's court, the defendant being accused of embezzling $75 that belonged to Joe Carpenter of Red Lake Falls.

"Carpenter arrived in East Grand Forks Friday for a visit with his cousin. He had $86 earned while threshing in North Dakota. Saturday he decided to see the city and was introduced to Angus Wood. He gave Wood $75 to keep for him and started to celebrate. Twenty-four hours later he had no money and demanded the return of the $75. He claims that Wood did not give him any of it back.

"Wood testified that Carpenter left $75 with him for safekeeping and in a few hours following spent all of the money except $53.75. When Carpenter demanded this sum, it was returned to him, Wood claimed. Several witnesses testified that Carpenter spent his money like a billionaire, buying beer by the dozen bottles for a crowd of admirers, attracted by the alluring prospect of a free jag. Carpenter forgot about 'the cold gray dawn of the morning after', according to the witnesses and complained that the pace was not swift enough. He visited other saloons besides that of Wood."

The Rushford
That is the Name Now Given to the Coleman House

"Krouse & Christenson on Monday took possession of the Coleman House and will conduct this hotel in the future. They have decided to name the place the Rushford and as such it will be known in the future. The new proprietors are in a position to make a success of the place, as they have had considerable experience in hotel work. Mr. Krouse has for years been engaged in this line of work and will have charge of the office. Mr. Christenson is an experienced chef and will have charge of the kitchen."

December Fourth
Masons Will Remove to Their New Hall and Celebrate the Event

"The Masons will remove to their new building on Monday, December 4 and, on that evening, will give a banquet, concert and dance. It will be an invitation affair and a number of outsiders will be invited to join the Masons upon this occasion. The Dode Fisk Concert and Dance Orchestra, one of the finest musical organizations in the Northwest, will furnish the music for the dance. The committee of Masons having the affair in charge state that it will be a successful one."

After Big Game - A Large Number Are Out Hunting These Days

"The season for hunting deer and moose opened last Friday and a large number are in the country east of here hunting the big game. It is said by farmers out that way that a large number of shots have been fired and stray bullets are whizzing through the air most of the time, and it will be fortunate if no one is killed. Quite a number of deer have been killed, and a few farmers report the loss of cows that have been taken for deer. Casper Weiner killed a moose a few miles southeast of town."

Repairing Sawmill
A Crew Commenced Work Last Week and Will Be Busy All Winter, A Large Amount of New Machinery Will Be Installed

"A crew of men commenced work last week of making repairs to the Thief River Falls Lumber company's sawmill in this city and they will be kept at work most of the time until the big mill is ready to start cutting next spring. The repairs this winter will be much more extensive than ever before, and next spring the mill will be in much finer condition than it has ever been before.

"Four large new boilers will be installed in the engine house, a new log chain will be put on the log slip, two new carriages will be installed and new conveyors for the burners will be made. All of the machinery in the mill will be overhauled and placed in a thoroughly modern condition.

"Heretofore it has not been the custom to commence repairs to the mill until after the first of January, but owing to the number of improvements to be made this year, the work had to be commenced much earlier."

Weiner Indicted

"The grand jury returned an indictment against Casper Weiner the first of the week for having a moose head illegally in his possession. Mr. Weiner's trial will come off next week and his friends feel confident that at that time he will be able to prove that he is innocent of violating the game laws."

Test of the Water Plant
Will Be Made This Week and the Tank is Being Filled
System is All Completed Except Laying Mains Across River

"The work of filling the standpipe with water was commenced yesterday and the test of the water works system for the west side of the river will be made this week. The water works system is now all completed, according to Contractor Patterson, except for the laying of the pipe across the bottom of the Red Lake river which is to furnish the supply of water for the East side. Of course a test may develop the fact that there are a number of defective joints and pipes, and it will take some time to repair these, as they will have to dig down and make the repairs. It is now assured, however, that there will be water in the mains this winter and people who have been figuring upon this will not be disappointed. The supply will be taken from the river."

"The passenger train will arrive one hour and ten minutes later, commencing next Monday.

"Charley Fellman was out hunting the other day looking for big game and he found it, a big moose. The moose was only a few rods away and Charley had a gun which he must have taken for a dice box. Anyway the moose got away and Charley has been busy ever since telling that it was not the buck fever that bothered him.

"The 'lutefisk' supper at the Norwegian Synod church last Thursday evening was very well attended and the ladies got a nice sum for the church fund, the receipts being $4[illegible].45

"The boys down at the sawmill have con[illegible]ced to think that they are on a winter's job as there are no signs of quitting. The logs are now coming into the mill in fine condition, free from ice, and a large amount of lumber is being manufactured. The demand for lumber still continues to be good and the management will keep the mill at work as long as the weather will permit. The latest the mill has ever run was last fall, November 21, and it looks now as if this record would be broken."

FROM THE PAGES OF THE TIMES

O. E. Taxeraas, 28 Years In Business In TRF, Sells Firm

"O. E. Taxeraas, proprietor of the Taxeraas Implement company since 1927, this week announced the sale of the business, effective November 14, to Mark Langley of this city and Clem King of Grafton, who will operate it in the future under the name of the Langley-King company.

"Both the new owners are former blockmen with the Allis Chalmers company whose line of farm machinery they will continue to distribute here, along with Packard and Studebaker automobiles.

"Mr. Taxeraas, whose son Carl has been associated with him in the business, stated that he plans to go into semi-retirement. He expresses appreciation for the patronage given the firm during the past 28 years."

From The Editorial Page...

"With lower hog prices have come a surge of appeals for eating of more pork. And people have been eating more pork, maybe not for the purpose of bolstering the hog market, but rather to take advantage of a food bargain. We are pretty well fed up with these appeals to eat more of this or more of that in order to protect a market and we can speak with authority for many who already are eating too much. In self defense we favor fewer food bargains.

"A big-city daily last week headlined the statement that 'Beef Prices Slump as BUY PORK Campaign Gains Speed.' This headline tells the whole story. Housewives who were buying more pork were not buying more meat and their increased purchases of pork meant reduced purchases of beef and lamb and turkeys and chickens.

"For as many years as we can remember, and older old-timers tell us it was true longer ago than that, hog prices have been high when demand exceeded the supply and low when the supply exceeded the demand. The hog growers' marketing problem is substantially the same today as it was fifty years ago.

"Over a period of many years the farmers who have been raising hogs year-in and year-out seem to have done fairly well for themselves. At any rate the hog country of southern Minnesota and Iowa is generally regarded as a wealthy farm area. One bad year is surely not going to ruin them.

"Please pass the turkey."

Lincoln Carnival Highly Successful

"The unusual spectacle of an overflow crowd in the Lincoln high school auditorium greeted the program performers initiating the high school carnival Saturday evening, November 12.

"Following the program, which included a comic fashion parade by the faculty, the carnival opened in the gymnasium with nearly 20 games or concessions operating. Lunch was also served in the Home Economics rooms. The carnival was sponsored by and for the school yearbook staff, assisted by other benefitting school organizations.

"Janice Helgenset and Jimmy Hall were crowned queen and king, respectively, to reign over the carnival. They were the candidates of the Junior class, which raised the most money in a fundraising campaign. Each of the six grades sponsored a preliminary king and queen contest.

"The yearbook staff and carnival committees indicated satisfaction over the first school carnival held here in many years. They also expressed appreciation to all who worked and contributed, especially to parents who donated food to make the carnival lunch program a success."

Nine Inches Snow Comes This Week; Mercury Hits -5

"What looks like the beginning of a hard winter developed this week when nine inches of snow arrived locally up to this morning, according to the KTRF gauge, with snow still falling. It will give snowplows their first workout of the current winter. The first subzero weather also was recorded this week when the mercury dropped to -1 Sunday morning and -5 Tuesday."

Birthday Party

"Mrs. Otto Parbst was hostess at a party at her home Monday afternoon in compliment to her son, John, who celebrated his seventh birthday anniversary. The afternoon was spent playing games and a two course luncheon was served by the hostess. The guest list included Esther and Dagne Tungseth, Norma, Grace and Harriet Haugen, Frederick Orwoll, Dennis Urdahl, Vernon Ostrom, Raymond Parbst, Shirley Anderson, Helen and Vance Newberry, and John and Marion Parbst. In the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Parbst entertained a group of relatives at a party in their home, in honor of their son."

Dancing Party

"Bernus McClelland, Harold England and Robert White entertained a group of friends at a dancing party at the Legion hall Monday evening. A patriotic motif was carried out in the decorations and dance music was furnished by Mrs. Edna Anderson at the piano and a group of boys playing various instruments. At a late hour, a luncheon was served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. H. McClelland, Mrs. H. R. England, and Mrs. D. F. White.

"The invited guests included Evelyn Nelson, Rose Sheedy, Peggy Anderson, Ruth Bessler, Sheila Angell, Lucile Larson, Ruth Cronkhite, Carmen and Ruth Moline, Elinor Bottelson, Dellys Ericson, Lucille Bowers, Rhodella Angell, Ethel Richards, George Lambert, Arthur Angell, Arnold Rustad, Richard Nelson, Francis Stitt, Alois Lenertz, Frank and John Kiewel, Elmer Hellquist, Harold Johnson, John Munt, and Burns Mathewson. Out of town guests were Marie, May, Betty and Madonna DuPont, Bunny Emard, Vern Kiefenheim, George and Lawrence Fournier, Rex Brunell, Sy Helm and Lawrence Bessett, all of Red Lake Falls."

High School Progress
Chommie Speaks About Great War at Bonfire Fete
Squad Members and Coach Give Snappy Talks Before Peppy Crowd

"Monday evening the student sand other townfolks gathered at the vacant lot on Duluth avenue and forgot their dignity and became thoroughly overcome by the mysterious property called pep.

"The High School Band and the Girls Drum Corps led a parade through the streets and finally to the site of the bonfire. Bob Korstad helped start the fire and soon the people were forced back by the unbearable heat.

"Bob called upon Coach Dooley to give his opinion of the game and the Prowlers' chance of victory. He thought our team was one of the best in the Northwest and only by luck had they ever been beaten. That the team would give its utmost and that they would win were, he said, certainties.

"Hoium spoke next and expressed his belief of the game's outcome which was of course victory for Lincoln.

"Attorney Chommie spoke in behalf of the American Legion and told of their experiences in a game far more serious but easily likened to football. The French line and the English backfield were gradually being driven back and suffering numerous injuries when the American army with minds set upon victory overcame the enemy. He believed that the Lincolnites, if they had such a condition of the mind upon entering the battle, also would come off the field victors. Kiewel, the star halfback, spoke words of encouragement to the rooters of the school and to the public in general. Bob Booren and 'Typsy' Anderson made good use of their training in public speaking. Because of the desire of the crowd, 'Preacher' Lundell, a junior who last year made his letter, and thus is in position for three years on the first string, was called upon the platform to say a few words.

"A large crowd was present and displayed their appreciation for the team that deserves all the appreciation it is possible to given by its cheer and general attitude.

"The school owes its thanks for its stage to Mr. Prichard who kindly gave the school the use of one of the Central Lumber company's trucks for the evening."

II. A. Approval of the MFIP CSSA Biennial Service Agreement as presented.

B. Approval for support of the Application of Need Determination submitted by the Habilitation and Training Center (HTC) requesting a transportation rate increase.

SECTION B

I. Approval of the Agency's Social Service Case Activity as presented.

II. Approval of payment of the Agency's bills as listed.

Faye Auchenpaugh then met with the Board and discussed the "Barn Again" exhibit. She said that the Pennington County Historical Society [illegible] to become one of the permanent sites of the "Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon" [illegible]

Pennington County Historical Society's bid to become one of the permanent sites of the "Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon" exhibit. Motion was unanimously carried.

County Auditor Ken Olson then mentioned that the ads for the sale of the solid waste facility have been placed in the local paper with bids due November 8th, 2005.

Mr. Olson then presented a Purchase of Service Agreement between Pennington County and Violence Intervention Project, Inc. effective July 1st, 2005 through June 30th, 2006. The total obligation on the part of Pennington County is $22,558 per fiscal year, which is to be paid from grant funds. Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve the Purchase of Service Agreement between Pennington County and Violence Intervention Project, Inc., effective July 1st, 2005 through June 30th, 2006. Motion was unanimously carried.

County Engineer Mike Flaagan then met with the Board and discussed the petition to clean C.D. #55. He tried to look up historical information on the ditch and found very few records. He did find, however, that it appears that the legal ditch runs from the Red Lake River south to a point 1000' of the northwest corner of Section 17, Hickory Township. The petition to clean the ditch will be corrected to reflect only the legal portion.

Mr. Flaagan then commented that McKeever is cleaning J.D. #25 and is in Section 4 of Bray Township. He should be finished in about two weeks.

Mike then said that Chief's Coulee has been cleaned, but there is still some water standing due to some pipes that need to be taken out or reset. The City has done some work there as well, but the County has done its part of the cleanup.

Mike then presented a Drug and Alcohol Testing Program Participation Agreement between the Minnesota Counties Insurance Trust (M.C.I.T.) and Pennington County. The agreement is effective October 1st, 2005 for a one-year term and will automatically renew each year. Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve Chairman Naplin signing the Drug and Alcohol Testing Program Participation Agreement between M.C.I.T. and Pennington County. Motion unanimously carried.

Auditor Olson then said he has received a petition from Dean Philipp to drain approximately 100 acres into J.D. #30. After discussion it was decided there will need to be a Joint Ditch meeting for J.D. #30 to review the petitions to be included in the drainage area, and a Joint Ditch meeting for J.D. #31 to review a petition to clean that ditch. The meeting for J.D. #30 will be at 1 p.m. on November 14th, 2005; and for J.D. #31 at 9 a.m. on November 18th, 2005. The County Auditor will contact Marshall and Red Lake Counties in regards to these dates.

Howard Person, of the Pennington County Extension Office, then met with the Board and said that the new scale for the solid waste facility is on its way. Bids are also being requested to put a building over the scale, but have not been received yet. Two quotes have also been received to run electricity from the west building, with one more being requested.

Howard then said that a fourth cattle herd in northern Minnesota has tested positive for bovine tuberculosis. It's possible the deer herd could become infected as well, so the DNR will be testing deer during the first weekend of deer hunting season at certain locations.

Commissioner Swanson left the Board meeting to attend the NWRDC meeting.

Mr. Person also commented that the thistle research is done for the year, but the alfalfa brown rot study is still underway.

Auditor Olson then said that Pennington County Welfare has discussed the VEBA health insurance plan and they are not interested in it. Oakland Park Nursing Home has a few people interested in the plan, but no great interest has been shown.

Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Jensen, to have Commissioner Jensen be the Vice Chairman during the months of November and December, 2005, conditional upon Commissioner Comstock's return to the Board meetings. Motion was unanimously carried.

Auditor Olson then discussed the M.C.C.C. tax package and gave an update on what other counties in Minnesota are planning on doing.

Motioned by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Carlson, to approve the minutes of October 11th, 2005 with one correction. Motion was unanimously carried.

Getting ready for Thanksgiving

There's no word yet on whether these Thanksgiving bibs are for babies or adults. These bibs were among the merchandise sold at Jeri Espeseth's booth at the 29th Annual Thief River Falls Holiday Craft Fair. The event was held Saturday at Ralph Engelstad Arena. More than 50 crafters had booths at the event, which 1,685 people attended.

Important issues for Northwest Private Industry Council

Economic development issues on top

Odds are against an increase in funding for workforce and economic development initiatives during the next legislative session. The session, which is expected to begin in March, is traditionally a bonding session. That didn't stop supporters of Northwest Private Industry Council from urging legislators to support legislation that would put more money back into the current workforce.

Northwest Private Industry Council (NWPIC), honored legislators at a special legislative session at the Swenson House in Thief River Falls Thursday, Nov. 17. Present at the event were four DFL representatives: Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, Sen. Rod Skoe, Rep. Bernie Lieder, and Rep. Kent Eken.

The NWPIC is a non-profit organization created in 1983 to administer job training activities under the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). It serves the residents of Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties.

Rodger Coauette, executive director, told legislators that they were concerned about training for people in this region. Funding, he said, has remained consistent, but the cost of business has not.

The NWPIC administers over $2.2 million in Federal and State job training funding. Approximately 55 percent, of which goes to client training.

NWPIC represents a bridge between business and government, often providing a conduit for resources that address the region's workforce development needs.

The NWPIC utilizes an active committee structure to carry out most of its work and has four committees that meet on an on-going basis. One of those committees is the Youth Council, which is respon*sible for dealing with issues relating* to youth.

Coauette and several individuals at the meeting urged legislators to continue support for funding for youth programs.

For businesses in this region to remain competitive, said one participant, youth must get skills in high school. They must receive marketable skills. He added that he believes the days of four-year college degrees may be nearing an end. In the future, students will be encouraged to continue a two year degree for generals followed by two years of technical training, followed possibly by another two years of education.

Odds that additional funding for workforce initiatives will be Thanksgiving revealed...

Kindergartners in TRF explain Thanksgiving

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Fifty seconds may be the time it takes someone to cook a turkey or it may be up to five minutes at 30 degrees – at least that's what some kindergartners say.

The Times interviewed Susie Olson's morning kindergarten class Monday at Challenger Elementary School to find out more about Thanksgiving. The students have been learning about Thanksgiving for about a week.

"Thanksgiving is when you eat turkeys," said Blaine Olson.

"Thanksgiving's Easter," said Cade LaCoe.

Thanksgiving is "a place where you eat food and play," said Mariah Iverson, who noted turkey isn't the only thing her family eats for the holiday. Lefse and pies are also on the table. "Don't forget pumpkin pie – that's my favorite pie," Mariah said.

When asked about Thanksgiving, Marley Nelson said, "Well, you invite company and eat turkey."

And that company may be family members. Thanksgiving is a time to spend with family, said Anna Robson.

"It's a holiday," said Alaina Monson, who noted she's thankful for the food she eats on Thanksgiving.

The kindergartners also knew the history of Thanksgiving, and Preston Kilen seemed to understand it. When asked to define the holiday, he said it's "food, costumes, Native Americans."

Preston's classmate Kaitlyn Bakken had the same idea about Thanksgiving. It's "a meal that you have for Native Americans and pilgrims," she said.

Kaitlyn and her classmates also knew that most people eat turkey on Thanksgiving. Yet, if someone followed the kindergartners' instructions about how to cook turkeys, the turkeys would be just a little frozen.

Turkeys should be cooked for 50 seconds at 30 degrees, noted Parker Lane.

The turkey should be put on a big plate and cooked for five minutes, said Hunter Barth, who noted that people get turkey at the store, bring it home and then put it into a stove.

Cade also said the turkey should be put in the oven for five minutes. He suggested an oven temperature of 40 degrees.

Greg Brosseau noted turkeys should be cooked for "a couple of minutes" at 20 degrees. "That's

S.D. 564 rejects city's proposal

Tax abatement not approved

by David Hill
Editor

Without further discussion, the Board of Education for School District 564 turned down a request by the City of Thief River Falls to participate in a tax abatement program. The program has been a topic of discussion at several School Board meetings.

The tax abatement program would abate taxes on homes built in specific areas of the city during a limited period of time. It would allow local developers an opportunity to participate in development opportunities they apparently feel they cannot participate in now because they cannot compete with nonprofit organizations.

The resolution approved Monday, Nov. 14, by the Board of Education stated that the School District elects not to participate with the City of Thief River Falls and Pennington County in the tax abatement program because it would result in an increase in the District's tax levy. It also stated that their opposition to this proposal does not diminish the importance the District places on economic development in the community.

Elaine Grovum, director of special education, presented the District's Continuous Improvement Monitoring Process: Self Review Report, to the Board of Education on Monday night.

Reports from the special education department are delivered regularly; however, growth in special education needs has prompted new concerns. This report was based on data from the 2003-2004 school year, and it is not expected to be required again until the 2009-2010 school year. It is a very detailed report that requires a great deal of information.

Of particular concern in the District, is the fact that 15 percent (346 students) of the total population (2299), were identified for special education services, which represents an increase from the 2002-03 school year. This is a one percent increase from the 2001-02 school year. During the 2000-01 school year, 18 percent (419 students) of the total population were identified as being in need of special education.

Monday, Grovum noted that compared to other Districts, and the state average, School District 564 has a larger percentage of students needing special education services. She added that the numbers appear to be heading downward, but so to is the general student population. She also stated that school staff is more cognitive of the requirements.

Thankful for a new facility

Joint operations facility in TRF opens with much fanfare Monday

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Lynn Eaton, district engineer for the Minnesota Department of Transportation didn't hesitate to say what he is thankful for this week during Monday's open house and ribbon cutting ceremony for the new Thief River Falls Joint Operations Facility.

"This is a good week to be talking about being grateful...I'm very grateful that group's had the foresight and thought broader than themselves in putting this thing together," Eaton told guests.

An open house and ribbon cutting ceremony were held on Monday, Nov. 21, to celebrate the completion of the Thief River Falls Joint Operations Facility. The newly completed facility will be home to Mn/DOT's Thief River Falls construction, maintenance and radio shop crews; the Minnesota Department of Public Safety's regional office of the state patrol, including the regional drivers and vehicle services division and Joint Transportation Operations Communication Center; the Pennington County Highway Department construction and maintenance staffs; and the Department of Natural Resources' northwest area divisions of wildlife, waters, trails and enforcement.

Ground was broken on the $6-million project in September 2004. Totalling 49,500 square feet, the building is actually an addition to the pre-existing 13,000-square-foot Pennington County Highway Department Office and shop, which was constructed in 1999.

Pennington County Board Chairman Charles Naplin began the ribbon cutting ceremony and open house by briefly describing the project's history. He said that Pennington County Highway Department, along with the Minnesota departments of transportation, natural resources and public safety, began planning the facility in 1997. One year later the Pennington County Highway Department finalized plans for constructing its shop that would later be incorporated into the Joint Operations Facility design. Construction was completed on the $1.4 million highway department shop in 1999.

Commissioners from the Minnesota departments of transportation, natural resources and public safety addressed the open house guests. Lt. Gov./Transportation Commissioner Carol Molnau told guests that the facility's completion represents that progress is made through partnerships. She thanked the various entities for

Family Traditions

Traditions are those things that you do over and over again. Sometimes a tradition is a carefully planned event that you do each year. Sometimes it is something that you just happened to do once, and now your children say "we always do it." How it starts is not as important as the fact that it exists and that children and parents recognize it as an important part of their family's identify.

Traditions enhance a family's togetherness. Here are some hints for strengthening yours:

- Build traditions around your family history. Keeping photo albums, adding pictures to them as the family grows and looking them over on special occasions can give children a sense of stability.
- Listen to your children. Because they know when things have "always been done that way," they may be more adept than their parents in identifying routines that can become family rituals.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about the last time you had the holiday or event. See what your children remember. Then build on those things, those ideas for traditions.

Artwork of LHS grad featured in MSUM exhibit

The work of a former Thief River Falls student, Jennifer Sorvig, will be displayed from Nov. 21 through Dec. 1 in a Minnesota State University Moorhead (MSUM) student art exhibit at the Roland Dille Center for the Arts gallery. It will feature the work of B.A. and B.S. students, including drawing, painting, graphic design; photography and sculpture.

Other students include Jesse Andersen and Jackie Kindseth, both Fargo, N.D., Garth Blomberg, Minot, N.D., Amanda Durhman, Jared Larson, Jennifer Lund, Moorhead, Jaci McCaskell, Dilworth, Andrea Morken, Cottonwood, Justin Rode, Bismarck, N.D., Brian Smith and Erin Smith Elznic, Grafton, N.D., Heather Stockman, Prior Lake, and Robert Wimmer.

Sorvig is a graphic design major who became interested in art around four years ago after taking an art class at North Dakota State University.

"The professor told me that I had talent and mentioned that I should look into graphic design, which brought me to MSUM," Sorvig said.

Her show includes several pieces from her portfolio that she has created over the years at MSUM. Sorvig is the daughter of Fran and Dave Sorvig of Thief River Falls.

The exhibit is in partial fulfillment of the students' undergraduate degrees. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday; and 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday.

An artists' reception will be held Tuesday, Nov. 28 from 4 to 6 p.m. The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public.

...Murphy's Law in my Kitchen

Much as I hate to admit it, I am not always a very good cook. People seem to think that I know everything about cooking because I write the recipes for the Watch. This is a misconception. Even my own family (who has seen the results of my failures numerous times) thinks I know all about cooking. They are wrong.

It seems my cooking problems have always come in bunches, and lately they have been coming more often. Now with the Thanksgiving feast looming, I am really worried about having trouble cooking on the big day. What if one of my periodic problem spells begins on Thanksgiving day?

It seems like one little mistake can start it all. I can go along for quite some time with everything coming out yummy; no matter how I measure (by pinches and plops) or substitute ingredients, everything comes out right. Everybody is happy and well fed. Then, suddenly, things will go bad. One thing turns out badly and I make something else, hoping that it will be better. The problems continue. I think they are my kitchen's version of Murphy's Law - everything that can go wrong does.

For instance, a pan of cookies I make in the afternoon burns. Then I put a batch of bread into the breadmaker, hoping to have fresh bread for supper. I brown up some lovely steak and pop it into the oven topped with tomatoes and onions, hoping for Swiss steak eventually. Potatoes are cleaned and set to bake in the oven.

A little nagging in the back of mind tells me that things may not go too well when the broccoli I pull out of the fridge has brown spots and must be tossed into the garbage. However, surging ahead, I cheerfully make alternate plans to open a can of vegetables instead - the old dump, heat and serve - easy and still nourishing and tasty. Instead of the fresh cookies I had hoped to have for dessert, I plan to make a pudding.

When I finish making the pudding, it has lumps and is slightly scorched. The cream I plan to whip for topping is outdated and does not whip. Meantime, the bread has risen and is busy baking itself despite the fact that it is only half way up the side of the pan.

Now I am beginning to worry about my cooking ability and hurry to check the Swiss steak - yes, brown lumps of dry, black steak in a blackened pan. Nonetheless, despite the burned entrée, the potatoes aren't done at all. They are hard as rocks and will need at least another hour of baking. And the bread machine is busy announcing that the solid brick of bread it has baked is finished. By the time I toss the brick of bread into the garbage and clean up the bread machine, the potatoes have baked thoroughly and then taken it upon themselves to explode all over the oven.

So you can see what I mean about Murphy's Law in my kitchen and know why I am afraid of it happening on a holiday like Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving is really the biggest food holiday of all. You know, all we do on Thanksgiving is give thanks in a proper manner and then socialize with friends and family while we dig in to a table groaning with goodies. The food is pretty important. What if it is a Murphy's Law day?

Yes, I think I'd better have a back-up plan for this Thanksgiving. I think it is time to parcel out some of the cooking responsibilities to daughters and daughter-in-law so that the whole kit and caboodle doesn't fall on my shoulders. If they bring part of the meal, at least we will be able to have some sort of Thanksgiving dinner, even if we are lacking a few things. It will be better than relying only on me and my Murphy's Law kitchen, right?

Who knows, maybe everything I cook will turn out fine this year and we will have a wonderful feast. So let's hope neither you nor I have Murphy's Law rampant in our kitchens this Thanksgiving, and that we all have a very happy Thanksgiving holiday. May your bread bake high and your turkey roast brown, glistening and tasty.

FMS fall "InSchool Retreats" focus on emotional intelligence

What do 48 Lincoln High School (LHS) student small group leaders, 40 area workshop presenters, 492 Franklin Middle School (FMS) sixth, seventh and eighth grade students, 80 or so FMS staff, a dozen adult volunteers, and one motivational facilitator for young people have in common? They have all experienced FMS' annual "InSchool Retreats," which focus on emotional intelligence.

Over the course of three days every October, each grade gets one day to explores the meanings of Being Well – Doing Well, which is the overriding theme for the retreats. During the course of their three years at FMS, students will have the opportunity to look at three sub-themes during these annual retreats. sixth graders deal with PeaceWorks. Seventh graders look at various areas of respect and responsibility. Eighth graders gain insights into relationships.

An InSchool Retreat day follows a format where a single grade is divided in half. One half of a grade participates in short workshops led by local youth professionals. The other half participates in presentations with a youth motivational facilitator. This year's facilitator was Craig Hillier from Winning Edge Seminars of Lakeville. He structured his presentations to follow the traditional themes. After lunch, the two different grade groups swapped places so that all of the students would benefit from the workshops as well as Hillier's work with them.

Local youth professionals invited to take part in the InSchool Retreats, were kept busy with seeing four groups of about 20 students each before lunch, and four more groups of similar sizes after lunch.

These local youth professionals who volunteered their time to one or more of the three days of InSchool Retreats were: for the eighth graders – John Hardy, a Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) student recruiter, who discussed "Teaching Tolerance"; The Illusion Theater Troupe from LHS, consisting of Kari Anderson, Jennifer Beito, Ben Willis, Josh Kappes, Dane Jenson, Deepta Holalkere, Sara Mills, Heather Haymond, Bridgette Pachel, Michelle Selensky, Cole Bylander, Josh Caperton, Ryan Josephson, Annie Odegard, Lauren Rogalla and Sarah Mattison. Their LHS staff advisers are Vicki Svedarsky and Rosaline Groven. Their presentation focused on bullying; Terry BlackLance, Thief River Falls School District minorities director, who discussed "Native Minorities and Diversity"; Sheila Michaels, a NCTC instructor and the Redeemer Lutheran Church youth director, focused on personal relationships; for the seventh graders – Michaels worked on respecting relationships; Roxanne Stordahl from PATH presented on depression/suicide; Jennifer Owen, Julie Osthundson, and Carolyn Rystad from Pathfinders in Thief River Falls focused on "Respect for Family"; Sandra Pederson from Northwest Medical Center dealt with "Smoking and Addiction Concerns"; for the sixth graders – Craig Mattson from the Thief River Falls Police Department did a presentation on conflict management; Jenni Eriksen-Lane from the Violence Intervention Project looked at anger management; Crookston High School True Players did scenarios and facilitated a discussion about bullying; and Matt Nevala, youth director of the Thief River Falls Evangelical Covenant Church, covered family problem solving.

There is a lot of research that makes the case that a student's academic success can be nurtured to only a certain level of accomplishment by curriculum, teaching methods and classroom activities. To have students move beyond that plateau of academic success, they must feel that they can "connect" with their school. LHS Counselors Svedarsky and Bill Stock, as well as FMS Counselor and Retreat Coordinator Bob Stenson continually remind their students to "engage the system." Being connected or engaged in their schools means that students have a sense of belonging, and feel close to people who they find associated with the school. This could be any adult staff person or any student. Students need to know that they matter and make a positive difference to the life of the school. The InSchool Retreats help this happen by increasing the awareness and fine-tuning the people skills of the middle school students.

This year's InSchool Retreats once again brought home the message of "being well and doing well" by emphasizing the importance of good mental health and respectful relationships with others.

"These three days of InSchool Retreating were made possible this year through a generous grant given by the Pennington Family Collaborative Board. Their assistance made it possible for Craig Hillier to come and share his expertise with our Franklin Middle School students," Stenson said. "Other expenses were covered by a Safe and Drug Free Schools grant administered by Bill Stock, Lincoln High School counselor. A huge thank you goes to those two granting sources. This would not be able to be done if it was not for their support."

Local students participate in Concordia concert

Two local students are participating in the 79th Annual Concordia College Christmas Concert, "O Come, All Ye Faithful."

Rebecca Bjorgaard, daughter of Bruce and Gail Bjorgaard of Newfolden, and John Mickelson, son of Thomas and Donna Mickelson of Thief River Falls, are in Cantabile and Concordia Choir, respectively. They are among the more than 400 musicians in five choirs, a full orchestra and handbell choir who make up this annual concert set against a hand-painted mural.

The Moorhead concerts will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 2; 3 and 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3; and 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4 in Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are $10. For information on tickets, parking information and handicapped access, call (218) 299-4515, an information-only phone line. Tickets can be ordered online at www.ConcordiaChristmas.com.

The Minneapolis performances will take place at 6:30 and 9 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 8 in Orchestra Hall. Tickets are $16, $20 and $24. Call 1-800-292-4141 or go online at www.minnesotaorchestra.org.

World renowned conductor/composer René Clausen, 20-year conductor of The Concordia Choir and artistic director of the Christmas concert, developed this year's theme. Liturgical artist David Hetland, in his 36th year with the concert, has once again designed an expansive mural. It serves as the backdrop during the concert. This year's mural is the most intricate and detailed yet, designed specifically to help communicate the message of "O Come, All Ye Faithful." Volunteers painted the mural using a paint-by-number system.

Aleta S. Ulring, 79

Decorah, Iowa - Aleta S. Ulring, 79, of Decorah, Iowa, and formerly of Goodridge, died Tuesday, November 15, 2005 at her home of Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma of the Central Nervous System.

Funeral Services were held on Saturday, November 19, at First Lutheran Church in Decorah, with Rev. Marion Pruitt Miller and Rev. Steven M. Jacobsen officiating. Interment was held at Phelps Cemetery in Decorah.

Visitation will be held one hour prior to the services on Saturday at the church.

Aleta South Ulring was born March 9, 1926 in Jamestown, Michigan, the only child of Harold and Clara Mae (Yntema) South and the only grand-child of Henry Yntema and Clara Boone.

Aleta grew up in the northern Minnesota town of Goodridge. Her father, Harold farmed wheat, oats, and flax, raised animals, planted trees with the Rural Conservation Corps, and worked as a carpenter, building houses and raising barns. Aleta would sing as she worked which her father Harold enjoyed, calling her his "song bird," except when she sang a slow song because then he thought she "worked too slow".

Aleta was baptized in 1926 and confirmed in 1939 at the First Lutheran Church of Goodridge. Aleta graduated from Goodridge High School in 1944. From there she went to Washington D.C. to work as a secretary for the war effort.

In the fall of 1946 she entered Augsburg College in Minneapolis. There she met Joseph Ulring of Rothsay, who also had entered Augsburg after service during the war as a naval pilot.

She said she first noticed Joseph because he would sing as he walked through campus, though when Joseph first noticed Aleta he winked at her which Aleta thought was pretty forward for a Christian college. Nevertheless Joseph succeeded in getting her attention. Pretty soon they were meeting on Friday nights for a "burger and a malt" and a movie.

On August 25 of 1946, Joseph and Aleta were married in Goodridge. In 1949 they moved to Decorah, Iowa. They had five children, Janet, April, Beth, James and Scott. Aleta sang and directed choirs at Decorah Lutheran Church, and loved to teach piano.

Aleta loved music, Schubert Club, gardening, canoeing, was a leader in SEARCH Bible Study, a frequent soloist and had a strong and lifelong faith. She never missed church and seldom did anyone one who visited her. Joe and Aleta loved to dance and were always a threat to spontaneously start dancing anywhere there was music and a dance floor.

The family left Decorah for LaCrosse, Wis. in 1972, and then moved to Sioux City, Iowa in 1976. Aleta and Joseph retired back in Decorah in 1999.

Aleta is survived by her five children, Janet Christianson (Jon) of Arden Hills, Bishop April Ulring Larson (Judd) of LaCrosse Wis., Beth Ulring (Chad Troy) of Stoughton Wis., James Ulring (Nancy) of Decorah Iowa and Scott Ulring (Ann) of Golden Valley; Aleta was the proud grandmother of thirteen grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren .

She was preceded in death by her parents and her husband Joseph.

Words on a page...

Can they possibly convey the essence of any human being?
Can words define who someone was?
Can they effectively describe any of us?
Of course they can only give us a glimpse at best and when you are trying to communicate with words the character of someone that was indeed seen as very special by all who know her, words seem so very, very lacking.
Agnes Drees, (maiden name Bugge), was a cheerful and strong-hearted soul who lifted everyone else's troubles to her shoulders and carried them along life's road as tho they were her very own.
There are people that will help out now and then, many good folks indeed, but Agnes decided at some point very early on in her life to be a faithfully reliable helper for others even as she then found it necessary to ignore any particular problems she, herself might have.
That was Agnes, too busy helping others and no time for herself.
She was the sort of person that no matter what your troubles, once in her presence, you'd feel the weight of your problems lift and that was because she took your troubles onto herself.
There are many, many sacrifices that Agnes made in time, money, effort and her own health to be of aid to others.
With words we blithely say so and so was a generous person, a kind giving person and we should say it, everyone needs positive feedback, a "thank you." "I appreciate what you did," is apt recognition when another does a good deed, but what do you say when someone devoted their entire life to the unselfish goal of not only doing everyone else's worrying, but consistently and ardently applied herself to solve their problems as well?
What do you say?
Only words...
God Bless you Agnes (Bugge) Drees, you were one of the best of us, and if God's got anyone "on the top floor"/ in heaven with problems they need sharing, you can roll your sleeves up again as we're sure He'll be happy to have you continue to apply your loving and selfless caring.
But since now it will be for those upstairs to appreciate your work, we may be left to find a way to get along without your devotion to helping us thru this life down here on earth.
Rather than simply repeat an oft heard refrain, instead, that your beautiful heart stays here with us, we will pray, that it's not just "Our loss, and heaven's gain."

To receive a flu vaccination, call Inter-County Nursing Service at 681-0876 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays. It will accept Medicare Part B, but will not bill insurance for the $20 flu vaccination. However, it will provide a receipt to those people whose insurance will cover a flu vaccination.

Thankful for a new facility

taking the risk to provide a better public service.

Gene Merriam, DNR commissioner, told guests it is a treat to be able to "attend events like this and celebrate success." Merriam said he became DNR commissioner in 2003 and one of the first projects he faced was "how to get the Thief River Falls DNR staff out of jail," referring to the confining space in which the department operated that once served as jail space. He thanked members of the other departments that will share the facility.

Mike Campion, Minnesota Department of Public Safety commissioner, said he first toured the facility last winter. Though it was far from completion, he knew it would be great.

"For all intents and purposes, it was just a bunch of cement blocks," Campion said. "Coming here six to eight months later, it's a remarkable facility."

Northwest Minnesota's political representation also played a key role in funding the facility. Sen. LeRoy Stumpf stated last year that the new building was a testament to perseverance.

"Four governors later we're doing the ribbon cutting...who are the legislators from these districts. They're pretty slow in planning," joked Stumpf, who previously stated at last year's ground breaking ceremony that planning money for the facility was granted during the last bonding session under Minnesota governor Rudolph George Perpich in 1990.

Like most of the department commissioners who addressed guests before him, Stumpf stated there has been a need for this facility.

"Anyone who was in the old transportation or DNR building realized there was a need for this," Stumpf said. "You're going to see that people will appreciate coming over here for multiple services."

Rep. Maxine Penas, like others, congratulated the government entities on working to plan and construct the facility.

"I congratulate everyone on working together – this is the way to do it," Penas said. "The mission now, is we the people that serve the people need to do so with honesty and sincerity, and anything less is intolerable."

Comments were also made by Wally Sparby, staff assistant for Collin Peterson, and Wes Gjovik, Mn/DOT northwest district engineer.

The Joint Operations Facility was completed in July and the various tenants began utilizing the new workspace in the following months.

Economic development issues on top

approved during the next legislation session are slim.

Sen. Rod Skoe said there is a chance, but this is a bonding year.

Rep. Bernie Lieder also added that the conflicts that dogged legislators last year are still there - "same players, same committee chairs," said Lieder, who added, "thank God for the Senate."

Rep. Kent Eken said he shared the same pessimism about getting anything done. There have been no significant changes, he said. But he added they will probably be able to protect what they have. Eken added that he didn't think there will be any significant changes regarding social issues until the next election. Then maybe the legislature will be able to move forward.

After a question about coalition building, legislators discussed the growing differences between rural and urban areas. Skoe noted that he has been able to work with some legislators from urban areas and they have been supportive of rural issues.

Sometimes they work together. Saving sparsity aid, said Stumpf, was an example of rural and urban legislators working together.

Legislators said the problem is also one of parties. In the House, the split is 66 to 68, and because it is so close, party leaders have really had them toe the party line.

Eken noted, however, that suburbs are the fastest growing areas in the state. In fact, he estimated, legislators from these areas out-number legislators from urban cities and rural areas combined. He also added that it's not just parties, but who's funding elections. He said the state needs to look at how campaigns are financed.

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf didn't dwell on the conflicts. He offered a glimmer of hope by mentioning that the November economic forecast may be positive. But, what happened in the previous budget year, he said, may have an impact on future budgets. He explained that when the state was attempting to balance its budget, it did so by borrowing money from school districts. In return, legislators wrote into law a provision that requires that the money be paid back to schools.

Prior to the panel discussion, legislators expressed some of their thoughts on the direction the state is taking in regards to youth, education and jobs.

Eken thanked NWPIC for the plaque, but stated that legislators could not do it without their support. "It's really a partnership," he said.

Eken addressed some of his frustrations with the disconnect between urban and rural areas. But, he said, the state cannot have a prosperous urban area without looking out for rural Minnesota. "Rural Minnesota is integral to the prosperity of all," he said.

Lieder said education is the basis of everything. While jobs are important, youth need skills provided by education to get those jobs. But Lieder also sees the larger picture as one in which all things have to come together - jobs, good pay, housing and transportation. To leaders in the group, he said if each of them went their own way, nothing would get done.

Skoe encouraged leaders in the group to not lose their focus on job creation and retention. "If we lose our focus our state will lose," he said.

Stumpf also focused on the whole picture. Education and quality communities, he said, are multi-faceted and complex issues. As in education, he explained, no one thing will answer everyone's needs. "We need to re-ignite that spirit of wholeness," he said.

Stumpf and the legislators thanked the NWPIC staff and business community, but as Skoe noted in his speech, "we only reflect what you do. We're your representatives in St. Paul."

Susie Olson's morning kindergarten class at Challenger Elementary School was interviewed Monday about Thanksgiving. The kids have been learning about the holiday for about a week. The girls made pilgrim hats and the boys made American Indian headdresses after they listened to a story about Thanksgiving. The kindergartners also read "Hello, Mr. Turkey," which is on the board in the background to a Times reporter.

Kindergartners in TRF explain Thanksgiving

what my mommy always does," he said.

At least one kindergartner suggests following the instructions on the turkey. Kylea Praska encouraged people to make it as hot as it's supposed to be.

And people need to make sure their turkeys aren't green – at least according to Preston. He noted his grandma cooks the turkey for his family. "She doesn't make it green," said Preston. "She keeps it brown."

Besides turkey, the kindergartners mentioned the other food their families eat on the holiday. Preston said he eats macaroni and cheese or chicken at his grandma's house on Thanksgiving. "You eat green beans, too," he added.

Dane Dahlin mentioned potatoes as something else people eat at Thanksgiving.

The meal may also include berries or corn on the cob, noted Jenna VanHoltum, who said she's thankful for food.

"We have a big feast," said Kylea, who noted that feast includes turkey, salad and "all kinds of food."

Thanksgiving isn't just about the food even though many of them said they were thankful for food or, as Hunter said, "I'm thankful for turkeys."

The kindergartners had a wide array of responses when they were asked what they were thankful for.

"I'm thankful for my Mason – my brother, Mason," said Mariah, who then proceeded to correctly spell her brother's name.

Her classmate Cameron White was one of a few kindergartners who were thankful for their dogs.

Blaine was thankful for God, and Dane was thankful for the outside.

Greg said, "I'm thankful for my mommy, daddy, cousins and brother."

The kindergartners may have different views when it comes to who or what they're thankful for, but Kayla Kuznia summed up many people's feelings about Thanksgiving. She said it's "a great day because I like it."

Johnstons' dairy herd tops DHIA list for October

Todd and Kathy Johnston had the top dairy herd for the month of October, according to the supervisor of the Red Lake-Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA).

Supervisor Randy Rasmussen put the following herds in the Top 10 in the association for the month of October:

1. Todd and Kathy Johnston – 65 cows, 88 percent in milk, 73 pounds of milk, 2.7 pounds of fat, 2.2 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 101 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
2. Northwest Research and Outreach Center – 116 cows, 89 percent in milk, 72 pounds of milk, 2.6 pounds of fat, 2.3 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 108 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
3. Beyer Brothers Farm – 70 cows, 93 percent in milk, 66 pounds of milk, 2.4 pounds of fat, 2.1 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 104 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
4. Amundson Dairy – 57 cows, 91 percent in milk, 65 pounds of milk, 2.6 pounds of fat, 2 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 107 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
5. Wayra Dairy 3x – 206 cows, 86 percent in milk, 63 pounds of milk, 2.4 pounds of fat, 1.9 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 105 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
6. Walter Brothers Farm – 283 cows, 87 percent in milk, 62 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of fat, 1.9 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 104 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
7. Robert and Terri Dahlen – 54 cows, 81 percent in milk, 59 pounds of milk, 2 pounds of fat, 1.8 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 101 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
8. Morlyn and Debbie Ornquist – 37 cows, 89 percent in milk, 59 pounds of milk, 1.8 pounds of fat, 1.8 pounds of protein, in unsupervised testing, with 106 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
9. Danny Grunhovd – 68 cows, 87 percent in milk, 57 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of fat, 1.8 pounds of protein, in supervised testing, with 105 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.
10. F. Duane and Faith Knott – 86 cows, 86 percent in milk, 56 pounds of milk, 2.4 pounds of fat, 1.7 pounds of protein, in unsupervised testing, with 103 percent of DHIA test-day milk sold.

The herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butter fat is averaged over all the cows This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month. If too many cows are included in the herd, then the average for the month may be low even though the cow that is milking produces a lot of milk.

The Thief River Falls TIMES

First half nets NCTC road win

Slow starts can often follow teams on the road. But that wasn't the case for the Northland Community and Technical College men's basketball team Friday when the Pioneers ran up a 44-24 halftime lead and went on to beat the Jamestown (N.D.) College junior varsity 85-73.

"First half went pretty well," reported Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "We got some points by creating some turnovers. And that came from being aggressive."

The game disintegrated in the second half, according to Nikunen, when the officials' whistles turned it into a free throw shooting exhibition. "It made for a long, slow second half," he said.

It was the Pioneers' second win in four early-season starts against Wisconsin, Iowa and North Dakota opponents.

"We're making progress," offered Nikunen, whose team had a Tuesday trip to Fergus Falls before kicking off their home schedule Nov. 29 vs. the Concordia College junior varsity.

Northland's balanced Friday offense featured Jawaun Bowman with 18 points, Nick Ricks 17, Cyrin Shaffer 16 and Brandon Fontes 10, with Keith Brown and Keaton Ousley both contributing 9 points.

The Pioneers shot 50 percent from the field (27/54). The Jimmies shot only 33 percent (21/63). Together, the two teams put up 59 free throws. Northland was an accurate 21-for-25 at the line; Jamestown went 25-for-34. The Jimmies were into the bonus situation just 3:20 into the second half and hit the double-bonus – a situation that usually occurs in the late stages of a game – two minutes later.

Jamestown finished with a 42-34 rebound advantage. Northland topped the turnover charts 26-23.

Banquet caps volleyball season

Five individual awards were presented during Thief River Falls' 2005 high school volleyball banquet.

Recognized for leading the team in various statistical categories were Jessica Gustafson, kills; Shawna Rogalla, blocks; Haeli Stokke, assists; and Beth Marben, service aces.

Kjelsy Loeffler joined the award winners by being honored for her back row defensive play.

Mandy Thompson and Lauren Daniels were named captains of the 2006 Prowlers, succeeding Stokke.

Earning athletic letters were seniors Chasity Johnson, Becca Larson, Steph Brekke, Stokke, Loeffler and Gustafson; juniors Sarah Michaels, Thompson, Daniels and Rogalla; sophomores Kayse Lee and Marben; along with freshman Brittany Wiseth.

All-state academic honors went to Brekke, Johnson, Gustafson and Stokke.

The 2005 Prowlers finished the year 8-20 overall. They beat Park Rapids Area 3-1 in first round North Sub-Section 8AAA play, but lost a 3-0 quarterfinal match to top-seeded Moorhead.

Graduation will take seven seniors, but Thief River Falls coach Tammy Sparby points out there will be seven returning letter winners, along with players from a strong junior varsity team who gained confidence this fall by putting together a 12-2 record.

In 2006, Thief River Falls volleyball will be enhanced by the formation of a new Polar North Conference that will include the Prowlers, Red Lake County Central, East Grand Forks Sacred Heart, Red Lake Falls, East Grand Forks and Warren-Alvarado-Oslo. "This will be a great opportunity for our girls to get some individual and team recognition," said Sparby.

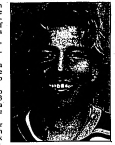
Treavor Peterson third pro with Augusta Lynx



Treavor Peterson

Treavor Peterson, a Lincoln High School and Concordia College graduate, returned for his third season with the Augusta (Ga.) Lynx of the East Coast Hockey League this year.

Meanwhile, Thief River Falls' Keith Anderson has left professional hockey, at least temporarily.

The 6-4, 200-pound Peterson, a defenseman, appeared in all but one of Augusta's games the past two seasons.

Although he mustered just two goals and 13 points in those 143 games, the Lynx describe him as a "consistent presence on the blue line."

Augusta began the week tied for third in the eight-teach ECHL South Division. Columbia led the pack with an 8-4-1 record for 17 points, followed by Gwinnett at 6-2-1–13; Florida 6-3-0–12; Greenville 6-4-0–12; Augusta 5-4-2–12; Charlotte 5-3-1–11; South Carolina 2-7-5-9; and Pensacola 3-6-1–7.

Anderson, who played at St. Cloud State, skated for the ECHL Florida Everblades the past four years. They traded him to the Las Vegas Wranglers during the off-season.

Instead of reporting for the start of the 2005-06 season, however, Anderson opted to return to school to complete work toward a degree in biology/medicine.

The Las Vegas franchise invited Anderson to join the team after the First of the Year. That option is being considered, but a list of injuries that has followed him during his playing career, and an opportunity to work toward medical school may weigh against Anderson's decision to return to hockey.

Hendrickson, Dillon swimming at Concordia

Sophomore Cami Hendrickson and freshman Jenna Dillon of Thief River Falls are members of the 2005-06 women's swimming and diving team at Concordia College in Moorhead.

The two former Prowler teammates were part of a 200-yard freestyle relay team that came up with a final-race win for a come-from-behind 122-120 Concordia Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference victory over host Hamline Nov. 11. The Cobbers' winning 1:48.42 clocking was less than 1.5 seconds ahead of the second place Hamline foursome.

That was the only win in the Cobbers' first four duals this season. The losses have come at the hands of MIAC rivals Macalester 140-100, St. Thomas 138-102 and Gustavus 131-100.

In the Saturday setback against the Gusties, Dillon won the 50 freestyle in 26.67 and finished second in the 100 with a 59.81, while Hendrickson anchored a first place 200 freestyle relay team that turned in a 1:49.99.

Sixth graders in Juneal Peterson's and Chuck Walrath's social studies classes at Franklin Middle School collected 1,341 food items and $139 in cash donations by trick-or-treating this past Halloween for the Area Food Shelf in Thief River Falls. (Submitted photo)

FMS sixth graders collect 1,341 food items for food shelf

Juneal Peterson's and Chuck Walrath's sixth grade social studies classes at Franklin Middle School (FMS) recently went trick-or-treating for the food shelf on Halloween and collected 1,341 food items and $139 in cash donations for the Area Food Shelf in Thief River Falls.

Each year that the school has completed this project, Northern State Bank has donated two $50 U.S. savings bonds to two of the students who collected food or money for the project. For every three food items (or dollars) that a student collected, his or her name was put into a hat for the drawing for these prizes. This year's winners were Brittany Johnson and Kara Iliff. Vicki Meunier, a representative from Northern State Bank, drew the winning names and presented the students with their savings bonds.

This year, with reading being a main focus at FMS, it also awarded as prizes packets of six adventure books to the student in each of the six social studies classes who turned in the most food items and/or cash donations for this project. The winners were Miranda Tunheim, Rebecca Houske, David Erickson, Taylor Storm, Micah Schneider and J.C. Hansen.

Dayton secures funds for area flood projects

U.S. Senator Mark Dayton has secured $45.8 million in federal funds for Minnesota flood control and environmental conservation projects. The projects are included in the final FY2006 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act (H.R.2419), which passed the Senate Nov. 15 by a vote of 84 to 4. The bill will now go to the White House for the President's signature.

"Many Minnesotans have been devastated in recent years by severe flooding. This funding is critically important to protect their communities from future destruction."

Among the projects funded in this bill was a project in Roseau. According to Dayton's office, $119,000 was for ongoing flood control in Roseau. The funding will be used to complete a feasibility study of flood control measures, as determined by the Army Corps of Engineers. The study will determine the most cost-effective flood plan for the city of Roseau.

Other area projects and funding approved in this bill were:

- $60,000 for Red Lake River ongoing flood control in Crookston. The funding will be used for the pre-design, design, and construction of emergency riverbank protections and erosion control measures for the safety of residential and commercial areas.
- $40 million for East Grand Forks/Grand Forks flood control. The funding that Dayton secured will be used to construct levees and a floodwall, forming three "rings" of flood protection around both communities. Additionally, funds will be used to help stabilize an existing dam, to remove a former railroad bridge, and to construct a new diversion channel.

Judy Kleinvachter's hunting crew went home last week and this week only Jessica and Amanda Lofrooth, Marie Steffen and Marie Altendorph had visited her. Of course, she didn't miss her Sunday trip to Irene's for dinner, Monday for playtime in Karlstad, and Tuesday potato dumplings with friends. That gives her time to read the paper other days. She's not complaining about the Golden Years. She doesn't have the time.

Elsie Lofrooth has been busy making baby quilts and baby afghans. She is now working and waiting for newcomers in the 5th generation. She sometimes thinks she'll be around until she's over 100 years old and it will take her that long to finish all she has laid out for hereself to do, with no vacations. On Friday, her son Donny Lofrooth spent time visiting her on his birthday. Happy Birthday, Donny.

Thanks for nothing!

What are you most thankful for this Thanksgiving?

It's Thanksgiving and time to count our blessings. Remembering to reflect upon our blessings and giving thanks is not always an easy task. With so many chores to do before Thanksgiving, and the blinding glitz of holiday merchandising distracting us, we often forget to reflect upon our bountiful harvest until it's almost too late - dinner table prayers and conversation almost come to a grinding halt as we are suddenly faced with that question - what are you most thankful for?

In searching newspapers for something to share with readers one headline stopped me in my tracks. It said "Thanks for nothing." In this story, Pastor Susan Fandrich of the Federated Church in Carrington, N.D., wrote the following:

"If you have food in the refrigerator, clothes on your back, a roof over your head and a place to sleep - you are richer than 75 percent of this world of ours.

"If you have money in the bank, cash in your wallet and spare change in a dish someplace - you are among the top eight percent of the earth's wealthiest people.

"If you woke up this morning with more health than illness - you are more fortunate than the million who will not survive this week."

When it comes right down to it, it's not hard to count our blessings: family, friends, food, clothing cars, a home, a job, health. It's a long list. Sometimes those lists can surprise us. A child, for example, might be thankful for the cartoon "Sponge Bob Square Pants." A wife might be thankful for the sympathetic distraction offered by "Desperate Housewives." A husband with a sense of humor might offer that he's thankful for "Survivor." Yes, we can be thankful for a sense of humor.

Sunday evening, I listened to PBS story about a man from a South American country who recalled his first employment experience at a restaurant in the United States. He was shocked that customers often paid over $100 per person per meal at this restaurant, that there was so much waste, and that a glass he accidentally broke cost over $100. In his country, his family survived on a little over $200 per month.

Though there are some people even in our own small community who worry about where their next meal will come from or where the money to pay the heating bill will come from, in general, we live in a country used to excess. Perhaps being used to excess has blinded us to those truly in need.

Yes, we can be thankful for an overabundance, and maybe even shamed by it into becoming better people.

Such experiences and stories often remind us to be thankful for less tangible things - friendship, love, health, compassion, and even a sense of humor.

I won't discourage you from giving thanks for your many tangible blessings, but I bring you back to that intriguing headline - "Thanks for nothing." Pastor Fandrich explains that if we follow the logic of giving thanks for things, then we cannot give thanks for the things we don't have - or can we? Fandrich wrote that the Apostle Paul encouraged us to give thanks for nothing. In fact, she writes, "He offers us the example of his own thanksgiving for nothing at all - not one physical, material tangible thing. Instead," she writes, "Paul gives constant thanks for things which are not things: faith in the Lord Jesus, love toward the saints, a spirit of wisdom and revelation, the riches of God's glorious inheritance and the immeasurable greatness of God's power."

I think these thoughts are all worth pondering this Thanksgiving. If you're a deep thinker with a sense of humor or irony, imagine how you would stop conversation at the dinner table this year if you answered what you are most thankful with "nothing." Happy Thanksgiving.

Just a few facts

According to the Census Bureau, what many regard as the nation's first Thanksgiving took place in December 1621 as the religious separatist Pilgrims held a three-day feast to celebrate a bountiful harvest. The day did not become a national holiday until 1863 when President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday of November as a national day of thanksgiving.

Of course, what would Thanksgiving be without turkey? According to the National Turkey Federation (NTF), during the last two decades, the turkey industry has come from a single-product, holiday-oriented business into a fully integrated industry. In 2004, U.S. consumption of turkey was 17.1 pounds per person.

The NTF also noted that turkey production in the United States has more than tripled since 1970, meeting consumers' demand as more people choose turkey. With the value added to turkey through processing into a wide variety of cuts, parts and further processed products, the total value of turkey processors' production in 1999 was more than $7.8 billion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let your schools know what information you want them to release about your child

To the Editor:

Recently, we ran into a situation in which a school employee from a school in northwestern Minnesota called our children's elementary school (in Norman County) on behalf of another person with no legal rights to our children and asked for information regarding them. The counselor at our school did not give out any information and immediately contacted us in regard to this attempt.

After the counselor explained the request to us, we told her that we would not allow the release of that information about our children.

She said she does not freely offer that information. What relief we felt in knowing that our children's information is protected.

We contacted the offending school's administration regarding the incident because we felt that it was inappropriate for it to even think that it could get that information on our children. To our surprise, the principal responded:

"Thank you for notifying us of this matter. Now that we are clear of your wishes toward the information on your children at (name of school), they will be honored.

"You should know, however, that the information asked for is public directory information in any district until the parent has informed the district not to release any information on their children. Below is an excerpt of our policy:

"'A. Directory information:

"'Students have access to any and all information kept on them in the file of the principal's office. This also applies to the parents of any student enrolled who is under 18 years of age. By 'having access to this information,' it is meant they have the right to inspect, review, and challenge the correctness of the contents.

"'The following items kept on file will be considered 'directory information,' and as such, will be available to the public: Student's and parent's name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, classes in progress, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of members of athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, and the most recent previous educational institution attended by the student. If a student does not want this information available to the public, he or she must so inform the principal's office personnel.'"

Wow! According to this response, anyone can call any school in any district and find out a phone number (that you may pay for to be unlisted!) of any unknowing student. Anyone can find out where that child lives simply by asking for it (all the better to stalk and abduct someone, I guess.) Nice!

Attention, parents: Please contact your children's school to find out if its policy is to release "directory information" and ask that the information pertaining to your children not be public directory information. Again, this information is out there for anyone and you, as parents, have to ask the school not to make it available.

After some checking on the Internet, we came across the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Acts (FERPA) of 1974. FERPA is a federal law designed to protect the privacy of a student's educational records.

But it goes on to say that schools also may disclose, without consent, "directory-type" information such as the student's name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, honors and awards and dates of attendance.

However, the school must tell parents and students of the information that is designated as directory information and let the parents or eligible student tell the school not to disclose that information about them.

In other words, the government wants to protect the privacy of a student's educational records but gives the OK to handing out the student's address, phone number and so on.

In looking back to what FERPA states, there is a key phrase: "Schools MAY also disclose..." It doesn't say the information must be disclosed. So, why, in today's world, would we allow such information to be so readily available when it's not mandated by law?

Maybe it's time for a change in policy and federal law to protect our children.

Editor's note: In response to a query, Brooke stated that she is originally from the Strathcona/Greenbush area. She also said that the school identified is Warroad High School.

Minnesota must be prepared for emergencies

by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf

Four Senate committees held a joint hearing on Wednesday, Nov. 16, about Minnesota's preparedness to deal with emergencies in light of the issues raised by recent gulf coast Hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma.

"Minnesotans expect and deserve to feel safe in their homes and communities. The aftermath of Hurricane Katrina was a wake-up call for the entire nation," said State Sen. LeRoy Stumpf (DFL-Plummer). "As legislators, we need to examine and address any gaps that may exist in our state's ability to respond to a natural disaster or attack."

At the hearing, Public Safety Commissioner Michael Campion and Kris Eide, the new director of Homeland Security and Emergency Management, described Minnesota's emergency response structure and plan. The hearing also included a panel of first responders, including fire and police chiefs and the Emergency Medical Services director.

"Any response to a disaster will take place on the local level and we can't always rely on the federal government," Stumpf noted. "We dealt with this first-hand with the devastating floods in East Grand Forks and other communities along the Red River Valley in 1997."

"Minnesota is ahead of the curve compared to most other states when it comes to preparedness," said Stumpf. "But we need to maintain and strengthen our communications network and other infrastructure, and build on existing partnerships to prepare for existing and emerging threats."

"As state senator, I'll work to support Minnesota's first responders with the sufficient and consistent funding and guidelines they need to do their critically important jobs," Stumpf concluded.

The hearing was convened by Sen. Jane Ranum, chair of the Public Safety Budget Division; Sen. Leo Foley, chair of the Crime Prevention and Public Safety Committee; Sen. Linda Berglin, chair of the Health and Human Services Budget Division; and Sen. Becky Lourey, chair of the Health and Family Security Committee.

Farm Bureau: Pleased with comments from legislators

Elected officials and candidates for office met with constituents at the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation's (MFBF) 87th Annual meeting at the Sheraton Bloomington Hotel in Bloomington on Saturday and Sunday.

Lt Gov. Carol Molnau spoke to Farm Bureau members at the Nov. 19 awards banquet, addressing issues important to Minnesota.

Noting that her roots are in agriculture and so are Minnesota's, Molnau expounded on developments in Minnesota agriculture. The governor's trade mission to China, which is important to agriculture and to Minnesota companies as the Chinese government only makes business deals government to government; and, the fact that Minnesota is the nation's renewable energy leader and needs to continue to be a leader.

"We were very honored that several elected officials were able to attend the Farm Bureau meeting, and provide their insights on the future of agriculture," said MFBF President Al Christopherson. "We appreciate the working relationship that we have with Lieutenant Governor Molnau and the Pawlenty administration as well as all of our congressional delegations."

"It is gratifying to hear that our elected leaders are committed, like Minnesota Farm Bureau is, to action that will support our livestock and renewable energy industry" said Christopherson.

Coleman: U.S. oversight of Internet vital to world economy, democracy

The U.S. Senate has unanimously passed a Sense of the Senate Resolution introduced by Senator Norm Coleman that upholds the United States' current role in overseeing the governance of the Internet and expressly opposes control of the World Wide Web by the United Nations and other international organizations.

The action taken by the Senate comes in response to recent proposals to have the U.N. assume a role in global Internet governance. Earlier this week at a meeting of the U.N. World Summit on the Information Society (WSIS) meeting in Tunisia, delegates to the conference agreed that the United States will retain oversight of the domain-name system.

"The Internet has flourished under the supervision and market-based policies of the United States," Coleman said. "This resolution makes clear the determination of the Senate to oppose any attempt by the United Nations or any other international group to control or politicize the Internet now or in the future. The potential risks to our economy, security, and freedom of expression are too profound to allow the World Wide Web to be governed by the U.N. or any other international entity."

The Internet was developed and has flourished under U.S. supervision, oversight, and private sector involvement. Coleman has consistently maintained that this growth happened not because of increased government involvement, but rather from opening the Internet to commerce and private sector innovation.

Coleman's Sense of the Senate Resolution supports the four governance principles articulated by the administration on June 30, 2005. These are:

- Preservation of the security and stability of the Internet domain name and addressing system (DNS).
- Recognition of the legitimate interest of governments in managing their own country code top-level domains.
- Support for the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) as the appropriate technical manager of the Internet DNS.
- Participation in continuing dialogue on Internet governance in multiple existing fora, with continued support for market-based approaches toward, and private sector leadership of, its further evolution.

The resolution calls upon the Administration to firmly oppose any proposal that would deviate from these core principles.

Significantly, the Senate resolution also supports greater access on the part of the developing world to the services, commerce, and free flow of information that is the bedrock of democratic self-government that the Internet provides.

WSIS delegates will hold a follow-up forum next year in Greece that will focus on a variety of public policy issues related to the Internet. The forum will be open to full participation of Internet stakeholders, including those in the private sector.

"Despite the promising developments to protect the technical and informational integrity of the Internet, we must remain vigilant," Coleman said. "The future of the world economy and democracy is inextricably tied to the future of this unprecedented communications and informational tool. We must not let down our guard."

Coleman previously submitted a statement into the Congressional Record denouncing proposals by a UN task force for an internationalization of the Internet on July 29, 2005.

Cosponsors include Senators Pryor, Warner, Smith, DeMint, Bennett, Nelson (FL), Kyle, Allen, Martinez, Bunning, and Chambliss.

Are Working With a Will
New Settlers of the Eleven Towns Have Been Busy This Summer
Some Have Their Whole Quarter Section Now Under the Plow

"The writer recently made a trip over a portion of the eleven towns opened for settlement a year ago last June and it is surprising the amount of improvements the settlers have made in a year's time.

"Most of those who purchased the high-priced land near to this city have built some fine residences and barns, some of the houses must have cost as high as $3,000 or $4,000, but they have not done as much in the way of improving and cultivating their land as have others who lived a greater distance out. Those living farther away from town have done an immense amount of breaking and in a number of instances where the settlers had prairie farms, the whole 160 acres of land, with the exception of a few acres upon which the house and barn is situated, has been broken up. A large number of teams were met on the road hauling grain, not to town, but to the homes of the settlers, where it will be cleaned this winter and used for seed next spring. If the conditions are anyways favorable, there will be a large amount of grain raised in that section next year, and many of the homesteaders will be able to much more than pay for their land out of the crop they will raise. The way the new settlers are going at the work in their new homes indicates that in a short time this will be the garden spot of Red Lake county."

To Build One Here – Large Cold Storage House to Be Erected Here Next Spring Will Make an Excellent Market for Butter, Eggs and Farm Produce

"A large cold storage plant, costing nearly $50,000 is just being completed at Alexandria, and the NEWS has been informed that a similar plant will be erected in Thief River Falls next spring by the same company. The company owning the Alexandria plant is closely connected with the Soo railroad and owns a number of these plants at different points along the Soo line.

"When the plant is built and in operation, it will be a big thing for the farmers of this section, as the highest cash price will be paid for all butter, eggs, poultry and other farm produce. It will make a market in Thief River Falls for this class of produce that will bring farmers here from miles around, and as cash will be paid for everything purchased, it will be a good thing for the merchants of this city."

May Move Sunday
Postmaster Richardson Soon to Change His Headquarters

"The new fixtures for the post office were shipped from Greenfield, Ohio, on the 19th of November and, if they arrive here this week, they will at once be set up in the Dobner-Meehan building and the post office will be removed to the new location on Sunday. If the change is not made this Sunday, it will be made one week from Sunday.

"An average of 1,000 people pass in and out of the Thief River Falls post office on each weekday and, in order not to put the public to any inconvenience, Postmaster Richardson has decided that the office can only be removed upon a Sunday. When the office is removed into the Dobner-Meehan block, it will quite likely be established there for all time to come. The government takes an eight year lease of the building and the fixtures will not be the property of the postmaster, but of the building."

Used Oleo Without Signs

"Mike Quigley, a railroader whose camps are near Greenbush, was arrested Saturday by State Pure Food Inspector Hieberg and fined $25 for using oleo in his camps without putting up signs. The camp would have closed next day, but oleo had been used for some time without any sign boards being hung up in the mess room. The fine resulted."

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR

ST. HILAIRE, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA NOVEMBER 25, 1905

News Items

"The night crew at the sawmill missed their Sunday rest this week as Manager Evans, afraid of a freeze-up started the mill on Sunday evening.

"A considerable amount of plowing has been done by the farmers the past week. It is not often that plowing can be done in this section the latter part of November.

"The school board has had to put in new seats at the school house. There is a larger attendance at the schools this fall than ever before and another teacher may have to be hired before the winter is over.

"Wylie people are said to be fairly well pleased at the outcome of the suit at Crookston last Tuesday. The Great Northern has promised not to tear up the track and will continue to run trains down there from here.

"We have been having a fine lot of weather the past week, until Thursday when it rained all day, ending up in the evening with a couple of inches of snow and a cold snap. It seems to be the prevailing opinion that we are going to have an open winter but it would be well to order fuel just the same.

"D. N. Winton, the genial manager of the Thief River Falls Lumber company, was a passenger on the northbound passenger [train] last Wednesday. Dave stood on the rear platform watching the cloud of steam and smoke from the sawmill and looked sorry. He shut their mill down about a month ago when the weather turned cold. The fine weather we have been having since has had a depressing effect on Dave, particularly when he sees the diminishing lumber piles and thinks of the lively lumber demand."

Wylie Still Has Train Service

"CROOKSTON TIMES (Wednesday): Today before Judge Watts the hearing on the application by the people of Wylie for the Great Northern to show cause why an injunction should not be issued forbidding that company from tearing up the tracks between St. Hilaire and Wylie and discontinuing the present train service, was on and resulted in an amicable adjustment of the matter.

"In answer, Col. R. A. Wilkinson stated that there was no intention to tear up the tracks either at present or in the future and that the present train service would be continued indefinitely. As the railroad and warehouse commission had already ruled that the present train service was adequate for the present needs of Wylie and the surrounding country there was nothing else to contend for and action was dropped."

The Season Ends

"It is more than probable that the sawmill will close for the season some time today. If the weather should suddenly turn warmer they may decide to run next week, but it is thought that tonight will see the finish. The season has been the longest in the history of the mill. Work was commenced on April 10th and the mill has run 197 days this season. Very few accidents have occurred and the cut has been a big one, considering the size of the plant. The exact figures are not yet known, but the total will come very near the twenty-five million mark. Besides a new record for late running has been made, beating all previous records by four days. Manager Evans feels good over the result and is entitled to congratulations."

—Like Abraham Lincoln, President Eisenhower now has a Gettysburg address.

—The Grafton, ND, paper reports that the American Farm Bureau Federation has nearly four times as many members as the Farmers Union, but you'd never suspect it, judging by their respective achievements in the spreading of propaganda.

—Confusing, isn't it? There is an Oslo in Marshall county and an Oslo Church in Kittson county.

—The old Farmers Almanac predicts that this will be a tough winter, but, in spite of the snow, we're inclined to doubt it. We don't notice any big piles of fuel wood in yards around town.

—More than 200 members of Congress enjoyed free trips abroad this summer at the expense of the taxpayers, and then we wonder why taxes are high.

—The December Reader's Digest quotes this notice from the Red Lake Falls Gazette: "St. Joseph and Oak Grove cemeteries will be closed November 15 for the winter. Residents should take due notice and govern themselves accordingly." The Digest slipped up several years ago when it overlooked a picture caption in the TRF Times: "Fertile Girl Has Prize Calf."

New report describes burden of asthma in Minnesota

The Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) recently released a new report on the burden of asthma in Minnesota. Among other things, the report describes asthma prevalence, asthma-related hospitalizations, quality of life for people with asthma, and asthma mortality.

Overall, Minnesota's asthma rates are lower than national rates; however, disparities affect certain segments of the population. Most significantly, there are large disparities in asthma hospitalization rates between those who live in the Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area and the rest of the state.

"Asthma affects more than 350,000 Minnesotans and their families," said Minnesota Health Commissioner Dianne Mandernach. "The information in this report will help us plan asthma education and intervention programs, and develop policies for preventing and controlling asthma in the future."

The report's findings include:

- Asthma prevalence: An estimated 6.8 percent of Minnesota adults currently have asthma. That translates to an estimated 255,000 adult Minnesotans. An estimated 7.9 percent of Minnesota children ages 0 to 17 are reported to have asthma, which is equivalent to more than 98,000 Minnesota children.
- Health care utilization: Asthma hospitalization rates are highest among children under the age of 5. Boys under 5 have the highest rates. Asthma hospitalization rates among children under 5 in Minneapolis are almost 50 percent higher than the national average. School survey data from Greater Minnesota suggest that asthma is also having an impact in rural areas of the state in terms of symptoms and missed days from school and other activities.
- Quality of life: Nearly 18 percent of Minnesota adults with asthma reported one or more days in the past year in which their activities were limited due to asthma, and 19.5 percent of families with children who have asthma reported being greatly or moderately affected by their child's health condition.
- Asthma and flu shots: Annual flu shots are recommended for people with asthma, according to federal guidelines for asthma management. In Minnesota, adults with asthma are more likely to report receiving a flu shot in the past year than those without asthma. This finding is encouraging since people with asthma are more likely to become seriously ill if they get influenza. Nevertheless, only 40 percent of those with asthma reported receiving a flu shot in 2003.
- Obesity and smoking: Adults with asthma are more likely than those without asthma to be obese. Adults with asthma are just as likely to smoke cigarettes as those without asthma. Smoking can trigger asthma symptoms.

Mandernach encourages all Minnesotans to be familiar with the symptoms of asthma and the proper control of the disease, especially in children. Symptoms of asthma include wheezing, shortness of breath, chest tightness and cough, which can be worse at night or in the early hours of the morning. Symptoms may occur or worsen upon exposure to triggers such as allergens, irritants, exercise or viral infection.

Parents of children who experience any of the following should question if their child's asthma is under control and should see a health care provider:

- if the child uses a rescue inhaler more than twice a week for asthma symptoms, or
- if the child wakes up at night with asthma symptoms more than twice a month, or
- if the child uses more than two canisters of rescue medication (such as albuterol) in a year.

MDH is currently in its fourth year of a five-year, federally-funded plan to reduce disease and death related to asthma. As part of this effort, the Asthma Program conducts asthma surveillance to better understand and describe the burden of asthma in Minnesota.

The Asthma in Minnesota 2005 Epidemiology Report is available at www.health.state.mn.us/divs/hpcd/cdee/asthma/documents/epi2005.pdf.

Ice causes power outages in TRF

About 1,500 customers on the northside of Thief River Falls were without power for almost two hours Monday morning. Some of those same customers – about 1,000 customers – experienced two additional power outages Monday afternoon. After the third outage, electric linemen batted ice off of cables.

The first power outage occurred at 7:35 a.m. Monday. The outage was caused by the icy weather conditions and wind, which together broke an electric conductor, according to Utilities Director Arlo Rude. In turn, that electric conductor fell into another conductor, shorting it out and tripping the breaker for a circuit. Power was restored at about 9:20 a.m. Monday.

Some of those customers were affected by another power outage at about 12 p.m. Monday. Ice built up on conductors, causing them to slap together and trip a breaker, Rude said. Power was restored about half-an-hour later to that area, which extended from Long's Bridge to Brooks Avenue.

The downtown area, which was affected by the first power outage, was not affected by the second outage. The Electric Department switched that electric load to another substation before the second power outage, Rude said.

The third outage occurred at about 1:30 p.m. Monday in the same area affected by the second outage. Done purposely, it allowed linemen to knock ice off of cables, Rude noted. Power was restored an hour-and-a-half later.

Winter's icy...glaze

Icy roads cause hazardous driving

Rain Sunday and Monday made driving conditions very difficult in northwestern Minnesota. During Minnesota's winter, drivers have to continually adjust to different driving conditions. These conditions provided motorists with a very difficult challenge. When asked Monday morning about accidents on area roads, Minnesota State Patrol officials said there were too many to mention; however, none of them were "major." Area law enforcement officials were asking drivers not to drive unless they had too. Additionally, if motorists are concerned about traveling somewhere, please do not call law enforcement officials. Call 1-511 for road conditions or check the Minnesota Department of Transportation's Web site at www.511mn.org.

As of Tuesday morning, much of the area was still included in a blizzard warning or winter weather advisory. Cold and wintery conditions were expected to continue through the week.

Library plans for entrance improvement

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Sometime in the near future, Thief River Falls Public Library patrons may be able to enter the library through a south entrance. At its Nov. 22 meeting, the Thief River Falls City Council approved a design contract, a grant application and a reprogramming of some of its funds for the potential improvement.

Barb Jauquet-Kalinoski, Northwest Regional Library System director, told the council she has again heard a complaint about handicap accessibility at the library. Upon hearing the complaint, she talked to other individuals, who noted they don't use or want to use the library in the winter because they are afraid of falling on ice.

Currently, patrons enter the library by traveling around the building. If they travel by vehicle to the library, they park in the adjacent parking lot, in other nearby parking lots or on nearby streets. However, they are not allowed to park on First Street, which is adjacent to the library's current entrance.

To curb the problems people face when trying to enter the library, it was determined that a south entrance should be constructed. In order to construct that entrance, council members approved applying for a $30,000 Americans with Disabilities Act grant. As part of that grant application, the city would provide matching funds. That money would be taken out of the Capital Revolving Fund. The council approved using that money for that purpose.

Other funding would result from redirecting the library manager's salary. Currently, the library doesn't have a manager as its manager resigned this fall.

Besides approving the grant application and money transfer, council members approved a contract not to exceed $5,000 with Widseth Smith Nolting for the project. The $4,750 contract will include the design of the door and entrance as well as the layout for the placement of library shelving units.

"This is with the understanding that we'll use the building for 'x' number of years," said Jauquet-Kalinoski, who noted she couldn't say how long the library will use its current building. She guessed it would be used for "some years down the road."

Several council members were receptive to constructing a south entrance. "I think it's a much more

Country Estates owners to consider Minnesota statute use to solve road problem

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Dale Cloose, majority owner of Country Estates, a trailer court in Smiley Township, appeared at the Tuesday, Nov. 22 meeting of the Pennington County Board of Commissioners to discuss a few issues with commissioners. Among them is an ongoing concern over the maintenance of roads that aren't governed by Smiley Township or Pennington County.

Cloose reminded commissioners that he doesn't own the roads in question, though it has been portrayed that way in previous conversations.

Cloose previously asked Smiley Township to take control of three Country Estates crossroads that essentially have been determined to be public roads for driving purposes, but are not funded or maintained by either Pennington County or Smiley Township.

At the conclusion of a July 21 meeting, Smiley Township, supervisors unanimously denied a Country Estates petition that requested the township accept jurisdiction of those roads.

It was stated during the July meeting, that the roads are in poor condition and supervisors stated that they would not take control of roads in their present condition. County Engineer Mike Flaagan presented plans to improve the roads to withstand a seven ton load. That would cost $100,000. Supervisors said they would consider taking control of the township roads only if they were improved to Flaagan's specifications.

Citing Minnesota Statute 163.16, Cloose asked the Pennington County Board to take action. Statute 163.16 Subdivision 1 states "When a written complaint, signed by five or more landowners of any town is presented to the county board stating that a described town road in or on the line of the town has not been opened and constructed, or is not properly maintained and because such neglect is not reasonably passable, the county board by resolution, shall fix a time and place for hearing the complaint."

According to Dave Olin, Pennington County Attorney, residents of Country Estates could file a complaint with the county board to recommend the township take ownership of the crossroads. The county board would then host a hearing and determine if Smiley Township should take ownership of the roads.

Citing Statute 163.16 subdivision three, "If upon the hearing and investigation the county board shall be of the opinion that the complaint is well founded, it shall by resolution direct the town board to do such work or make such improvements as it shall deem necessary to put the road in a passable condition."

No further action was taken.

The Pennington County Board of Commissioners received a letter from the legal representation of TRF Parking Lot Striping prior to its Nov. 8 meeting The letter stated a disagreement in the dollar amount of payment by Pennington County for work completed by TRF Parking Lot Striping during summer crackscaling. The letter states a disagreement in the county's payment for the total pounds of rubber crack sealant used on Highway Department project CP570506.

Jerry Unruh, owner of TRF Parking Lot Striping, came before the board Aug. 23 to dispute the cracksealing pound total of 74,500 pounds that the Highway Department claimed his business completed during the project. County Engineer Mike Flaagan said

Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremonies

- The Thief River Falls Community Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony in Thief River Falls begins at 7 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 3, at Floyd B. Olson Park.

Sixth Annual Tree Walk for Hospice

Community invited to Eagles Club to see the Christmas displays

The community is invited to take a break from the hustle and bustle of the holiday season and spend time capturing the quiet spirit of Christmas at the Tree Walk for Hospice sponsored by the Eagles and Lions clubs of Thief River Falls. The event will be held Saturday, Dec. 3 from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 4 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Eagles Club in Thief River Falls.

Residents can meander along a winding path through an indoor forest of decorated Christmas trees, enjoying music, Christmas goodies, a barbecue lunch as well as pictures and visits with Santa on Saturday from 12 to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Christmas trees are decorated by area organizations, churches, schools and businesses that have entered their trees in the decorating contest. Four fully-decorated trees will be auctioned through a silent auction, and the remaining trees and decorations will be given to needy families through Christmas for Pennington County. Entertainment by a variety of local musicians will be provided throughout the event. A pancake breakfast will be served Sunday morning by the Lions Club for a freewill offering.

"The Tree Walk for Hospice is one of many great community events this weekend," said Kelly Rogalla, hospice fundraising coordinator. "Visitors can relax and feel the spirit of Christmas with their family and know that the proceeds are helping hospice patients and families."

Tree Walk proceeds are used to provide hospice care for terminally ill patients and their families. Across the U.S., the cost of hospice care is 10 to 20 percent more than Medicare reimbursement, according to the National Hospice & Palliative Care Organization. Hospices rely on the generosity of their communities to provide care.

For more information, to sponsor a tree or to make a contribution, contact Kelly Rogalla at 681-6189.

Spaghetti dinner to benefit Area Food Shelf

Local residents can donate to the food shelf at a spaghetti dinner and subsequent holiday train stop Wednesday, Dec. 14 in Thief River Falls. The spaghetti dinner will be held from 4:30 to 7:15 p.m. Freewill donations will be accepted.

Also on Dec. 14, the Canadian Pacific Rail holiday train is scheduled to stop near the Thief River Falls City Hall from about 8:05 to 9 p.m. Decorated with thousands of holiday lights, the train makes several stops across Minnesota. Musicians travel on the train and perform at each stop. Nonperishable food items and monetary donations from both the holiday train and spaghetti dinner go to the food shelf.

The food shelf serves clients from all of Pennington County and the Marshall County communities of Holt, Newfolden and Viking. Clients are able to get food once a month from the food shelf. If they are elderly and disabled, they are able to get food from the food shelf twice a month, Reierson noted. The food shelf is open from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesdays. Emergency boxes of food are located at the Law Enforcement Center in Thief River Falls.

Charges pending against TRF men after law enforcement intercepts drug package

Fifth degree controlled substance crime: Earlier this month, police and the sheriff's department learned that a narcotics dog at the Houston, Texas, International Airport had allegedly detected the odor of drugs coming from a package destined for Thief River Falls. Local law enforcement intercepted the box and had it shipped to the Law Enforcement Center. A search warrant was executed on the package Nov. 18, and five pounds of marijuana was allegedly found inside the package. An undercover Red Lake County deputy sheriff then delivered the package to an address in the 900 block of Pleasant Ave. The undercover deputy then allegedly asked whether Alejandro Toscano, 18, Thief River Falls, was expecting a package. Toscano allegedly said yes and accepted the package. On Nov. 21 at 4:30 p.m., police and the sheriff's department executed a search warrant on the Pleasant Avenue residence. They allegedly observed that the package had been opened, a knife was located nearby and the bricks of marijuana were in plain view. Toscano has charges pending for fifth degree controlled substance crime. Israel Ayala, 31, Thief River Falls, has been charged with fifth degree controlled substance crime. Ayala allegedly conspired with Toscano to purchase the marijuana by setting up the drug deal and sending the money to purchase the marijuana. The five pounds of marijuana has an estimated street value of $6,000, according to the sheriff's department.

Depriving another of parental rights, contributing to the delinquency of minors, and forgery: A Thief River Falls man has charges pending in connection after two juveniles allegedly ran away with him in late October. Michael David Franklin, 42, has charges pending for two counts of depriving another of parental rights and two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. One of the juveniles – a 16-year-old St. Hilaire female – returned home after calling her mother from Iowa five days after allegedly leaving Thief River Falls with Franklin and the other juvenile. The second juvenile – a 16-year-old Thief River Falls female – was allegedly with Franklin for about a week until law enforcement found them in Amarillo, Texas. Franklin allegedly knew they were runaways from the Area Learning Center and asked them to forge a $250 check from a woman's checking account. He then allegedly drove them to Northern State Bank, where they allegedly cashed the check. The juveniles have already been charged with forgery, according to the police department. The juveniles' names are not being used because they have been charged with crimes.

Felony forgery and giving false information to a police officer: On Nov. 17 at 12:41 p.m., police received a report that someone had allegedly "passed a bad check" at Kezar Music. Adam Walter Lueders, 23, Thief River Falls, allegedly forged a check belonging to another man and received $581.41 in goods and services from the business. Later, Lueders allegedly told a police officer that his name was that of the man from whose account the check was written. Lueders has been charged with felony forgery as well as giving false information to a police officer. The items – CDs, a guitar strap, a t-shirt and speakers – were recovered.

Underage consumption/driver: While on patrol Nov. 19 at 2:11 a.m., a sheriff's deputy allegedly observed a speeding vehicle on Highway 32, south of St. Hilaire. The driver then allegedly made a wide turn and crossed the centerline on Center Avenue. Stefan David Rundell, 20, Thief River Falls, has been cited for underage consumption/driver.

Accident: On Nov. 21 at 9:02 a.m., the sheriff's department received a report of an accident near the intersection of Highway 32 and County Road 62. A 1994 Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by Denise Marie Cariveau of East Grand Forks and a 1994 Ford Tempo driven by Paul Hubert Youngmann of St. Hilaire collided. At the time of the accident, both vehicles were northbound on Highway 32. According to the report, Cariveau attempted to pass Youngmann and didn't see that his turn signal was flashing. Both vehicles sustained $1,000 in damage.

Theft: On Nov. 22 at 3:16 p.m., police received a report of a theft in the 800 block of Atlantic Ave. A Grand Forks, N.D., Herald newspaper dispenser was stolen. It is valued at $450, and it is believed there was $20 inside of the dispenser at the time of the theft. The next day, at 10:43 a.m., the sheriff's department received a report that a newspaper dispenser was in the ditch on the northside of 190th Street. There was one newspaper inside the machine, and it appeared the money was missing. The incident remains under investigation.

Underage consumption and furnishing alcohol to a minor: On Nov. 22 at 8:54 p.m., police received a report that a juvenile had allegedly been drinking alcohol at Campus Court Apartments. A 15-year-old Thief River Falls female has charges pending for underage consumption. Thomas Lee Daniels, 18, and Anthony Scott Thome, 25, both from Thief River Falls, have charges pending for furnishing alcohol to a minor.

Fourth degree driving while intoxicated: While on patrol Nov. 23 at 1:44 a.m., a deputy sheriff allegedly observed a vehicle swerving and crossing the centerline near the intersection of Center Street East and 320th Avenue Southeast. The driver also allegedly drove below the posted speed and continuously drove on the fogline. Gary Dale Lundeen, 46, Oklee, was cited for fourth degree driving while intoxicated.

Accident: On Nov. 23 at 2:40 p.m., the sheriff's department received a report of an accident near Mark Street. At the time of the accident, Dawn Joy Walsh of Newfolden was driving a 1998 Ford Tempo eastbound on Mark Street. According to the report, she drove off of the dead-end, hitting trees near the riverbank. Walsh's vehicle sustained more than $1,000 in damage.

Hit and run accident: On Nov. 23 at 9:45 p.m., police received a report of a hit and run accident in the Sunrise Apartments parking lot. A parked 1996 Oldsmobile Achieva, which is owned by Andy Lee Qvick McCullough of Strandquist, sustained $900 in damage. The incident remains under investigation.

Disorderly conduct and underage consumption: On Nov. 26 at 3:47 a.m., police received a report of people fighting in the Northland Village parking lot. Upon arriving at the scene, police allegedly told Amanda Jean Peltier, 18, Thief River Falls, to keep her voice down; however, she continued to be boisterous and said expletives inside and outside of the apartment complex. Peltier was cited for disorderly conduct and underage consumption.

Criminal damage to property: On Nov. 27 at 6:30 p.m., police received a report of property damage in the 100 block of State Ave. N. After an argument, a 15-year-old Thief River Falls male allegedly punched a hole in a wall. The juvenile has charges pending for criminal damage to property. Damage was estimated at $200.

If readers have any information about the aforementioned crimes or offenses, they are urged to contact the Law Enforcement Center at 681-6161.

These reports include names of individuals charged, arrested or cited with various crimes and offenses by police, the sheriff's department or other law enforcement officials. Depending upon the circumstances of a case, charges can be, and sometimes are, changed or dropped by law enforcement officials or attorneys even before the case reaches court. Readers should also realize that under the American system of jurisprudence, individuals charged with crimes are innocent until proven guilty of those crimes in a court of law.

Gather information about Medicare Part D

In response to questions and concerns, the Minnesota Department of Human Services and the Minnesota Board on Aging have prepared two news stories addressing Medicare's new prescription plan, Medicare Part D.

If you are a person with disabilities and on Medicare and Medical Assistance, beginning Jan. 1, 2006, most of your prescription drug costs will be covered by Medicare's new prescription drug plan, Medicare Part D. This includes Medical Assistance with a spenddown and Medical Assistance for Employed Persons with Disabilities.

People with disabilities who are on Medical Assistance and Medicare should carefully review all of the Medicare prescription drug plan choices, know their prescription drug needs and enroll in a plan that best fits their needs. If beneficiaries do not enroll in a drug plan by Dec. 31, 2005, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services will assign them to a Medicare prescription drug plan.

Even though this plan will cover most prescription costs, it may not be the plan that is right for you. While the assigned plan ensures beneficiaries prescription drug coverage, it may change an individual's existing coverage and it may not be the plan that covers all of their prescription drug needs. It is important for beneficiaries to know their personal drug needs and enroll in a prescription drug plan that best accommodates their needs. If beneficiaries feel the plan in which they have been assigned does not meet their needs, they may change their plan anytime.

As Medicare Part D makes its way across the state, it will affect approximately 90,000 Minnesota Medicare beneficiaries with disabilities. Beneficiaries should have already received a large volume of Medicare Part D information including important government notices and marketing materials from various Medicare prescription drug plans.

As beneficiaries review their options, they should bear in mind that there are resources available to help them with the process. The beneficiary, their family members and caregivers can receive free, impartial assistance from the Minnesota LinkAge Line at 1-800-333-2433. The LinkAge Line is available from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Beneficiaries can also access Medicare Part D information and prescription drug plan choices through the Internet at www.medicare.gov or by calling 1-800-MEDICARE.

Before you call, gather the following information for reference: your Medicare card; a list of the prescription medications you currently are taking, including names and dosages; and the name and address of the pharmacy you prefer.

People on both Medical Assistance and Medicare should review prescription drug options

In response to questions and concerns, the Minnesota Department of Human Services and the Minnesota Board on Aging have prepared two news stories addressing Medicare's new prescription plan, Medicare Part D.

If you are currently receiving both Medical Assistance and Medicare, beginning Jan 1, 2006, most of your prescription drug costs will be covered by Medicare's new prescription drug plan – Medicare Part D – instead of Medical Assistance. Even though Medicare will cover a portion of your prescriptions, it may not be under a plan that is right for you. You should carefully review the available Medicare Part D information, know your prescription drug needs and choose the plan that best fits your needs.

To ensure all beneficiaries have prescription drug coverage on Jan. 1, 2006, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services will assign people who are currently receiving both Medicare and Medical Assistance and who have not enrolled in a prescription drug plan by Dec 31, 2005, into a Medicare prescription drug plan. If beneficiaries find the plan in which they were assigned does not meet their needs, they may change their plan at any time.

For instance, Grace has Medicare and Medical Assistance. Grace has heard about Medicare Part D and knows that Medicare will now cover her prescriptions. She decides to wait and not choose a Medicare prescription drug plan by Dec. 31, 2005. Grace later finds the plan Medicare enrolled her in doesn't cover all of her prescriptions. She then calls 1-800-MEDICARE to learn about the Medicare prescription drug plan options available to her and she enrolls in a plan that better fits her needs.

Grace's neighbor, Larry, who also has Medicare and Medical Assistance, chooses not to enroll in a Medicare prescription drug plan by Dec. 31, 2005. To ensure he has drug coverage, Medicare assigns him a prescription drug plan. Larry finds the plan in which he was enrolled fits his needs so he doesn't have to do anything. His Medicare prescription drug coverage will begin Jan 1, 2006.

While there is a lot of information regarding the Medicare prescription drug plans and Medicare Part D, there are people who are waiting to help you. If you have questions about Medicare Part D or about what drug plans are available to you, you may call the Minnesota Linkage Line, 1-800-333-2433; refer to www.medicare.gov on the Internet, or call 1-800-MEDICARE.

Before you call, gather the following information for reference: your Medicare card, a list of the prescription medications you currently are taking, including names and dosages, and the name and address of the pharmacy you prefer.

Report documents burden of cancer in Minnesota

The Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) has released its biennial report on cancer in Minnesota. The report shows that lung cancer remains the leading cause of cancer death.

The report shows that 2,327 Minnesotans died of lung cancer in 2002, compared to 2,259 in 2001. The next three leading causes of cancer deaths in 2002 were: colorectal (932 deaths), breast (642), and prostate (601 deaths). Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer-related deaths among both men (1,261 deaths in 2002) and women (1,066 deaths), and is responsible for about one out of every four cancer deaths.

The report also shows that the overall cancer incidence rate increased by 1.1 percent per year among Minnesotans between 1995 and 2002. This was largely due to a significant increase in prostate cancer among men and significant increases in lung and breast cancer among women.

Although the overall cancer incidence rate in Minnesota is similar to the nation, American Indians are twice as likely to be diagnosed with, and die from, cancer in Minnesota than in the nation as a whole. Most of the increase in risk is due to elevated rates of lung and colorectal cancer.

"Cancer continues to take a huge toll on Minnesotans," said Minnesota Commissioner of Health Dianne Mandernach. "To reduce this toll, we need to continue working on the strategies we've outlined in Cancer Plan Minnesota, our statewide cancer control plan." Over the past two years, MDH collaborated with public, private and non-profit organizations to develop Cancer Plan Minnesota 2005-2010, the state's first comprehensive cancer control plan. Planning partners have formed a new coalition, the Minnesota Cancer Alliance, to implement the plan.

Other cancer statistics from the report:

- Among the 15 most commonly diagnosed cancers among men, incidence decreased significantly for four cancers (lung, colon/rectum, oral, and stomach) and significantly increased for six (prostate, non-Hodgkin lymphoma, melanoma, kidney, esophagus, and testis).
- Among the 15 most commonly diagnosed cancers among women, incidence decreased significantly for three cancers (colon/rectum, ovary, and cervix) and significantly increased for seven (breast, lung, non-Hodgkin lymphoma, melanoma, thyroid, kidney, and pancreas).
- The lung cancer mortality rate among Minnesota women increased by 40 percent from 1988 to 2002, and continues to increase by more than two percent each year. Among women nationally, rates have begun to stabilize, and have only increased by one half of a percent per year since 1995. Because of the difference in Minnesota and U.S. trends, the rates in Minnesota and the U.S. have grown closer: in 1988 the lung cancer mortality rate among women was 18 percent lower in Minnesota than in the U.S. as a whole; in 2002, it was only six percent lower. These differences indicate that women may have given up smoking at a slower rate in Minnesota than nationally. The smoking rate in Minnesota has not decreased over the last decade and, in 2004, was the same as the national average.
- Among men, lung cancer mortality is decreasing, both in Minnesota (-1.1 percent per year since 1988) and nationally (-1.9 percent per year since 1991).
- Statewide, American Indians had the highest lung cancer rates, more than twice as high as among non-Hispanic white Minnesotans and 40 percent higher than among black Minnesotans. Lung cancer mortality among American Indians is nearly three times higher in Minnesota than in the U.S. as a whole.

"We're fortunate to have such excellent data on the burden of cancer in Minnesota," Mandernach said. "With this wealth of information, we can work together with the Minnesota Cancer Alliance to target our cancer prevention efforts where they're needed most."

County Attorneys Assoc. adopts child support resolution

At its Nov. 16 Board of Directors meeting, the Minnesota County Attorneys Association adopted a resolution urging the continuation of the current funding level established in the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 to ensure that parents assume the primary responsibility of providing for their children.

The action taken Nov. 16 is in response to significant budget reductions under consideration by Congress. According to some estimates, the phased in cuts would reduce funding by over 40 percent and the Congressional Budget Office estimates that child support collections would be reduced by almost $8 billion in the next five years. Deep reductions in federal funds used to help pay for state child support services would shift additional costs to the states and would seriously impact the children in these programs.

In a letter to the Minnesota Congressional Delegation, MCAA Executive Director John Kingrey and Assistant Ramsey County Attorney Mark Ponsolle stated "There is more to do to improve child support enforcement programs. In spite of our many successes, we need to do more to ensure that our children receive the child support they are due, on time, and in full. We need to do more to increase the establishment of child support orders and improve the percentage of orders that actually receive a collection, especially in the area of interstate cases. There should be no higher priority than continuing support for a program that has worked successfully for all children of our country."

VA's online RX refill service the right prescription for vets

Secretary Nicholson: Service is "fast, easy and secure"

Tens of thousands of veterans are now receiving their prescription drug refills from the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) with greater convenience, speed and security, thanks to a new service available to veterans over the Internet.

More than 70,000 prescriptions have been refilled using the latest service added to VA's "MyHealtheVet," the personal online health record system designed for veterans in the VA health care system. The prescription refill service began on Aug. 31.

"VA's MyHealtheVet prescription refill service is proving to be extremely successful in providing tens of thousands of America's veterans with fast, easy and secure access to their important medications," said the Honorable R. James Nicholson, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. "Given the overwhelmingly positive response VA has received to this initiative from our veterans, we anticipate that thousands more veterans will choose to take advantage of this convenient service."

The secure online prescription refill service has quickly emerged as one of the more popular features in the MyHealtheVet system, which connects with VA's widely respected electronic records system.

When a veteran orders a prescription refill, the request is routed to VA's computer system to be filled by one of the department's outpatient mail pharmacies. The refill is then sent directly to the veteran, eliminating the need for a trip to the pharmacy and a wait in line.

On Veterans Day, Nov. 11, 2005, MyHealtheVet marked its second anniversary by adding three new health records that veterans can keep in a secure electronic environment and make available to other VA health professionals nationwide - blood oxygen levels taken from a pulse oximeter, daily food intake in the Food Journal, and physical activity and exercise in the Activity Journal.

Since mid-October, more than 100,000 veterans have signed up to use MyHealtheVet, which is located on VA's Web site at www.myhealth.va.gov <http://www.myhealth.va.gov/>.

Among the services available to veterans, their families and VA care providers through the online personal record are the ability to track health conditions - entering readings such as blood pressure and cholesterol levels - and to record medications, allergies, military health history, medical events and tests.

Veterans can also include personal information, such as emergency contacts, names of medical providers and health insurance information. They can access health information on the Internet from VA, MedlinePlus from the National Library of Medicine, and Healthwise, a commercial health education library.

Future expansion of MyHealtheVet will allow VA patients to view appointments and copayment balances, access portions of their medical records, and give access to their records to doctors, family members and others.

Author to speak in TRF on police code of silence

Northland Community and Technical College Criminal Justice Department will host author and speaker, Michael W. Quinn on Dec. 6 at 7 p.m., in room 12 at the airport campus. The session is free of charge and open to the public.

Quinn, author of "Walking with the Devil – The Police Code of Silence," is based on what bad cops don't want the public to know and what good cops won't tell them.

"This book is about my battles, won and lost, with the Code of Silence," said Quinn. "These are real stories about real crimes, committed by real cops.

Mike Quinn was an officer with the Minneapolis Police Department for 23 years. During that time, he worked in some of the department's toughest high-profile units that served over 300 high-risk warrants without a critical incident, and conducted successful raids on armed and dangerous suspects. He was also involved in investigating allegations of criminal and departmental violations by police officers. He oversaw the development of a Federally-sponsored Police Corps Academy. From his experiences, he saw the need for a book to teach new recruits about real-life ethical dilemmas, to challenge myths about police culture and to promote the true meaning of being a peace officer.

"Walking with the Devil: The Police Code of Silence," is a gem that has relevance to everyone who cares about the quality of policing and the quality of life in our community. With a passion for ethical policing and a commitment to serving the community, Quinn has a powerful message to share with the people of Thief River Falls, and everywhere.

Redeemer to host Santa Lucia Festival

Redeemer Lutheran Church in Thief River Falls will host the Agassiz Swedish Heritage Society's (ASHS) 19th Annual Santa Lucia Festival, beginning at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 10.

Following the Festival of Light, Swedish goodies, that were provided by members of the society, will be served.

Shirley Booth heads up the committee planning the program, which will include Santa Lucia and her attendants, including Star Boys and tomptes. Rev. Mark Helgeland, pastor, will give a message, and Assistant Pastor Jason Asselatine, will read the Christmas story in English. Lyndon Johnson of Hallock will read the Christmas story in Swedish.

There will be special instrumental and vocal music, and Mrs. June Mosbeck of Red Lake Falls, president of ASHS, will welcome those attending the event. The congregation will be singing traditional Christmas hymns.

The Lucia tradition can be traced to St. Lucia of Syracuse, Sicily. St. Lucia became a martyr for her Christian beliefs in 304 A.D. The tradition moved to early Sweden. The first recorded appearance of a white clad Lucia in Sweden was in a country house in 1764 and the Lussegubber custom became popular in the 20th century.

The name Lucia is from the Latin word for light. December 13 is the longest night of the year on the old calendar, so Lucia's arrival marks the coming of longer days.

Redeemer Lutheran Church traces roots to 1887 when 10 families from Sweden started meeting in homes on Park Ridge, three miles northwest of what was to become Thief River Falls. The church moved into a building in Thief River Falls in 1902 and after having several church homes, built its current building in 1966 at 1300 Nora Street East, on the south side of the city.

Addition

Marshall County Central of Newfloden inadvertently left a name off of its B+/B Honor Roll, which appeared in the Nov. 23 edition of the Northern Watch. Jerica Olson should have been included on that list.

Matt Winjum (left) and Arron Hendricks (not pictured), owners of Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls, hosted Business After Hours, a Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce sponsored event. Business After Hours allows Chamber of Commerce members an opportunity to share information and ideas. The event took place on Monday, Nov. 14, at Café Rhombus, which is celebrating its first anniversary. Winjum said the café has undergone numerous changes since it first opened. Patrons of the restaurant on Highway 59 South, will notice an expanded menu, and the addition of noise dampening materials to improve acoustics.

Arron Hendricks and Matt Winjum hosted Business After Hours at Café Rhombus Monday, Nov. 14. The two business owners shared some of what they experienced in their first year of business with business leaders participating in the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce-sponsored event.

The whole purpose of Business After Hours is to allow business leaders who belong to the Chamber of Commerce, an opportunity to share information. This is the second Business After Hours event in the past two months. The last Business After Hours event was held at Dakota Clinic, which displayed its recently completed Women's Health Clinic.

Interim Chamber of Commerce President Stacey Myhrer, said they decided to start holding Business After Hours events again to see if it would catch on.

On Monday night, Nov. 14, turnout was rather low, but weather conditions that night made travel less than ideal. It was, however, an ideal time for Café Rhombus, as it was the start of a week-long first-year anniversary celebration at the restaurant.

Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls opened a year ago under the ownership of Matt Winjum, Arron Hendricks and Levi Kraft. The three area men have been in business together pretty much since they graduated from high school. Shortly after they graduated from high school they initiated their first enterprise in 1999, by building a mobile stand from which they sold smoothies. The name "rhombus" comes from that experience - they thought the home-built stand had the appearance of a rhombus (a parallelogram with four equal sides). A much more successful affair, and inspiration for Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls, was the Rhombus House of Pizza, which they opened in Mentor in 2002.

At Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls, it has been a year of change and learning; and, it was these experiences that they shared during Business After Hours. In June, for example, Winjum and Hendricks said goodbye to Kraft who got married and moved to Alaska. Winjum also noted it was their first summer of operating two businesses. (The Rhombus House of Pizza in Mentor is a seasonal business.)

The opening of Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls was much more than the young owners expected. The staff of 30 struggled to keep up. Winjum said staffing is still a challenge because the community doesn't have a ready supply of individuals (usually college students) who have had experience in the service industry. But now, Winjum said, their staff of 15 has become a pretty good team.

Winjum said opening in November of last year, gave them time to get used to a new facility, but operating two restaurants at the same time last summer provided another significant challenge for the owners.

Changes also were made to the interior of Café Rhombus in Thief River Falls. The restaurant features a very modern look. Winjum said they added some padded blocks to the walls, and a small floor covering to improve acoustics. They also expanded the menu to include local favorites, such as steak and potatoes, and added some items that are unique compared to what other restaurants offer in Thief River Falls. The Café Rhombus is also selling wine from Two Fools Vineyard, a local vineyard and winery owned and operated by LeRoy and Carol Stumpf.

Winjum and Hendricks have adjusted to the changes thrust on them, but are not ones to sit idly by and watch time pass. They hinted at some changes that may take place in the near future, and after Monday night's Business After Hours, may have some new ideas, too.

End of Employment

I'd still be wandering down the corridors out of breath and out of time, like Alice lost in her maze through Wonderland. Instead I chose to quit my job.

"What are you wearing?" he said throwing up his hands. "I'm surprised at you. You can't wear shorts. Go put on some long pants." His face started to turn red as the veins in his neck throbbed.

I went and changed. I came out.

He said, "Don't push buttons."

"The guys get to wear shorts," I said.

"Yeah," interjected Mike supporting me. "The other day I had on shorts,"

"How short do pants have to be before they're considered shorts?" I asked.

"Don't push the button, and don't look at me like that!" he started to yell.

"Look at you like what? I was just asking. I need to know the dress code for this job so you won't get mad at me," I replied.

"No you weren't. You were staring me down. If you want to act like that you can just leave," he screamed.

"What do you want?" I asked, trying to be more professional than he was.

Ignoring me, he started talking to someone else. I stood there waiting for him to respond. After several minutes he looked at me and finally said "Go clean your bathrooms."

"Fine." I left and started cleaning them.

Two bathrooms later he approached me and started in again.

"Do you know where I'm coming from? I'm surprised by you. I don't want to come to work and worry about what you look like," he said.

"Yes I do understand where you're coming from," I shot back getting tired of his repetition. "I choose to wear a smock everyday whether or not my clothes might be objectionable to the people that work here just to make that statement."

"I'm just surprised at you. You're really punking out on me," he said gesturing to my hair.

When I first started work he'd said that I looked kind of gothic and that I needed to be careful about what I wore. I had black hair at that time. When I'd dyed my hair back to blond, he seemed to miss it.

"What happened to your gothic look?" he asked. "It looked good on you and the fishnets too. You should dye your hair purple."

"I'm surprised too. You're the one that told me I should dye my hair purple," I reminded him. "I didn't give my getting a hair cut at camp a second thought."

"Don't blame this on me," he screamed his eyes bulging as he took a step closer to me.

"I'm not blaming this on you. I'm just saying I didn't know," I said trying to calm him down.

"No, you are blaming me," he screamed. "You're saying that it's my fault. I don't understand you and you don't get where I'm coming from, and you don't get it so maybe we need a break," he sputtered. Take a break? I was more than ready and willing.

If I had taken the road not traveled, if I had gone back I knew he would think he'd won, that it was OK for him to treat me with disrespect. I can only imagine the self righteous look on his face and the pride in his voice. I, after all, was the only one on the crew that was willing to do his job of cleaning bathrooms. ("Yes, I'll let you come back. I'm glad you realize how much you really want this job," he would have sneered with the knowledge that he could push me around any which way he wanted.)

I've always been strong willed and not willing to put up with people putting me down. I certainly didn't need that job cleaning toilets badly enough to let him step on me. Instead, I climbed out the rabbit hole.

PARENTING TIPS
Learning Social Skills

Becoming sociable, happy and emotionally secure is a basic learning task for children. You, the parent, are the key person in helping your child become emotionally healthy. You may have opportunities throughout your day to show him/her love and to help him/her learn the social skills needed to get along with others.

According to Alice S. Honig, professor of Child Development at Syracuse university, children need to learn self control. For example, they need to obey the rule about no playing with matches. They need to wait if someone else has the toy that they want. They need to learn that they can feel jealous about a baby sister or brother, but they must not hurt the baby. Preschoolers need parents to teach them how to express and to handle emotions.

You can help your child learn polite ways to behave with others. Show him/her ways to solve problems. For example, if your child wants the toy that someone else has, help your child think of different ways to get the toy. Encourage ideas that allow both persons to work out the problem. The aim is for both children to feel okay.

Children who feel good about themselves use their energy for learning about the world. They do not need to fight or pester others for attention.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Use the "what if" approach to help your child think of ideas to solve problems before the situation occurs. "What if you and Jenny both want to play with the doll stroller at the same time?"

...Christmas Spirit

Well, Thanksgiving came and went with its usual dispatch and all that's left of that holiday is a dried up turkey carcass in the garbage bag and some happy memories. This means that the Christmas season is upon us and the countdown has begun.

There is no danger that we can fail to remember that Christmas is coming. Reminders of the impending season have sprung up everywhere overnight. If stores didn't have Christmas stuff out before Thanksgiving, they surely do now. It seems like we were barely given enough time to gobble up the gobbler and we needed to rush out and start our Christmas preparations.

Try to watch television and what do you see - Christmas specials and Christmas commercials. Open a newspaper or magazine - Christmas everything and it appears that we need all of it to be happy. Stores have been filled with decorations and holiday gifts for the past two weeks and even the streets sparkle with Christmas trimmings. Christmas carols are heard no matter where we turn and each day we are duly informed of how many shopping days remain before the big day.

All of this pre-holiday hype can be good. It can put people in a happy, sharing, caring mood. This is the Christmas Spirit. It is visible in happy smiles and jaunty steps, and heard in laughter and voices exclaiming, "Merry Christmas!" It's a wonderful thing to have, but it can also be dangerous.

All too often, the early pre-holiday hoopla can do just the opposite of what it is intended to do. Many people begin to feel pressured and stressed as they are bombarded with constant reminders of the coming Christmas season. The real Christmas Spirit withers under the rush to accomplish all of the holiday tasks we are expected to do before the big day. As Christmas comes closer and closer, people are too busy preparing for the holiday to pause and enjoy all of the activities that are going on around them. They are just too busy to see the real joys of the holiday.

Not only is the media putting out constant reminders of what needs to be done before Christmas, but sometimes friends can add pressure. How many times have we heard our friends say, "I have all of my shopping done," or "My baking is done and in the freezer," or "My house has been decorated since the day after (or before!) Thanksgiving." I don't want to hear about it, because suddenly panic will set in and I realize my shopping isn't anywhere near done - maybe hasn't even been started - my baking hasn't been started either, and the decorations are still in their boxes. Some friends!

There are some ways we can enjoy the days before Christmas without neglecting what needs to be done and at the same time make this Christmas one of the most memorable of all. First, set priorities. Place your family first on your priority list and plan activities around them. Do things together. Don't stay home and bake cookies when you can take the kids to the city Christmas tree lighting. The baking will wait. So what if you have a few less cookies this year. Don't choose to go shopping rather than to see the live manger scene with the family. The stores are filled with things to buy. You'll find just the right thing anyway.

Why not plan to do Christmas baking as a family this year? The cookies and cakes may not be the perfect masterpieces they usually are, but I guarantee that they will taste just as good, and you'll make some lasting memories for the kids to remember in the future.

Decorating can be another family activity. Drag out the boxes and let hubby and the kids become the decorators. Oh, it may not turn up in "House Beautiful," but your home will absolutely glow and so will your family.

Go shopping together. Give the kids some money and let them do their own shopping at the same time you do yours. After they've bought their gifts, let them wrap them too. No matter if the wrapping isn't perfect - no one will care. Then let them find a place to put them under the tree and give them a big hug.

How about Christmas cards? A usually tiring task can be great fun if you write the cheery notes and let the rest of the family address the envelopes, seal them and stamp them. I'm sure the post office won't mind if stamps are crooked. Don't forget the Christmas seals on the back, either, and be sure to explain what they mean - it's a good way to learn what the real Christmas Spirit is about.

Take part in a few of the family activities that our town has planned for Christmas enjoyment. You can visit the Christmas train, do the tour of homes in Thief River Falls and several area towns, visit the trees that have been decorated by local groups and vote for your favorite, take part in the church bake sales and sample fresh lefsa, cookies and cider. Yum. There are so many things planned in the community that you and your entire family will get the Christmas Spirit in no time. Take Grandma and Grandpa along too, and Great-Aunt Mildred. What fun and just think how that Christmas Spirit will flourish!

Down On The Farm

Eric Bergeson

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch.

This generation has missed out on character-building adventures

At the Thanksgiving dinner table, the city of San Antonio came up. On cue, my 94-year-old great Aunt Olla, who has a story for every city west of the Mississippi, told us her tale of San Antonio, Texas.

It was during the war. Olla and her friend Marge left the farm and went south to find work. They ended up in San Antonio. They figured the logical place to find a job would be the tallest building downtown, which happened to be an insurance agency.

The young women were hired to sell insurance, but in two days of pounding the overheated pavement of San Antonio, they sold only one policy for $3.

That was enough. They were sunburnt to a crisp. Their feet were blistered. They quit.

Next, they found work at a fried chicken joint. It was their job to clean the floors after the place closed, so they put Glenn Miller's "In the Mood" on the jukebox and cleaned like crazy. What a time they had.

Where did you stay? we asked. "Oh, we rented a room in some sort of mansion," Olla replied, before going off on a story about the time Marge had an abscess tooth and Olla nearly fell down a flight of stairs in the mansion running for help.

I have spent untold hours listening to older relatives tell tales about their adventures when they were young, broke, and looking for work during the Great Depression and World War II.

One uncle had only a dime he stole from Grandma's purse when, as a 16 year old, he jumped on a freight train and headed for the west coast to work in the mines. He claimed there were 300 bums clinging to the train, although "we always lost a few going through the tunnels."

Another older friend fed himself as he worked himself west by crashing every small-town funeral he could find. He had one nice suit, and he used it to stave off hunger by being the handsome young man nobody knew.

My grandfather was in his mid-teens when he took the train up to Alberta to help with the harvest. My Swedish grandmother was only a year or two older when she started teaching country school in central Minnesota to some German kids who barely spoke English.

And what about the 19 year olds who found themselves climbing the cliffs of Normandy under a barrage of Nazi bullets, or dropping bombs on Romanian oilfields, or buried to their neck in mud on some south Pacific island?

For adventure these days, teenagers brave the crowds at Best Buy on Black Friday to lay claim to an X-box video game system. That's about as exciting as it gets, unless you count all the shooting they do on the screen after they get home.

What a contrast to our ancestors two generations ago. Back then, you had to justify your food intake by pitching hay or you were on the street at 15. Today, many teens sit on the couch in a video-induced coma until their mid-20s.

I am one of the lucky, or unlucky, depending upon how you see it. Oh, I went overseas on some study abroad experiences in college, which sounded adventurous. In reality, the trips were about as risky as hang gliding off the curb.

Going to England today is easier and less adventurous than taking a train to St. Paul was in 1925. Yet, young folks back then didn't hesitate to go to St. Paul and farther in search of work.

Unlike my grandparents' generation, I have never known what it was like to travel to a city without the money to get home again. In fact, they won't even give you a visa to most countries unless you have your return ticket in hand. Some adventure!

Would I trade places with my forebears? No! No way would I want to walk into to the tallest building in San Antonio and ask for work to keep my stomach full.

But I have no doubt after listening to people who grew up in tough times that those of us blessed with a well-cushioned upbringing missed out on some character development along the way.

We began celebrating Thanksgiving Day last Sunday with a complete Thanksgiving dinner that the folks at the healthcare center in Karlstad served to 350 relatives and friends of their residents. Tables were set for groups of families so it was like coming home together for the holiday. The day was bright and sunny which made everything so enjoyable. Thanks to all those who continued to serve until ever guest was taken care of, and thanks to those who sponsored it. Those are things that put the gold in our "golden years" and fighten the days when we think we will need help as we pass each decade.

Today, Judy Kleinvachter, together with June Severson, is joining the crowd at Irene's Cafe dining on those wonderful potato dumplings that they turn out on Tuesday.

Visitors at Judy's home this week were Wayne, Pat and Rebecca Larson and Betty Pietruszewski. She is finding so many things that need putting away at this time of year and that goes for most of us.

TRF girls lose two weekend hockey games...

Prowlers shut out in REA Classic

Thief River Falls failed to score a goal in weekend girls high school hockey games against St. Paul United and Park Center.

The Prowlers lost a 5-0 Friday night decision to St. Paul United and dropped a 4-0 Saturday afternoon contest against Park Center during the first Ralph Engelstad Arena Classic.

"Friday, we came out a little flat and St. Paul came out strong," said Thief River Falls coach Katie Anderson. "We didn't play our game."

Still, Anderson found some bright spots in the loss to the St. Paul Academy and Summit School/Visitation cooperative. "Penalties played a huge factor, and I saw some good things from our penalty kill units," she said."

The Prowlers avoided a slow start the next day, but faded as the game progressed, according to Anderson. "We came out strong," she said. "We were right with Park Center at the start, but we let up in the second and third periods."

Crookston and Park Center skated to a 4-4 Friday tie and the Pirates beat St. Paul United 6-1 Saturday to complete the four-team, round-robin schedule.

The event marked the first home-games of the 2005-06 season for the 1-3 Prowlers.

"Both teams were tough competitors," mentioned Anderson. "I think confidence and nerves played a factor in both games. Those are things we need to learn to overcome, and we will, with experience."

Thief River Falls, after a Tuesday game at Roseau, will be back at the Ralph Engelstad Arena Thursday for a 7 p.m. face-off against Lake of the Woods.

Class A girls state swimming and diving championships Nov. 21-23 extended the 2005 season for the Prowlers' Allyson Helling (left) and April Peterson, who headed to Minneapolis with Thief River Falls coach Lacy Knott (right). Peterson finished 12th in the 100-yard backstroke and Helling placed 16th in the 100 freestyle. Helling, who also qualified for state in the 50 freestyle, was co-winner of Section 8A Swimmer of the Year honors this fall, and Knott was selected as Section 8A Coach of the Year for the second straight season.

Prowler line-up has four state qualifiers

■ TRF wrestling opener is Saturday

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Thief River Falls returns four wrestlers from its 2004-05 team that posted a 13-9 dual meet record and sent a school-record six state qualifiers to Minnesota State High School League state wrestling tournament in February.

The 2005-06 Prowlers will be led individually by four returning state qualifiers. They include senior Daniel LeDuc, 152-160 pounds, who posted a 40-3 record, recorded a team-high 114 takedowns and finished the season with a fourth place finish at the state tournament; junior Andrew Peralta, heavyweight, posted a 36-7 record, recorded a team-high 25 pins and earned off-season Greco-Roman All-America honors; junior Kyle Iverson, 125, recorded 30 wins during his sophomore campaign enroute to a second place finish in the Section 8AA tournament; and freshman, Jordan Engen, 112-119, who posted 27 wins as an eighth grader at 103 pounds and scored a team-high 34 nearfalls on his way to a second place finish in the section ttournament.

Other returning letter winners include seniors Ben Nelson, 140 and Mike Mattison, 152, (missed the entire 2004-05 season due to injury); junior, Brian Anderson, 119, (missed the second half last season due to injury); sophomore, Billy Mattison, 189; and freshmen, Kevin Fynboh, 130, and Trevor Storey, 119.

Kenny Geiser is entering his fourth season as the Prowlers' head coach. Looking ahead to the upcoming season, Geiser said this year's squad will be led by four returning state qualifiers – the most state qualifiers Thief River Falls has ever returned. He added that this year's team does not have the same depth as last year's squad.

"We lost five section place winners from last year's team," Geiser said. "We're not going to be as balanced from top to bottom to start with, but there are some kids, who with experience, can make this year's team as good as last year's."

With their mix of youth and experience, the Prowlers will again be one of the teams to beat in Section 8AA, challenging the likes of Hibbing, Roseau, Blackduck/Cass Lake-Bena, Park Rapids Area and Deer River for the section title. Detroit Lakes, the section's 2005 champion, moved to Section 7AA.

"We actually have a better shot of winning the section with Detroit Lakes gone and Roseau losing a bunch of seniors," Geiser said. "Our strength will be our four state entrants returning. We've never had four state entrants coming back."

The 2005-06 squad lost five seniors to graduation. They include Thain Abrahamson, 145, Zach Anderson, 140, Josh Haviland, 119, Adam Lian, 171, and Ben Poissant, 189. Also, due to a football injury,

Jeremy Anderson off to strong start with Auggie team

■ Former Prowler standout transfers from Gophers to Division III wrestling power Augsburg

Jeremy Anderson is off to a 5-0 start as a member of the 2005-06 Augsburg College wrestling team.

The 2003 Lincoln High School graduate is a sophomore at Augsburg after transferring from the University of Minnesota.

Anderson's early-season success includes a gold medal performance at 157 pounds in the Nov. 19 Auggie-Brute-Adidas Open, an event held at Augsburg's Si Melby Hall in Minneapolis that drew 200 wrestlers from 13 colleges.

The 2003 Minnesota Class AA state champion with a 44-0 record, Anderson was a four-time state qualifier for the Prowlers, finishing with a 153-31 career record.

Recruited and signed by the NCAA Division I power Gophers, Anderson spent two years at Minnesota. He was in the line-up as a freshman, then redshirted last winter.

Augsburg is an NCAA Division III wrestling power. Currently ranked No. 1 in the nation, the Auggies have won nine national titles in the past 15 years.

Anderson got a win and the Auggies defeated Minnesota State University Moorhead, the No. 11-ranked team in Division II, 32-6 Wednesday. Augsburg is 9-0 in duals against the Dragons and 200-13 against Division II teams in duals dating back to the 1989-90 season.

TRF swimmers place at state

Allyson Helling and April Peterson of Thief River Falls were consolation final place finishers during the 2005 Minnesota State High School League girls state swimming and diving championships held Nov. 21-23 at the University of Minnesota Aquatics Center in Minneapolis.

Peterson placed 12th in the 100-yard backstroke and Helling was 13th in the 100 freestyle.

Top nine finishers in Tuesday prelims swam in the Wednesday championship finals. Those placing 9-through-16 in the prelims competed in the next-day consolation finals.

Peterson turned in a tenth place 1:02.55 Tuesday in an event led by Kara Fisher of Fergus Falls with a 59.91. Peterson followed that with a 1:03.18 consolation swim. Fisher had a title-winning 59.73 clocking Wednesday.

Helling went 56.20 to place 16th in the prelims and swam 56.33 in the consolation finals. Meghan Weiss of Visitation led the prelims with a 53.71 and won the event with a 52.98 Wednesday.

It was the fifth straight state meet appearance for Helling, a senior, and the fourth consecutive state trip for Peterson, a junior.

Helling was also a state meet entry in the 50 freestyle, but a 27th place 25.79 prelim did not qualify her for a spot in the finals. Megan Geyer of Watertown-Mayer/Delano had a top time of 23.87 in the prelims and a title-winning 23.54 final.

Northland rally falls short

A second half Northland rally fell short Wednesday in a 76-71 men's college basketball loss at Fergus Falls.

The Spartans owned a commanding 45-26 halftime lead, but had to sweat out the Pioneers' comeback that carried into the final minute.

"We played real...cautious in the first half," reported Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "Second half, we got a lot more aggressive on defense, and that led to some turnovers and transition baskets."

The Pioneers were within four points with three minutes remaining when a miss on the Northland end was followed by a Fergus Falls 3-pointer.

"We were on a roll, and had a chance to make it a two-point game right there," noted Nikunen. "Instead, we miss, they hit a three and just like that, it's back to a seven-point spread."

Olufemi Solaja did most of his scoring in the first half and finished with a game-high 23 points for the winners. Byron Ninham netted 16 and freshman Dustin Monsebroten of Marshall County Central contributed 13.

A balanced Northland offense featured Keaton Ousley and Brandon Fontes with 15 points each, Cyrin Shaffer and Cole Peterson 13 apiece and Jawaun Bowman 11.

It was the second win in as many starts for the Minnesota Community College Conference Southern Division Spartans. With the loss, the MCCC Northern Division Pioneers fell to 2-3.

The Pioneers were 29-for-59 from the field (49 percent) and 7-for-9 at the free throw line. The Spartans went 30-for-63 from the floor (48 percent) and 8-for-18 at the line. Fergus Falls finished with a 39-34 rebound edge, but also had more turnovers, 20-18.

Northland plays at Minneapolis Friday night and at Anoka-Ramsey Saturday afternoon.

Spartans' first half lead nets easy win

Fergus Falls built a 21-point halftime lead and coasted to a 66-45 win over visiting Northland Wednesday in women's college basketball.

The Spartans led 40-19 at intermission. The second half was a 26-26 stalemate.

Ashley Ouren of Fergus Falls led all scorers with 12 points. Amber Stirling and Chelsey Fering scored 10 points each for Northland.

"We're not going to win many games scoring 45 points," acknowledged Northland coach Missy Majerus, "but the biggest thing was, we didn't execute defensively."

The loss dropped the Pioneers to 0-3. The Spartans improved to 1-1.

"We had way too many turnovers," pointed out Majerus. "Fergus Falls is a tough place to play anyway, and they played a 1-3-1 half-court trap that really hurt us. We just never really adjusted."

Although the contest matched two Minnesota Community College Conference teams, the Spartans play in the MCCC Southern Division,

Time to study courtrooms in Pennington Co.

Retired Ninth District Judge Dennis Murphy gave Pennington County commissioners a heads-up in his departure letter regarding the possible need to add courtrooms in Pennington County.

Pennington County currently has two courtrooms, one of which is very small. Murphy's letter suggests that this is inadequate to meet future demand, and that they need three jury-trial courtrooms.

Over the years, there has been considerable discussion about windshield time and caseload for judges. The Ninth Judicial District is geographically the largest of the state's 10 judicial districts. It serves 17 counties. While judges are assigned a particular seat, judges may have to travel long distances between courthouses in this district.

At the outset, we should point out that the strategic priorities of Minnesota's judicial branch have been to: improve citizens' access to justice; reform the children's justice system; use technology more effectively; and maintain public trust and confidence. It has done many things to try and address these priorities. In fact, in the Ninth District, retired judges Murphy and Larry Jorgenson worked hard on bringing technology to courtrooms. Yet, concerns and problems regarding windshield time and an increasing caseload persist.

These issues were discussed in a 1998 study sponsored by the League of Women Voters. The study mostly focused on the fact that very few voters know who they're voting for, but the size of this district and windshield time of judges was discussed, as well. And, in March 2001, Northwest Minnesota judges expressed support for $86.6 million to "help the Ninth Judicial District cope with too many cases and too few judges." According to that story, caseloads in the Ninth District had nearly tripled since 1982 and the district was facing a judicial deficit. The district's major criminal case filings increased 191 percent, and major juvenile cases increased 162 percent. Major cases take up about 80 percent of judges' time.

Windshield time and heavier caseloads aren't new problems. The process of changing the way judges are elected isn't new either, but in combination, these issues seem to provide sufficient rationale for reform.

Another issue seems to be security. Many of our small county courtrooms do not have the kind of security jurists and citizens now require. Quite honestly, unless it's a high-profile case, or officials have reason to believe there is a security concern, security is almost nonexistent in our courtrooms.

One way to address the need to allow judges to spend more time with cases, reduce their costs, and improve security, is to regionalize or consolidate courthouses. And why not consolidate courthouses? Instead of having a courthouse in every county seat, why not have one in every three or four counties?

The unfortunate consequence for counties was probably apparent to Pennington County commissioners immediately - more costs. First, building new courthouses or courtrooms is expensive. Secondly, if Pennington County doesn't become a regional seat for the court system, it will have to fork out a lot more money to pay staff to move prisoners, and more money even yet, to house prisoners in communities where the new courthouses are located. And, county commissioners must realize the impact that not being a regional seat for the court systems would have on communities - loss of jobs and influence.

Reform or regionalization of courthouses may not happen tomorrow or five years down the road, but with so much at stake, it would be worth it to be prepared for this and study the concept now.

Wake up, and get used to it!

As winter makes its presence known, snowplow operators and crews will be making roads safe so we can make our appointed rounds. While they are doing an important job for us, it's important to give them enough room to do their job. Minnesota Department of Transportation recommends allowing at least five car lengths between your vehicle and snowplows.

Slow down. Local officials are encouraging motorists to wake up and get used to it. The "it" they are referring to is winter. And as all good Minnesotans know, winter driving is challenging. "It" also means that it's time to get your vehicles ready for winter, and to give yourself more time to reach your destination. More importantly, "it" means it's time to slow down and drive safely.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let's recycle: Give a hoot, don't pollute

To the Editor:

Some of us may recall the wise old owl who would sing his famed jingle during Saturday morning cartoons. As a child, I would sing along with him as I ate the last bowl of Cherrios. When I had finished, I remember how long it took trying to stuff that empty cereal box into the garbage container. Today, I unfold the box, lay it flat, and place it inside a recycling bin. To my amazement, it is actually quicker and easier.

Recycling by definition is the reuse of materials, either pre-consumer or post-consumer that would ordinarily be waste. Recycling has become an intricate part of waste management for most parts of the country. Recycling has numerous benefits. It diverts materials from landfills, reduces the amount of chemicals absorbed into the earth, reduces manufacturing costs and consumption, and often results in savings for participating communities and organizations.

Students at Northland Community and Technical College are supporting the zero waste movement and have set out to educate the public on the importance of and the how and the where of dropping off your recyclables. The city of Thief River Falls has agreed to purchase two new recycling bins that will be placed at Hugo's and SuperOne Foods for your convenience. "So, give a hoot and don't pollute!" Who wants to be a dirty bird, in the city or in the woods? Let's all help keep the city of Thief River Falls looking good. Hoot! Hoot!

A thankful greeting to his second hometown

Dear friends,

I have recently married into a Pennington County family. After seven trips full of genuine hospitality, I thought I'd say thanks to the folks up there with this letter.

A Thankful Greeting to My Second Hometown

When you go to a new place and meet new people, you only have fresh eyes once. All opinions will be measured against those first, passing impressions.

My eyes for Pennington County, though, are fresher than I would have thought, even after a couple of years of weeklong visits here with my new wife. And you people deserve to learn from a recent stranger just what sort of image you project.

Relax. It's not bad. In fact, I've come to count this corner of Minnesota as my own second home.

Ever since I've known her, my wife has been subject to fits of remembrance about home that overtake her in the middle of conversation about something else. Any subject can trigger a vivid memory that takes her back in time and 1,500 miles away from our home in Atlanta, back here to this fertile, flat, cold ground of her growing up. And, when I made a trip with her three months before our marriage, I found the place pretty much as I expected; her descriptions of the countryside had been accurate.

But in describing the people and their ways of getting along, she was limited by the same vocabulary that had served her so well when talking about old churches, short trees and ice fishing. She had never before had to explain the good of the country-and-small-town people of these parts. (Still, she's good with words and surrounds them with the shades of vocal color that reveal her emotional connection.)

What was missing was any way of conveying the plain, human consistency that has served all around here so well since your ancestors arrived in the late 19th century. She knew it, but couldn't say it. The secret hides in the dirt, your blood and the lefse, I guess. Even as you watch your kids grow up and sometimes move away, the feel of the place - as well as its population size - stays much the same. Even in the Ralph Engelstad Arena, the feel of the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center is in the air; even with the new rural address system (197,000th Street, is it?) you just know that one fireman is telling the other one, "Yah, then, just make a left there at Klevgard's granary and it's a little ways on the right. Can't miss it, hey?"

Of course, there are changes. Someday soon there'll probably be as many snowmobiles as deer. And maybe, with these good roads nowadays, there'll even be some pickup trucks that go a whole lifetime without landing in the ditch on the way to church where most of the members are your cousins. Somebody might actually use that runway at the airport for the real jets it was designed for. Farm equipment will soon dial up the satellite and report back to the farmer, "It's too wet to plow, Ole. Better go over to the casino today." Temptations on cable TV will lure young ones away in greater numbers, and new families will average one-and-a-half kids, not two like today. (Or eight like your grandma's.)

Even so, I predict that things will stay much the same around here for centuries more. Partly because of the stubbornness of anyone who would choose to live here, where you should really be born with fur, not just wrapped by some other animal's skin when you're grown.

That stubbornness and the polite habits anybody can see will go a long way to preserving the status quo. But the real peace of tomorrow is to be found in what you don't see around here:

- Drivers, sitting in traffic 12 lanes across, reading War and Peace in hardcover
- Battle casualties in the after-Thanksgiving shopping rush
- Public officials blinking in front of TV lights, explaining that their Vegas vacation wasn't really a bribe
- Public officials being led away in handcuffs (If they're stupid enough to get caught, baling wire is good enough, right?)
- Riding down an interstate in your own funeral serenaded by the honking of annoyed drivers
- $5 cups of coffee

If I'm deluding myself about any of this, don't tell me. We only come around for some holidays and some "quiet time." I don't want to know about the dark edges of the police blotter where names of real criminals are written, or the back door of the rumor mill where minor incidents are reported as social felonies. I'm well aware that there are rotten individuals and bad manners anywhere you go.

It's just that, the way my fresh eyes see it, there aren't that many of those bad types around here. And they are a heck of a lot easier to neutralize because they're easier to spot on the open plains.

Minnesota: Where all children are above average

by Ann Kanner-Roth
Executive Director
Child Care WORKS

Minnesota's status as a leader in quality early childhood education and care has plummeted. A report released by the National Women's Law Center shows that Minnesota has fallen from fourth in the nation in providing access to quality childcare to 40th.

Minnesota used to inspire other states with our early childhood education and childcare assistance policies. Recognizing that these costs are more than a low-income working family budget can accommodate, Minnesota created a partnership between parents, childcare providers, and the state. A founding principle was parent choice - parents could choose the provider and setting most appropriate for their child's needs. The state and parents then shared the costs.

Since 2003, Minnesota has cut more than $200 million from its commitment to help families pay for quality childcare - including $75 million this past legislative session. Mandated parent contributions have increased so much that many parents find them impossible to pay. Ironically, this support for low-income families is financially out-of-reach for those it was intended to help. In the past, a family could qualify for assistance with an income below 75 percent of the state median income (about $42,000 for a family of three). Now only families with income below 45 percent of the state median income (about $27,000 for a family of three) can enter the program. Families desperately needing help don't even qualify. It is true that the lowest income families continue to get assistance until their income reaches about 60 percent of the state median income. But - just like a great party you're not invited to - if you can't get in, does it matter how late the party goes?

The biggest cuts came at the expense of reimbursement rates for providers who care for subsidized children. Rates are frozen at the rate paid in 2001, with only a one-time 1.75 percent increase in January 2006. This might not sound like a big deal, but it's a very big deal for parents. Childcare providers make almost no profit; yet since 2001, heating costs have increased. Rent has increased. Health care costs have increased. In order for these businesses to stay open, providers need to meet their costs. And so, families are asked to pay more. But by definition, these families are low-income. Their only choice is to find less affordable solutions, but at what cost?

An estimated 10,000 low-income children are no longer served by Minnesota's Child Care Assistance Program since the eligibility, co-pay and reimbursement rates policies were changed. We have no idea if their parents were able to find an affordable childcare or pre-kindergarten solution. In fact, we don't know who, if anyone, is watching them while their parents are working.

What we do know is that quality early childhood programs work. According to a study by Art Rolnick and Rob Grunewald of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, low-income children in quality early childhood programs are less likely to need special education, use the juvenile and adult justice systems and need welfare benefits as adults. Quality early childhood programs generate a 16 percent rate of return on investment, 12 percent of which is public return.

A recent Department of Human Services study showed that accredited programs help get kids ready for school and can put all children on an even playing field. That's a great goal for the state to have - starting low-income, at-risk children out in school with the same opportunities. Just ask a kindergarten teacher what it's like to teach when only half of the students are prepared to learn. Even if your child is ready to go, wouldn't that classroom be that much more productive if every child was?

Minnesota now ranks 40th in providing access for low-income children to childcare services - below Mississippi, Wisconsin, and North and South Dakota. In a state where we expect all of our children to be "above average," shouldn't we pay more attention to the kind of educational start our youngest citizens receive? Age 5 is five years too late to start worrying about how our children are going to fare in school and in life.

That Is the Number of Firemen in the Crookston Fire Department

"The statement having been made by a member of the city council to the effect that the Crookston fire department had but fifteen members, and this having been given as one reason why the membership of the local fire department should be reduced from twenty-one to sixteen, Chief C. C. Jackson wrote a letter to J. E. O'Brien of Crookston, and received the following reply:

"'Dear Sir: Replying to your letter, I will say that the fire department has at the present time 22 members, but they require that teams bring the apparatus to the fires and for this purpose the city gives to the first team that responds to an alarm $3, to the second $2 and to the third, $1. Yours truly, J. E. O'Brien.'

"From the above it will be noted that Thief River Falls pays more for teams responding to alarms than does Crookston. This city pays, $5, $3, and $2."

A Genuine Old Blizzard
The Northwest Storm Swept the First of this Week
Passenger Trains Are Greatly Delayed and Freight Traffic Abandoned

"This section was visited the first of the week by one of the worst blizzards ever known in the northwest. The storm started Monday and raged all day Tuesday. A large amount of snow fell and it was blown in drifts by a heavy wind. It did not turn cold until Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, when the storm had abated and this gave the farmers an opportunity to take care of their stock, as the blizzard was the first opening of winter and followed one of the finest falls ever seen.

"The railroads were unprepared for the storm and passenger trains were quite late. No freight trains attempted to run and traffic is blocked more than ever before.

"Tuesday night the Soo passenger, which is due here from Winnipeg at 9:48 did not arrive until 12, and over fifty men with shovels boarded the train at this point. The train got stuck many times between here and Erskine and it was necessary to shovel most of the road.

"The passenger train, which carried the Twin Cities mail and which should have arrived here at 3:10 yesterday morning, did not get to Thief River Falls until late last night."

Water Is Low

"The freeze-up has caused a great deal of trouble to the electric light department. Tuesday night the lights were very poor and last night there were none at all. A big log and ice jam has formed up the river about five miles and until the water breaks through this, there will be more or less trouble. The river here last night was seven feet lower than it usually is and a number of people caught hundreds of fish with their hands down at the dam."

Holiday Nut Sale By Lions Tonight

"Energetic members of the Lions club will conduct a house-to-house canvass of the Thief River Falls residential area this evening (Wednesday) between the hours of 7 and 8 to sell holiday nut assortments, Sig Quam, club president, stated today.

"He stated that the nuts will be sold at a price of one box for $1.25 or two boxes for $2.25. The proceeds of the drive will be used to finance the annual Kiddies Carnival, community Halloween festival and other similar activities.

"Forty or more Lions will start making their rounds following a 6:30 dinner in the Rex Cafe."

Blizzard Closes School Monday

"Pupils in the Thief River Falls public schools, together with those in many other schools in this area, received an unexpected holiday Monday, when classroom sessions were cancelled because of stormy weather and drifting snow, making it impossible for bus drivers to make their rounds in the rural areas. Nearly all schools were again in session Tuesday."

"In former years there was a grand rush to leave town the day the sawmill shut down in the fall, but it was different this year. Nearly all the men who have worked in the mill this year are now residents of the village and very few left here last Saturday."

Old Time Blizzard

"Our nice warm weather came to an end last Saturday morning with a fall of snow and we now have a taste of the old fashioned kind of winter weather. The snow and wind storm of last Tuesday proved a blizzard that will be remembered. It is impossible to state how much snow fell as it drifted badly and it will be some time before the roads are passable. A cold snap came on Wednesday and those who were looking for winter are not disappointed."

Study shows link between radiation therapy and hip fractures

A University of Minnesota Cancer Center study indicates that older women who receive radiation therapy for treatment of pelvic cancers have an increased risk of hip and other pelvic fractures later in life. Researchers encourage such women to talk with their physicians about their risks and preventive measures, including having their bone density levels checked.

Nancy Baxter, M.D., Ph.D., associate professor and researcher at the University of Minnesota Medical School and Cancer Center, led the research team that conducted this study. Their findings along with an editorial about the study will be published in the Nov. 23, 2005 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA).

Baxter and her colleagues used Surveillance, Epidemiology and End Results (SEER) registry data, which is kept by the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and linked to Medicare, to review the records of 6,428 women. These women were age 65 and older when diagnosed with pelvic malignancies between 1986 through 1999. The researchers' purpose was to determine whether women who undergo pelvic radiation therapy for pelvic malignancies including cervical, anal, and rectal cancers have a higher rate of pelvic fracture than women with pelvic malignancies who do not receive radiation therapy.

"We found that women who underwent radiation therapy for anal cancer had a three times greater rate of fractures," Baxter says. "Women who had radiation therapy for rectal and cervical cancer had nearly double the rate of fractures.

"We further found that of the 554 women who developed pelvic fractures, 499, or slightly more than 90 percent, were hip fractures," she adds.

The researchers found no significant difference in the rate of arm and spine fractures between women who received pelvic radiation therapy and those who did not.

"Admittedly, the technology used today and the way radiation therapy is given has improved and is better controlled than in the 1980s and 90s," Baxter says. "Nonetheless, our findings point out a concern that women who undergo radiation therapy for pelvic malignancies and their physicians need to be aware of and take precautions to prevent fractures."

She notes that women over age 50 already have about a 17 percent chance of hip fracture in their lifetime because of osteoporosis, or thinning of the bones, that accelerates after menopause. This fact coupled with radiation therapy for pelvic malignancies could put a woman at significant risk for fractures.

Radiation therapy is a common treatment for cervical, anal, and rectal cancer. While it is a proven, effective treatment, Baxter suggests women who have had or are having radiation therapy for pelvic malignancies talk with their physicians about the procedure and follow-up care aimed at preventing factures, including regular checks of the density levels of their bones.

This study was conducted with grants from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the University of Minnesota Cancer Center. Lead researcher Nancy Baxter, M.D., Ph.D., worked with her University of Minnesota colleagues Beth Virnig, Elizabeth Habermann, and Sara Durham, as well as Joel Tepper, M.D., at the University of North Carolina, to conduct this study.

Education Association honors retirees and Friend of Education

Thief River Falls Education Association honored School District 564 retirees during a ceremony on Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the American Legion.

"These teachers devoted a total of over 100 years of service to the students of our school district," said Cal Lindberg.

Honored retirees were Lois Benson, a kindergarten and second grade teacher at Challenger Elementary School, who had 35 years of teaching experience; Joyce Kopari, a speech therapist at Challenger Elementary School, who had 35 years of experience; and Pete Tri, a fifth grade teacher at Challenger Elementary school, who had 33 years of experience.Tri and Kopari were unable to attend this event, but Retired Teacher Dianna newton, presented Benson with her "School Bell," a special award, and reflected on the many years she taught with Benson.

In addition to honoring retirees, the organization also honored this year's recipient of the "Friend of Education" award - Orin Green. The award was presented to Marge Green.

The award was awarded to Orin Green posthumously, but in honor of his many years of dedication to the students at Challenger Elementary School. Betty Carlson, second grade teacher at Challenger Elementary School, explained that Green spent 11 years volunteering his time on a weekly basis, to help students learn to use computers. "He was a special friend to all the kids who knew him," said Carlson.

Carlson said, Green would often tell her about times that he had seen someone from my class outside of school, and children would tell her of seeing Green outside of class. "They looked forward to his visits each week and missed him when he was gone. Wherever Orin Traveled, he would remember the kids with special souvenirs from places from all around the world. His trips provided the students learning experiences of many faraway places and the gifts he brought were treasures to the kids.

"Orin was truly a kind and giving man who loved people - especially 'little people,'" said Carlson.

Lindberg said one more special gift was presented to Marge. Lindgren explained that David L. Peterson, computer teacher at Lincoln High School, had a daughter in Betty Carlson's class last spring when Orin was killed in an accident. "He knew that the Green's were close friends of ours so he asked if I had a good picture of Orin that he could use to create a memorial of Orin surrounded by Betty and her students. Since Orin often provided one-on-one help to Betty's students in the Challenger computer lab, Dave decided to include Betty and her students surrounded by computers. Dave printed an eight by 10-inch picture for Betty's classroom plus gave Marge and her adult children copies."

Testing preschoolers in TRF helps educators

Preschool tests being used by educators to establish a baseline

by David Hill
Editor

Recognizing that providing a quality childhood education begins with understanding where children are at in their educational process, educators in Thief River Falls are utilizing tests to provide them with a baseline for beginning students' introduction to education. Monday, Nov. 28, Nancy Tofte, director of community education in School District 564, provided the Board of Education with an update on the state of Community Education and Early Childhood Education in the District that began with an examination of test results for pre-school children.

"We use this (the test) as a baseline," said Tofte, who explained the various tests and results. "By no means," she said, "do we expect them to know all of this."

Tests administered this fall measured students' knowledge of such things as letter marking, early math skills, art, identification of visual symbols. They also offered test called Simon Says, which required students to perform certain tasks, such as touching their ear and pointing to the door. This information is then used to help tailor educational plans.

Results of the tests seemed to create a symmetrical curve representing the normal distribution. In the spring, Tofte said, staff are planning to re-test the students. This data will help determine growth and will be shared with parents. Tofte said data from the tests also help identify some students for targeted services. She cautioned that targeted services may simply mean providing the child time to develop socialization skills - skills that help them adjust to participating in larger groups.

Tofte said the children were not stressed out at all about the tests, and in fact, some wanted to keep taking the tests. Tofte said they don't want the students to be stressed out about the tests.

Tofte provided some additional good news in the form of a census report. According to census information they collected for the District, the total number of children, ages 0-4 increased from 818 in 2004-2005 to 842 in 2005-2006.

During the past several years, declining enrollment has created numerous problems for the District.

In Community Education, Tofte reported that Latch Key numbers are high and show no sign of going down. There are about 25 to 30 children in the morning program, but 60 to 70 in the afternoon and early evening program. She noted that some students are there until 6 p.m., which she said, makes for a very long day for the children.

She reported that enrollment in the department's dance class has almost doubled over last year. To meet the demand, they added another class.

Use of the BMX Skate Park showed no change over last year's numbers even though there was no use charge. Tofte speculated on a number of reasons why use was low, but said they will be meeting with

TRF plans Christmas Eve dinner

Christmas is almost here, and Thief River Falls' Community Christmas Dinner is right around the corner.

It's scheduled Saturday, Dec. 24 at 1 p.m. at St. Bernard's Catholic Church in Thief River Falls. The meal includes turkey, dressing and all the fixings. The meal is open to anyone, and freewill donations will be accepted.

As usual, meals will be delivered to people unable to attend the event. Deliveries start at 12 p.m. and continue for about an hour, said Co-Chairperson Tim Loeffler. Reservations must be made in advance, so drivers can be lined up and routes planned.

Given the popularity of the event and that about 325 people were served last year, reservations should be placed with the Thief River Falls Chamber of

TRF notified it should receive funds for hangar

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Thief River Falls leaders have learned the city may receive federal funding for a new hangar at the Thief River Falls Regional Airport. Yet, they and Pennington County leaders are left wondering whether they will ever receive federal funding to remedy drainage problems southeast of Thief River Falls.

The Thief River Falls City Council has yet to discover how much funding the city may receive for a new hangar.

"It's on the high-priority list for any leftover FAA money," said City Administrator Jodie Torkelson about the new hangar. As a result, she said she doesn't know if the airport may receive $3 million or even $1.95 for a new hangar.

If the city received federal funding for a hangar, Torkelson said, it would likely receive additional funding for the estimated $800,000 hangar.

The hangar would be used to store planes owned by Cherry Air Inc., which transports Digi-Key products from the airport.

The city of Thief River Falls, as well as Pennington County, had also hoped to receive federal funding to improve drainage adjacent to County Ditch 1 and Highway 59. That area, which spans approximately three square miles southeast of the city, has had drainage problems for a number of years.

That $2 million project was not included in the water appropriations bill, Torkelson said. She believed the city and county didn't receive the funding due to the ongoing recovery efforts in areas affected by hurricanes earlier this year.

Spread the joy to less fortunate kids

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Pennington County residents will once again spread joy this Christmas season to kids who are less fortunate.

They will share the holiday spirit through Christmas for Pennington County (CPC), an annual countywide program that provides Christmas gifts to less fortunate children who otherwise might not receive them. Residents are also able to donate toys and books through a toy drive for the Violence Intervention Project (VIP).

Those wishing to donate to CPC may choose ornaments from angel trees located at Pamida, Kmart, Arctic Cat and Lori's Hallmark. The ornaments list particular items a child needs. Individuals select and purchase the items, which should be dropped off at those locations or the Law Enforcement Center (LEC) by Friday, Dec. 16.

Auxiliary demonstrates caring spirit

Northwest Medical Center Auxiliary plans to create Caring Room

by David Hill
Editor

Caring for the health and well-being of others is right there in its mission; so, the creation of Caring Rooms at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls has its auxiliary excited and pumped up to meet the challenge.

Carole Glass, president of the auxiliary, said "we're really excited about it."

"We're pumped up, and fired-up," said Bev Rupprecht, the enthusiastic volunteer services coordinator at Northwest Medical Center.

Not since the auxiliary paid for a new bus has its membership been so excited about a project.

Over the years, the auxiliary has participated in numerous worthwhile projects, but they believe that with this project they have an opportunity to have a significant impact on care of patients and their families at Northwest Medical Center.

The auxiliary is envisioning two rooms at the hospital on the second floor in an area known as "med surge." There will be one for the patient who is really sick or experiencing the end stages of life, and another adjacent room for their family.

Northwest Medical Center has waiting rooms, but the auxiliary believes that they don't necessarily meet the needs of families of this type of patient. The wait for these families is quite an ordeal.

"Our experience tells us, that when these families come to the hospital," said Rupprecht, "they move in."

Rupprecht said they bring food along with overnight bags. It's a trying time for the family, said Rupprecht, and they want to be there for the patient.

That's why members of the auxiliary are so excited about creating these two rooms.

The Caring Room concept is all about making the patient and family as comfortable as possible. For that reason, the patient's room will include a bed with a wooden bed frame (no more hospital beds), a bathroom and shower, window treatments, a lift chair, a television, stereo and DVD. The room for family would include a sofa, a couple of recliners, a refrigerator, microwave oven, table, DVD and stereo. A bathroom and shower are included.

Speaking English as a Second Language

S.D. 564 sees a significant increase in ESL student population

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The number of students participating in the English as a Second Language (ESL) program has grown substantially in School District (S.D.) 564, from just eight students in 2001-02 to 40 students in 2005-06. The increase is mainly attributed to an increase in the foreign-born population of Thief River Falls.

Described as a bilingual education program, ESL is intended for the instruction of students with limited English proficiency in the areas of reading, writing, listening and speaking.

Most of S.D. 564's ESL students attend Challenger Elementary School, but older students also participate in the program. Of the programs current enrollment of 40, four students from Lincoln High School and seven students from Franklin Middle School participate.

Most of the district's ESL students speak Spanish as their primary language, but the district's program can be tailored to fit the needs of most students who do not speak English as their primary language. Within S.D. 564, students who speak Bossa (Liberia), Chinese and Flemish (Belgium) are also assisted.

Kate Anderson, S.D. 564 ESL teacher, said the district's ESL curriculum is taught primarily in English. She added that most resources suggest not teaching students in their primary language, because it will slow their vocabulary development.

ESL teachers are often required to communicate with the parents of program participants. That can be a difficult task considering the parents of many participants speak only their native language. ESL educators, like Anderson, are assisted in communicating with parents by the Sherlock computer program that translates English to more than a dozen languages. Using the program, Anderson, or another ESL educator, will type a letter or other notification such as a permission slip in English and the program will translate it into the desired language. In addition, a translator has been present for some face-to-face parent meetings, though Anderson said she has not yet needed one.

Anderson works with students at the elementary and high school levels. Additional staff hired this
